Spanish Hail End of War; 'Hands Off,' Says Franco

Warns Democracies As His Armies Rule Madrid, Advance Without Resistance

By the Associated Press.

Burgos, March 28.—Nationalist Spain tonight celebrated the fall of Madrid as the end of modern Europe's bloodiest civil war which had taken an estimated toll of at least 1,000,000 killed and wounded and an additional "500,000 assassinations."

Ramon Serrano Suner, Gen. Franco's brother-in-law and chief political aide, in a broadcast announcing the fall of Madrid, warned Europe's democracies to "keep their hands off Spain."

The new nationalist Spain, he declared, has a powerful army capable of defending Spain's interests.

Nearly a dozen army corps, he said, including the Italian Littorio division, participated in the occupation of Madrid.

In Burgos tonight all public buildings and most private houses were beflagged in honor of the occasion.

There was a great procession to general headquarters, led by military bands and the archbishops of Burgos and Valencia, and accompanied by a singing throng of soldiers, boys and girls.

From the Madrid radio it was announced that "the red (republican) forces on all fronts are surrendering."

The Toledo army, it was said, had easily taken Aranjuez, 20 miles south of Madrid, and captured 5,000 prisoners there.

The occupation of the town of Adamuz by the Cordoba army also was reported.

Madrid Surrenders

Madrid, March 28 (AP).—Shell-torn Madrid, symbol of republican resistance during 32 months of civil war, passed today into the hands of Nationalist Gen. Franco.

After holding nationalist forces at the edge of the war-weary, hungering capital for nearly 29 months, the central army withdrew from defense lines and hoisted white flags this morning.

The fall of the city was regarded as the virtual end of the savage, destructive conflict which had frightened Europe for so long.

A nationalist spokesman told of sweeping successes in the Madrid, Cordoba and Toledo sectors and said, "we still have a job of work in cleaning up the red forces in the remainder of Spain but it will be a walk-over."

He said 40,000 prisoners were taken in those three areas, and that "the troops are finding resistance hardly anywhere."

Franco's triumphant troops marched into Madrid early in the afternoon. Not a shot was fired.

Republicans Vanish

The famous Nationalist "Fifth Column"—Gen. Franco's underground organization in Madrid—hardly had come into the streets to lead the shouts for Franco after the announcement of the capital's capitulation, before the dispirited, half-starved citizenry took up the cry.

Hysteria at the prospect of food and an end to the bloody, punishing war soon brought hundreds of thousands of bedraggled men, women and children tumbling into the Puerto del Sol, Paseo Recoletos, Gran Via and other broad boulevards.

They danced, sang, shouted.

A long, unbroken line of food trucks rolled into the conquered capital to feed the nearly 1,000,000 persons who had been existing for about two years on a few grams daily of food rations—but had persisted in staying in Madrid.

Some republican militiamen cowered in the doorways early in the day, but by noon the city was delirious at the prospect of peace.

Nationalist flags magically appeared.

Warship Captures French Steamer

London, March 28 (U.P.).—Lloyd's Radio Station on the Isle of Wight reported tonight that at 10:55 p. m. it picked up from the French steamer Ploubazlanec this message: "We have been hailed by a war vessel which is compelling us to accompany her. Position 39.27 north, 0.12 west."

This position is just off the Spanish coast about 30 miles north of Valencia.

Ambassador de los Rios leaving White House yesterday

De Los Rios Makes No Plans for Self; Hull Gathers Information to Weigh Recognizing Franco; Embargo's End Predicted

By Edward T. Folliard

As his loyalist government in Spain disappeared yesterday, Ambassador Fernando de los Rios held a long conference with President Roosevelt. Leaving the White House, the short, bearded diplomat said that he and the President had discussed the "refugee problem."

Earlier in the day, Secretary of State Hull answered a question about American recognition of Gen. Franco's regime by saying that all available facts concerning Spain were being assembled before any decision is reached.

Ambassador de los Rios said he had no plans for immediate abandonment of the handsome Spanish Embassy on Sixteenth street.

"An ambassador doesn't make plans," he said, smilingly. "They are made for him."

The Ambassador's friends expect him to remain in the United States and join the coterie of exiles who are teaching. A noted scholar, one-time minister of education in Spain, Don Fernando lectured at Columbia University in 1928. His 24-year-old daughter, Laura, now is an instructor of Spanish at Wellesley College.

Two weeks ago nine members of the de los Rios clan arrived in New York, including the Ambassador's 82-year-old mother, his sister-in-law, two nieces and five nephews.

De los Rios' successor here—assuming that the nationalist government is recognized—probably will be Juan Francisco de Cardenas, Gen. Franco's agent in New York.

Hungary Calls More Men in Border War

Negotiations With Slovakia Broken Off, Fighting Resumed

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, March 28.—Hungary called more men to the colors and requisitioned automobiles and other supplies today after Hungarian-Slovak boundary negotiations were broken off and fighting was resumed along the disputed frontier between Slovakia and Carpatho-Ukraine, acquired a fortnight ago by Hungary.

Slovak negotiators left Budapest without reaching an agreement. They took back to Bratislava, their capital, a Hungarian "solution" of the problem which, informed sources said, was presented to the Slovaks virtually as an ultimatum.

Diplomatic circles believed the Bratislava government would be given a few days to consider the proposal, but as reports of continued fighting reached this capital an immediate push was considered possible.

Hungarian accounts said the fighting today consisted of Slovak attacks, which were repulsed. Artillery engagements occurred in the Laborc River valley. At least two Hungarians were reported killed. The Hungarian command said its guns had silenced a Slovak battery near the village of Kiskolon.

Details of the Hungarian proposal were not disclosed, but diplomats conjectured that Hungarian demands extended at least 50 miles west of the Carpatho-Ukraine border.

Propaganda Minister Goebbels of Germany arrived in Budapest today. Although the visit was described as informal, considerable importance was attached to it in diplomatic circles.

Berlin Warns Poles Against Joining Allies

Admonished Not to Work Toward Stopping German Expansion

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 28.—Nazi Germany raised an admonishing finger today against any inclination of Poland to join British and French efforts to keep Germany from expanding further.

A pointed article in the foreign office mouthpiece Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz advised the Poles to stick to their policy of collaborating with Germany as laid down by the late Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, and not to listen to "foreign sirens" lest the result not be "advantageous"

The Polish foreign minister, Col. Joseph Beck, is expected to go to London next week.

The Korrespondez said Reichsfuehrer Hitler considered "a strong Polish nation" a necessity for order in eastern Europe and added that "responsible quarters in Poland certainly will not overlook the country's special geographical position that up to now has dictated their policy of independently—and this without tension—striving to keep good neighborly relations in all directions.

"It is a question whether a departure from this line would work out advantageously."

In Warsaw, German Ambassador von Moltke called on Beck tonight and held a conversation later described as "conciliatory." Moltke was reliably said to have assured Beck that reports that Germany had demands to make on Poland were "absurd."

Poland, fearful of German expansion, has made what officials describe as "all necesary military preparations."

Roosevelts to Meet Britain's Monarchs at Union Station

President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt will meet King George VI and Queen Elizabeth at Union Station on June 8, it was announced yesterday.

So far as State Department officials know, it will be the first time an American President has gone to the terminal to greet a foreign visitor.

The arrangement insures a thrill for the thousands who are expected to line the route to the White House on the day the British monarch and his queen arrive.

Their 12-car special train is scheduled to get into Union Station shortly before the luncheon hour.

Secretary of State Hull, it was made known yesterday, will meet the royal couple at the Canadian border and escort them to Washington.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, was a caller at the White House yesterday, and it was assumed that it was in connection with the visit of the King and Queen.

British Bid Reported for War Allies

Military Assistance Offered Rumania, Poland if They Join Bloc, London Hears

Special Cable to The Post.

London, March 28.—Persistent and authoritative reports circulated tonight to the effect that Great Britain is preparing to take leadership in formation of an outright military alliance with France, Poland, Rumania and, less probably, Soviet Russia.

The reports were given further credibility by a statement from Prime Minister Chamberlain in Commons that he was "actively continuing" efforts for an anti-dictator front, and that his plans went "a good deal further" than mere consultation.

Chamberlain pleaded diplomatic necessity for secrecy in withholding details of his negotiations, but disclosed his government had "made perfectly clear to other governments just what it is prepared to do under certain circumstances."

Aid Offered Rumania, Poland

Reliable diplomatic observers interpreted this to mean immediate British military support had been offered Rumania and Poland, under certain conditions, which reports said were:

That both Poland and Rumania should themselves fight in the event of a German attack on their territory;

That Poland and Rumania should be prepared to fight for each other, and

That both powers should agree to fight Germany if Germany marched west against Britain and France.

In return, diplomats said, Britain would make separate agreements with Warsaw and Bucharest, binding herself to fight on their behalf if need be. Official confirmation was lacking, but the British government was said to be awaiting a reply from Warsaw.

May Invite Russia Later

The Daily Mail's diplomatic correspondent said the projected alliance also would act if Holland or Switzerland were attacked. The Mail said Russia is not being sought at present "as a partner in the contemplated alliance" but, with other nations, may be invited to join later.

The Daily Mail's political correspondent said "Well-informed persons say that British assistance will take the form of (1) a fast output of arms and munitions, (2) a powerful navy capable of completely blockading Germany by sea, (3) a formidable air force to operate wherever it is required, and (4) a small mobile mechanized expeditionary force."

Another version said the proposed alliance would include Britain, France, Poland and Russia, and that the four signatories would take immediate action for mutual defense if any one were attacked. This version added that in case of attack on Belgium, Holland, Switzerland or Lithuania, the allied powers would consult before acting.

Materiel From Russia

The same sources said Britain and France were considering a plan whereby an attack by Germany on Poland or Rumania would not call for immediate military support from Russia, but only for assistance with

Japanese Take Wuning After Night Attack

Shanghai (Wednesday), March 29 (AP).—Japanese today reported the capture of Wuning, 65 miles northwest of Nanchang, after assault troops encircled the town in darkness and then forced all gates at day break.

Chinese had fought a rearguard action at Wuning after the fall of Nanchang, reported by Japanese Monday.

It was stated, "several divisions" of Chinese were trapped northwest of Nanchang.

In Nanchang itself, Japanese said, fires set by Chinese troops before they left the city were subsiding. Five Americans and several other foreigners were believed to be in the city.

G.O.P. Asks Merit Tests Open to All

Delays Bill Which Would 'Cover in' Federal Workers To Civil Service

Republican demands that all jobs covered into the civil service system be thrown open to competitive examination slowed House Civil Service Committee action yesterday on the Ramspeck civil service bill, designed to extend the merit system throughout the Federal service.

Meanwhile the Senate unanimously approved the conference report on the Administration's Government reorganization bill, empowering the President to recommend merging and elimination of bureaus.

The reorganization report will be called up in the House today for final action, and before nightfall is expected to be sent to the President for signing.

Baruch Called

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, called daily meetings of his House committee on the civil service measure, which was not included in the reorganization program. Ismar Baruch, chief of the personnel classification division of the Civil Service Commission, was called before the committee today to testify on proposed extension of the classification act to field service employes.

A demand by Representative Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, and other committee Republicans, that jobs covered into the Civil Service by the Ramspeck bill be thrown open to competition outside threatened to prolong consideration of the bill.

Employes May Testify

Ramspeck said he may ask representatives of Government employe organizations to testify on the Republican proposal. The organizations as a group are known to oppose the change.

As now drafted the bill would direct heads of Federal agencies outside the civil service to certify employes now in their units, who would then take "noncompetitive" examinations to hold office in the agency under proposed civil service status.

As against this proposal, Mrs. Rogers said she will offer an amendment to open the examination to all, on a competitive basis. Under that plan, employes of an affected agency would have to compete with contestants outside the Government service, and if they made lower grades, their jobs would go to the successful outsiders.

Mitchell Against Exams

Chairman Harry B. Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission, recently testifying before the committee, opposed the competitive examination method and favored the "noncompetitive" method in the Ramspeck bill. Mitchell said it would cost the Government millions to conduct general examinations for the jobs.

Both Mitchell and L. A. Moyer, executive director and chief examiner of the Civil Service Commission, favored the Ramspeck bill as now drafted.

The measure discards the single civil service administrator proposal included in the President's original reorganization plan, and maintains intact the three-member bipartisan Civil Service Commission.

Permissive in character, the bill authorizes the President to cover

Cold Rain Today Won't Damage Cherry Blossoms

Jolted by a Weather Bureau forecast of continued cold and rain today, with a low of 36 degrees, Cherry Blossom Festival officials yesterday went into a huddle at the District Building but emerged reassured.

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, reported indication of rainy, warm weather Friday and that, anyway, it would take a drop of 20 degrees to check the rapidly blooming trees at the Tidal Basin.

A sudden turn to warmer temperature would bring out the buds en masse tomorrow, Kelly said. The Festival opens Friday at 7 a. m. and will continue through April 9.

2 Bars Sawed At District Jail

Authorities last night revealed two partially sawed bars were discovered in a surprise "shakedown" at the District Jail following reports of an attempted break.

Prisoners, it was said, were aroused late Monday night and guards and inspectors "combed" the cells and bunks.

House Kills 250 Million Parity Plan, 204-191, Then Passes Farm Bill

Roosevelt Asks Export Subsidy to Move 8,000,000 Bales of Cotton

In an effort to solve the cotton surplus problem and recapture lost markets for this price-pegged commodity, President Roosevelt yesterday proposed the following far-reaching program:

An export subsidy for cotton similar to that now applicable to wheat, involving payment to farmers of $1.25 a bale to release cotton from Government loan and a flat subsidy to cotton exporters of 1 to 2 cents a pound.

Import quotas on cotton textile goods to prevent backwash of exported cotton in the form of manufactured products and to protect domestic manufacturers in the home market.

A compensatory subsidy—since the raw cotton subsidy would not apply to cotton consumed in this country—to domestic manufacturers of cotton goods in order that they would not be at a disadvantage in competing in foreign markets.

Hull Hints Conflict

Secretary of State Hull, in a highly unusual comment on the President's announcement, intimated that it was at variance with the State Department's reciprocal trade agreement program.

Hull said that if and when the President and the Secretary of Agriculture decide a particular situation requires temporary emergency treatment, the State Department cheerfully recognizes and acquiesces in the conclusion.

He pointed out, however, that the department's attitude in support of the reciprocal trade agreement program was well known. The department, he declared, is earnestly carrying the program forward and will continue to do so.

In announcing the cotton subsidy plan, Mr. Roosevelt emphasized that it was "in no sense a repudiation of the reciprocal trade programs." He added:

"If the spirit behind these trade programs had prevailed in the post-war era it would not be necessary now to take steps to protect our export markets. The reciprocal trade programs are an effort to restore order out of the chaos prevailing in international trade. They should be pressed vigorously."

Subsidy Increase Killed

While the President was making public his cotton export plan, strong opposition to the subsidy program, broke out in Congress.

The House rejected, by a vote of 195 to 98, an amendment to the billion-dollar Agriculture Department bill to appropriate $60,000,000 for subsidizing foreign exports of agricultural commodities and to develop domestic markets. The amendment specified that not more than $15,000,000 could be used to aid any one commodity.

The $60,000,000 would have been in addition to an estimated $90,000,000 from customs receipts which will be available under existing law.

At the same time, Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, after hearing reports that the President and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace were preparing a cotton subsidy plan, offered a resolution which would put the Senate on record against any plan which entailed sales abroad at prices below the current market.

The cotton subsidy proposal, it is understood, would necessitate payment of a subsidy of 1 or 2 cents a pound to all exporters of cotton. This subsidy would be a flat rate, in contrast with the varying subsidy for wheat, which has ranged from 10 to 25 cents a bushel.

Payment of a subsidy is permissible under existing law.

Import quotas, the President declared, would not violate terms of

Dewey-Taft Favored Over Garner-Farley

G. O. P. Pair Preferred As a Ticket by 52% Of Those Questioned

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, March 28.—There is considerable foundation for the growing confidence of the Republican Party that, after eight years of political eclipse, it may be able to turn the tables on the New Deal and elect a President in 1940.

GEORGE GALLUP

With the election still 18 months away, a cross-section survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion shows that, at the present time, a bare majority of all voters with opinions say they would like to see the Republicans win the Presidency. A similar majority also says that if it came to a race between a Republican ticket composed of Thomas E. Dewey and Senator Robert A. Taft, and a Democratic ticket headed by John N. Garner and James A. Farley, they would be inclined to vote for Dewey and Taft.

The division of sentiment is close, and many factors, notably the state of prosperity at election time, could alter it. The slight preference for Republicans at this time does not even indicate that they can win. But the fact that about half of the voters today say they would like to see the G. O. P. win, whereas less than 40 per cent voted Republican in 1936, is one indication that the Republican Party symbol is once more regaining some of its popular appeal.

The first question in the survey asked a cross-section of voters in all parties: "Which party would

South Wins in Rockville War On Placing Clock With Statue

The Civil War was refought and the Confederacy was victorious last night in Rockville, Md.

Time can march on, residents of Rockville agreed, but not in the same courthouse square where the bronze figure of a Confederate soldier has stood guard for decades.

Fighting words have been exchanged in Rockville this week as the Marylanders debated erection of a 16-foot, four-faced clock tower on the same small plot occupied by the Southern infantryman's statue.

The $2,300 timepiece, gift to the town of the late Walter Brownley, Washington confectioner, was delivered to Rockville Saturday. Crated it lay on its side in the courthouse square as 75 citizens last night met in Rockville Firehouse to decide on a suitable location.

Tenseness of civic feeling was swiftly revealed as Mayor Douglas Blandford, who has advocated the courthouse plot for the clock, told

Economy-City Blocs Combine to Slash Billion-Dollar Measure a Third

(Roll Call on Farm Bill, Page 6.)

By Robert C. Albright.

In an unscheduled economy raid the House last night slashed $250,000,000 for farm parity payments from the largest farm bill in history and thundered down another $60,000,000 for farm marketing aids.

The unbudgeted $250,000,000 farm parity price fund was stricken from the bill by a 204 to 191 roll call vote after urban members joined forces with a bi-partisan economy coalition.

The closely cropped bill was passed without a record vote and sent to the Senate, where an effort will be made to restore the farm payments. The economy drive pruned the measure from $1,067,000,000 to $817,000,000.

Trade on WPA Failed

Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, bill manager and author of the parity price amendment, blamed the cut on "resentment" of city members who have been urging farm bloc support for the President's $150,000,000 WPA appropriation.

Representative Sabbath (Democrat), of Illinois, a leader of the "big city" block, gleefully accepted responsibility. He estimated that from 30 to 40 city members voted "no" on the parity proviso "because we felt we didn't have a chance to get approval of the full $150,000,000 relief fund."

Sabbath said if farm members show they "are willing to be fair and co-operate in relieving the needy unemployed" the urban group later may support the parity outlay.

Relief Prospects Dim

But the immediate effect of the cut was to anger farm members and to dim any Administration hope that the full relief figure will be voted when the House Appropriations Committee meets today.

Jubilantly hailing the $250,000,000 slash as "the best job Congress has done this session," Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, House economy bloc leader, said it shows "Congress is willing to legislate in terms of orderly procedure."

A committee move early this week by Woodrum to eliminate the parity provision from the bill had failed on a tie vote, while a farm parity opponent was temporarily absent from the room.

Four Other Economy Tests

Throughout yesterday's long session the parity proposal had encountered rough going. Once it was stricken from the bill on a point of order by Representative Taber (Republican), New York. It was immediately reoffered by Cannon in revised form, and on a teller vote was approved by the close count of 175 to 171. This was later reversed on the roll call, demanded by Taber.

In four other tests, House economy sentiment was militantly demonstrated.

Chairman Jones of the House Agriculture Committee, vainly sought to add $60,000,000 to the bill, in addition to the $90,000,000 already authorized from customs receipts, to develop relief, domestic and foreign export outlets for all surplus commodities. Closely akin to the President's export subsidy proposal, which was limited to cotton, the unbudgeted Jones amendment was defeated, 195 to 98.

Once the House voted to strike out the $31,950,230 total for finance

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Aboard S. S. Lurline, March 28.

I am still conscious of a sense of unreality as I think (while shaving, of course) of the giant 16-inch gun which Gen. Herron and Maj. Pettigrew of the Intelligence Corps kindly arranged to have demonstrated for me out in the suburbs of Honolulu . . . Even as I watched the big barrel point its impassive snout out over the blue Pacific I felt like pinching myself.

Gen. Herron . . . demonstrated

The stalwart captain in charge of the gun told me it could be aimed accurately at the vital parts of a battleship out of sight beyond the horizon more than 25 miles away—he told me the exact distance it will shoot, but that's a secret. But it would be like trying to shoot a cannon on the White House lawn and trying to hit Bancroft Hall at Annapolis.

Such big guns for coastal defense used to be built to recoil and disappear into a concrete-lined excavation, to confuse the enemy marksmen rolling around on the warships offshore, but this is now regarded as a useless refinement. If a big shell or airplane bomb landed too near it, the disappearing act wouldn't help any.

"—no disappearing act"

But the gun is well camouflaged in a dense patch of woods, and the captain felt that his chances of potting a battleship 25 miles out were three or four times as good as the chance that a battleship tossing around on the wild sea waves could pot him. He seemed sublimely confident about this.

* * * *

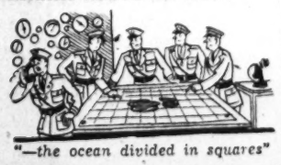
The captain and his crew of a dozen men handled the $2,000,000 gun more easily than I can handle a shotgun; they could point it almost straight up (for maximum range) or tilt it this way or that or revolve it from side to side with a simple twist of the wrist.

* * * *

But they weren't really doing the aiming, there out in the open, not actually, despite all their airy raising and lowering and spinning of that menacing big barrel. That was being done in a great six-room dugout a block or two away, bomb-proof and gas tight, by a group of scientific young men who reminded me of the draughtsmen in an architect's office.

* * * *

The captain took me in for a look at them, across the white coral sand through the thick shrubbery. There they were, more like a bunch of white-collar workers, with their charts and their round tables, in touch with the gun and with 11 high observation posts by telephone and electrical controls and dials.



"—the ocean divided in squares"

I've forgotten what little I learned at engineering school, but it was vaguely understandable how the men in the control dugout get the readings on the offshore targets by phone from the hilltop lookouts, how they plot these out with long swinging mechanical arms on the charts on the round tables on which every 1,000 square yards of ocean around the island of Oahu is a half inch square.

* * * *

Then they don't rely on merely phoning this data to the gun crew out in the brush; they record it on dials inside the dugout which are linked with dials mounted on the gun, so there can be no mistake . . . This gun can shoot 250 rounds before it's worn out; in that many shots the captain felt he could sink almost any fleet that might show up off Honolulu. (In peace time the gun fires only fourteen $800 rounds every three years.)

With Russia slowly watching the German guns approaching her western frontiers, she is not so apt to occupy Japan's attention on the Pacific, and this in turn may leave Japan free to get even more rambunctious in these blue waters . . But this captain seems confident that no fleet could ever get past his big guns and the fleet and airplane bases it helps protect. Nevertheless, all this still seems unreal—under the palm fronds. Yet quite solid and substantial, too. Yet you can have a great time in Honolulu without ever being conscious of the guns. All in all, I prefer the leis and the alohas.

Use U. S. Ships, Adm. Land Urges

Philadelphia, March 28 (I.N.S.).—Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman the United States Maritime Commission, tonight appealed to the Nation to aid the revival of the Merchant Marine by "traveling and shipping under the American Flag."

Before the Port of Philadelphia Maritime Society, Land declared that rehabilitation of the American Merchant Marine is definitely under way, but that not over 30 per cent of America's foreign trade and passengers are carried in American vessels.

Settle Down, President Tells TrailerNomads

U. S. Won't Tolerate 300,000 Migrants Forever, He Says

President Roosevelt warned yesterday that the country would not always tolerate a condition in which automobiles roam the country wagging between 300,000 and 400,000 people in trailers behind them.

These modern nomads, the President predicted, one day will be forced to drop anchor somewhere. This will come, he believed, in the lifetime of persons now living.

He disclosed that proposals for action are already in the study stage. There is a feeling among students of social problems, he said, that all people should have a home somewhere.

His statement would also apply to gypsies, who until the trailer age had pretty much of a monopoly on the nomad business, but he made no express reference to them.

California Problem Studied

The President, in a press conference, disclosed that he had forwarded to Representative Elliott (Democrat), California, an interdepartmental report recommending an emergency and long-term program for dealing with interstate migration into California. Elliott is chairman of a California commission dealing with this situation.

The report proposes legislation to resettle transients now in California and other areas who can become self-supporting where they are; return of persons willing to go back where they came from, and resettlement of other migrants in places where employment may be found suitable to their capabilities.

The report recommended the United States Employment Service disseminate information on employment possibilities in California to discourage further migration to that State.

Atwood Speaks To Underwriters On Monopoly Quiz

The recent monopoly investigation covering insurance companies was discussed yesterday by Albert W. Atwood, Washington editorial expert of the Saturday Evening Post, at a luncheon meeting of the District Life Underwriters Association in the Willard Hotel.

"It is impossible," he said, "for life insurance companies to grow to their present size without an inevitable tendency to a perpetuation of officer personnel. No institution should go unchallenged all the time. All organization tends to become bureaucratic if not sharply called to account at intervals. And there seems to have been an opportunity to 'resell' the public on life insurance every generation or so—as following the Hughes investigation, the war, the flu epidemic, the War Risk Insurance and now the monopoly inquiry and possibly the social security act. Life insurance has met and profited from these tests in the past and I am confident the present will be no exception."

Boycott German Goods, Green Asks All U. S. Citizens

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor last night appealed to all citizens of the United States to join in an iron-clad boycott of German-made goods.

Green, in an address over a Columbia Broadcasting System network under auspices of the American Council Against Nazi Propaganda, protested against the annexation of Austria and the partition of Czecho-Slovakia.

He said that the year-old A. F. of L. boycott on products of the Third Reich has been extended "effectively."

"One can scarcely comprehend the effect upon the economic situation in Germany," he said, "if all classes of people in our country unite thoroughly and wholeheartedly in employing a boycott . . ."

'Beauty' to Prove Favoritism in Bureaus Promised Today by Ellender in 'Czar' Inquiry

Senator Allen Ellender, chairman of the Senate committee investigating the Civil Service Commission, questions feminine employes of the Bureau of Navigation, Navy Department. Left to right—Helen Hess, Betty Meininger, Senator Ellender, Mary Friend and Agnes M. Gallagher

Exactly four hours were required yesterday to unravel Government red tape that bound the case of Miss Mary E. North, a Navy Department brunette who told the Senate committee investigating civil service a story of 20 years' work without reward and a letter of reprimand for her that never came.

Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, conducting the investigation of "petty czarism" in the service, finished the first day of exhibit cases with Miss North and promised that a "beauty" would take the stand today to prove that some favored employes are jumped in the grades in the Postoffice Department while others are left to stagnate.

Nothing tangible resulted from hearing of Miss North's case other than the expressions of incredulity that momentarily passed across the Louisiana Senator's face, something that reacted once in a question: "Who are the big cheeses that see to the promotions?"

Worked 20 Years

The case boiled down finally to this: Miss North had worked for 20 years in the Navy Department and last summer, as a stenographer in the Chaplain's Office, Bureau of Navigation, was performing some work—as an outside endeavor—for a Navy relief auxiliary fund. She was asked to attend to the financial ends of the work, and declined on the grounds of the responsibility and the extra load of work entailed.

She was later recommended for reprimand by Edward Henkel, the Bureau chief clerk. Her efficiency rating, she alleged, dropped from excellent. So Miss North sought an appeal for reallocation from grade 3 to grade 4. The chaplain recommended her. At the chief clerk's office a row ensued over the form of the document her appeal should be made on. She went to Senator Ellender, and he asked the Civil Service Commission what Miss North should do.

She might appeal to the Civil Service Commission, came the reply. This she did. While this was pending, the chief of the bureau, Vice Admiral Adolphus Andrews, passed along the letter of reprimand to the Secretary of the Navy, alleging insubordination on the part of Miss North for having taken her appeal directly to the commission.

Gone to Sea

To a question of where is Admiral Andrews, from Ellender, Navy Department witnesses said he had gone to sea. From both Henkel, who has been in the department 42 years, and Charles Piozet, the Navy's director of civilian personnel, came the information that the Secretary of the Navy had declined to sign the letter of reprimand and the observation that they did not know why action was withheld.

Ellender demanded to know why such a letter should be circulating and no trial held. He sent a clerk for William D. Bergman, chief clerk of the Navy Department, and after a quick trip across town, Bergman appeared to make a stiff military bow to Ellender and observe that "the Secretary just didn't care to go through with it."

He said he would "say from the housetops that the Navy Department is not interested in keeping people from getting promotions." Henkel, earlier, had said emphatically that "absolutely no favoritism is shown in the Bureau of Navigation."

Presses Piozet on Promotions

And earlier still, Ellender had pressed Piozet about the nature of a personnel director's duties and about the situation of promotions. The Senator read a lengthy list of names, some of whom had advanced in grades and some of whom had not. He asked why this should be. Henkel replied that it is a situation difficult of cure. Lack of funds is an important cause of promotion troubles, he said. They should automatically get the pay when they acquire grade; but right now the bureau's work has increased so that most of the funds are used for the work and but little on the promotions. They have tried to promote from within, he added.

Then, at the last, Miss North told of her case and a debate ensued between Ellender and the Navy personnel men over what kind of form Miss North should have filled out for her appeal, and which, if this had been done, would have prevented the whole involvement. For it was the faulty filling in of a form that caused the first difficulties with the chief clerk and brought the abortive letter of reprimand, they said. Ellender said the Civil Service Commission should do something about such a puzzling document.

G.O.P. Attacks Housing Bill As Loaded Dice

Minority Report Scores Adding $1,000,000,000 To Mortgage Loans

Four Republican members of the House Banking Committee contended yesterday that under a bill amending the national housing act "the Government would continue to play loaded dice with $1,000,000,000 more capital."

In a report filed with the House they said the "worst thing about this bill is that it keeps the Government in the real estate mortgage business for two years more."

The measure, approved last week by the banking committee, raises from $3,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000 the amount of mortgage insurance the Federal Housing Administration may have outstanding.

The bill repeals a section of the law which authorized insurance of mortgages on new, multi-family dwellings ranging between $16,000 and $200,000, but leaves intact another provision for insurance of mortgages up to $5,000,000 on larger apartment structures.

The four Republicans, Representatives Luce and Gifford, of Massachusetts; Miller, of Connecticut, and Simpson, of Pennsylvania, contended the latter provision likewise should have been eliminated. They said:

"We are greatly concerned with the probable losses to be sustained by the Government on the large units insured. It has been demonstrated that the 20 per cent equity supposedly furnished consists of startling writeups of land values, fees and costs of financing allowed by the Federal Housing Administration.

"These buildings are too often erected in places already overbuilt and where there is no need of further housing. The promoters are too often actuated by hope of profit in the construction alone.

"Subcontractors seem to make estimates too high to obtain the mortgage insurance. It is probably impossible for Federal Housing Administration supervisors to refute these estimates.

"According to the testimony of the administrator, great pressure has been brought upon him to approve these projects. On the other hand, real estate boards and chambers of commerce protest that their effect on real estate in general is demoralizing."

On Capitol Hill

Representative Barton (Republican), of New York, estimated in a statement yesterday that business had made a net gain of $11,322,000,000 because President Roosevelt had taken so many trips.

BARTON

He said he had checked stock market changes during the 47 times the President has been absent from Washington since he took office.

Taking averages of 90 representative stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange, he said an average gain or loss of 1 point meant about $40,000,000. He

"The 27 absences of the President represented by five Florida fishing trips and 22 Hyde Park trips netted a gain of 42.6 points, or $14,484,000,000.

"The 20 speaking trips netted a loss of 9.3 points, or $3,162,000,000.

"Making a net gain by having the President away from Washington of $11,322,000,000."

"It seems . . . that when the President goes away and lets the country alone the people are better off."

Coinage Group Acts to Renew Money Powers

Committee Votes 10-7 To Extend President's Gold, Silver Authority

By the Associated Press.

The House Coinage Committee virtually agreed yesterday on a bill to continue the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, the President's power to alter the old content of the dollar and the Treasury's authority to purchase domestic silver.

Chairman Somers (Democrat), New York, said an amendment to strike out provisions for continuing the power to devalue the dollar and to buy domestic silver was defeated by a 10 to 7 vote.

No motion was made, Somers said, against the stabilization fund.

The committee will meet again Monday for a final vote, the chairman asserted, adding that yesterday's action virtually settled the issues involved.

One change approved by the committee would continue the monetary powers until June 30, 1941, instead of January 15, 1941, as proposed originally in the bill.

Pay Tax Ruling Revives Issue Of Bond Levies

Roosevelt Says Court Has Gone but a Fifth Of Way on His Program

By the Associated Press.

Appeals for action at this session of Congress on President Roosevelt's proposal to tax the income from future issues of government securities came from a Treasury official and influential Senators yesterday as a result of the Supreme Court's decision ending income tax immunity for public employes.

The pleas revived an issue many legislators had considered dead for the session since representatives of State governments had protested against taxing income from their securities.

President Roosevelt said he was delighted over the salary tax decision as a very definite step toward carrying out his recommendation that exemption from taxation of the income from future issues of Federal, State and municipal bonds be removed.

Treasury Urges Extension

However, he said the court ruling, from a dollars and cents point of view, only went one-fifth of the way under his tax program, adding a hope the other four-fifths of the way—taxation of all Government securities—would be attained.

A Treasury official told reporters the court's decision declaring State and Federal governments could tax incomes of one another's employes had implied that interest on State and local bonds also was subject to Federal taxation, although it did not say as much specifically.

Therefore, the official added, Congress should adopt the President's recommendation for Federal taxation of such income.

Salary Tax Up Monday

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, chairman of a Senate Finance sub-committee which investigated and approved Mr. Roosevelt's suggestions for reciprocal taxation of both public salaries and the income from public securities, announced he would confer with Administration leaders soon in an effort to pass legislation achieving both objectives. "If you can tax the salaries, you can tax the securities," commented Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska.

The House already has passed a bill for Federal taxation of income of State and local government employes, and the full Senate Finance Committee has approved legislation limited to this phase of the question.

Majority Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, said the salary tax bill might come up for action in the Senate Monday. Senator Brown indicated he would offer an amendment to cover securities if Administration leaders were agreeable.

The Treasury announced, meanwhile, its intention to tax salaries of State and local governmental employes as a result of the court's decision.

The tax probably will begin with this year's income and be payable on March 15, 1940.

The Treasury official, in commenting on the Supreme Court decision, said his department's position regarding it was as follows:

"The decision removes all doubt as to constitutionality of taxing governmental salaries."

Why Be A SLAVE To A Steering Wheel?

NO DOUBT you have memories of the Japanese Cherry Trees in bloom, the Lincoln Memorial, the Monument, the broad river, the Virginia hills peeping with green in the background.

Shining pages but darkened here and there with visions of the struggle you entered into when you drove your auto around the Tidal Basin and through streets nearby.

Why again go through such an unnecessary ordeal? This year ride a Capital Transit bus or street car in safety, in comfort, when it suits your convenience.

Buses of our Hains Point line, with its uptown terminus just south of the Treasury, will carry you to the trees without your having to give a thought to driving. Round trip 25c; no transfers. Free stopover at the Basin if you wish. Frequent service.

Bear in mind also that 14th Street cars of Route 50, Bur. Engraving run direct to Maine Avenue, a few steps from the trees. Regular fare, free transfers, frequent service.

When you make your Cherry Tree pilgrimage this spring, see the scenery. Go Capital Transit and enjoy your trip.

Why be a slave to a clutch and a steering wheel?

Senate Bill Bars Labor Spies, Strikebreakers

La Follette, Thomas Are Authors; Wagner Act Hearing April 11

Strikebreakers, labor spies and industrial munitions would be outlawed in a bill introduced in the Senate yesterday as the climax of more than two years of investigations by the Civil Liberties Committee.

Sponsored by Senators La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, the measure would also severely restrict the use of private armed guards by industrial plants.

Labor Act Hearing April 11

Meanwhile, the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, whose chairman is Senator Thomas, set April 11 as the opening date for hearings on amendments to the national labor relations act.

Overriding previously expressed objections of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the committee unanimously agreed to commence hearings in two weeks, with Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, the author of the act, as first witness.

Hearings Deferred

First scheduled for March 10, the hearings were deferred when President Roosevelt arranged for a "peace conference" between representatives of the C. I. O. and the American Federation of Labor. Since the C. I. O. is opposed to any change in the act and the A. F. L. demands certain amendments to curb alleged favoritism of the National Labor Relations Board toward the C. I. O., it was thought that the proposed hearings would endanger chances of peace between the two warring labor factions.

Yesterday, however, Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, who made the original motion for postponement, moved that a date be fixed for hearings to begin. The labor peace negotiators, said Ellender, "are just as wide apart as they have ever been, and there doesn't seem any possibility that they can ever get together."

Nevertheless, President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday said he had heard the peace negotiations were getting on all right.

Spread Over Long Period

The hearings are expected to take up three weeks of actual sessions, but they may be spread over a longer period because three Democratic members of the Education and Labor Committee are also members of the Foreign Relations Committee, which is due to hold extensive hearings this spring on neutrality legislation.

In introducing their proposal in the Senate yesterday, La Follette and Thomas declared in a joint statement that "no bill could more directly aid industrial peace. In no way does the bill deprive the employer of the fullest protection of property . . . The bill contains nothing that will cause concern to the great majority of businessmen, most of whom now conform to present enacted national policies."

"Several Decades Overdue"

The Senators, declaring the bill is "several decades overdue," stressed the thoroughness of the committee investigation leading up to the proposed measure. They cited the fact that on the basis of information elicited by the committee, the Bureau of Internal Revenue "has proposed additional income tax liabilities and penalties against various persons, firms and corporations whose activities have been revealed by the committee, amounting to $232,000," or more than one and half times the entire amount appropriated for the investigation by the Senate.

The bill forbids "oppressive labor practices," which it defines as the employment of labor spies, strikebreakers or strikebreaking agencies, armed private guards acting off company property (except when necessary to protect goods or money in transit and the use and possession of industrial munitions. Companies are forbidden to employ any private guard "during, or in anticipation of, a labor dispute" who has been convicted of a crime of violence.

Persons guilty of "oppressive labor practices" would not be permitted to make contracts with or secure loans from the United States. Enforcement of the act would be through the Secretary of Labor, who is empowered to investigate and apply for injunctions against violations. The Department of Justice would have charge of the enforcement of criminal provisions, violations of which would be punished by $10,000 fine or six months' imprisonment.

Colored Intruder Beats Woman

A 54-year-old woman was choked and beaten early yesterday by a colored man who forced his way into her ground floor bedroom at 909 M street northwest.

The woman, Mrs. Nettie Haury, was awakened by the intruder as he passed her bed toward a bureau on which her pocketbook lay. The man leaped at her when she stirred, and blacked her eye and cut her lips. Her screams routed him.

Mrs. Haury received treatment for a bruised and swollen throat also.

Rich Confused On D. C. Budget

The District's $50,000,000 budget yesterday was confused with the Nation's deficit in an economy speech by Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), Oklahoma, of the House District Committee, arose on the House floor to correct Rich. Only $5,000,000 of the District budget comes from the Federal Government, he explained, while the other $45,000,00 is taken from District tax collections.

U. S. Weighs Asking Nazis to Pay Czech Debt

Mrs. Wilson Arouses New Doubt of Envoy's Return to Germany

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull said yesterday this Government was considering the question of demanding that Germany assume Czecho-Slovakia's debts to this country.

He said the State Department was endeavoring to ascertain legal elements of the new political status in Central Europe.

Czecho-Slovakia's war debts to the United States totals $165,000,000. Private debts to American investors amount to $22,000,000.

Hull was asked whether dispatches from Berlin saying that Mrs. Hugh R. Wilson, wife of the American Ambassador, was closing her house to return to the United States indicated that the Ambassador, called home in November, would remain here indefinitely.

He said Mrs. Wilson's trip had not been discussed with the department and he did not have any information as to what was in her mind.

Berlin, March 28 (AP).—An indication that United States Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson does not plan to return to Berlin was given today in Mrs. Wilson's notice of dismissal to servants, effective May 1.

Ambassador Wilson was called to Washington November 16 to report on the November anti-Jewish outbursts and regulations. Mrs. Wilson remained here.

German Ambassador Dr. Hans Heinrich Dickhoff was summoned to Berlin, November 18, to explain what Nazi officials termed "queer" views in the United States regarding the anti-Jewish campaign.

Since then there has been conjecture both in Washington and Berlin as to whether the envoys would return to their posts.

SEC Denies Deal With Transamerica

By the Associated Press.

Controversy between the Securities Commission and Transamerica Corporation broke out anew last night when the commission called "entirely incorrect" the corporation's statement that both sides had "offered to be helpful in closing this matter finally."

The crossfire of public statements followed announcement by the commission that Transamerica Corporation had offered the SEC "full access to its books and records and those of its subsidiaries."

The commission, charging the big California holding company filed "false and misleading" statements, has been conducting public hearings to determine whether the company's stock should be suspended from trading on exchanges.

5 'King-Makers' Rule Legion, A.V.A. Charges

Col. Taylor Attacked For Sponsoring $40 Pension Proposal

The American Legion is controlled by an inner ring of five "king-makers," the American Veterans Association charged last night in a sharp attack on Col. John Thomas Taylor, legion legislative representative, now backing a bill to give World War veterans of 65 and over a straight pension of $40 a month.

The House World War Veterans Committee will meet today to discuss the pension proposal, added by Chairman Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, to the omnibus veterans' compensation bill. The pension item would eventually cost the country $13,000,000,000, according to critics.

Legion Kidnaped

Legion Commander Stephen Chadwick, on record as emphatically opposed to any general pension, wields the power of a "Charlie McCarthy," the A. V. A. asserted, while "the king-makers have kidnaped the legion."

Chadwick has not replied to a message sent Saturday to inquire whether he or Taylor speaks for the Legion, Robert B. Luchars, national commander of the A. V. A., said last night at his home in Montclair, N. J., in a statement issued through association headquarters here.

Taylor last night told The Post: "The American Veterans Association is just trying to stir up controversy in the Legion. They've got a racket and they're trying to develop it."

Luchars contended Washington representatives of the Legion have acquired a "vested interest" in advocating pension legislation as a means of perpetuating their own jobs.

King-Makers Listed

Listed by Luchars as legion king-makers were John Lewis Smith, of Washington; William Doyle, of Boston; Phillip Collins, of Chicago; Ben Dorris, of Oregon, and Mark McKee, of California.

Millard Rice, legislative representative for the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said yesterday his organization is "vigorously" opposed to inclusion of the pension proposal in the omnibus benefits bill.

Also pressing for separate consideration of the pension are the Disabled American Veterans.

Stinson Weeps Over Love Note in Court

Artist Relates Series of Quarrels Preceding Wedding

The various phases of his romance with Mrs. Pepita Crounse, wealthy widow who later became his wife and now is suing for annulment of the marriage, were described in District court yesterday by Joseph Whitlaw Stinson, artist-attorney.

Even on the eve of their wedding in Bar Harbor on September 27, 1937, he declared, he became so peeved with her he exclaimed:

"Pepita, what's the use of going on with this?"

"But I do want to emphasize," Stinson said, "that in spite of the seven or eight flare-ups we had in Nova Scotia that summer, and in spite of the quarrel in Bar Harbor, I knew she loved me and I knew I loved her. For months at a time our relationship would be very beautiful."

Love Denied by Mrs. Stinson

Mrs. Stinson during her part of the testimony denied she ever had loved him and charged that she was drugged into the "whole affair" because Stinson and Miss Jessica Shoemaker, her nurse, wished to get hold of her fortune.

Stinson scored a strong point with his courtroom audience when he broke into tears while reading a love letter from the former Mrs. Crounse, who after pages of explanations concerning business matters she wished him to supervise and of expressions of tender feelings for him, closed with "May God bless and protect you."

Three love letters from Mrs. Crounse were read in court by Stinson and three others introduced into the record, bringing the number of exhibits in the case up to 155.

Embarrassed by Jealousy

Justice Luhring, who at times has expressed impatience with the many dates and names and places involved, recessed the court yesterday immediately after the story had advanced to the beginning of the honeymoon stage.

Mrs. Stinson has claimed the wedding never was consummated, due to Stinson's belief in spiritual rather than corporeal sentiment. Former Representative Carroll L. Beedy, attorney for the defendant, has announced he will prove the marriage was a real one when the wedding night testimony is introduced this morning.

During none of the summer of their engagement, Stinson reasserted yesterday, was there any indication that Mrs. Crounse was taking drugs. Except for periods of "embarrassment" brought on by her jealousy, the Nova Scotia interlude was a delightful one, he declared.

Argued Over Sketches

He said that Mrs. Stinson at one time "struck me full in the face" after he had argued with her concerning some sketches of a young woman.

"She insisted that I go on with my sketches. I had made one of an interesting model and she didn't like it. You know how people come around you when you're sketching at a summer place. Well, Mrs. Stinson did not want anyone to know my technique and we had numerous flare-ups over it."

The wedding date of September 27 was selected because it was Mrs. Crounse's birthday, he said. Proof that Mrs. Crounse was aware of the approaching ceremony was produced in lists of wedding guests made up in her own handwriting and in telegrams sent to friends several weeks in advance of the date.

Hearings Resume Today On Griffenhagen Report

A legislative draft of the Griffenhagen reorganization plan will be submitted today by Chairman Kennedy of the House reorganization sub-committee, to his colleagues as hearings are resumed at 10:30 a. m.

School officials and George Bowerman, chief librarian, are scheduled to oppose Griffenhagen proposals to curg authority of the Board of Education and library trustees.

House Sub-Committee to Redraft D. C. Revenue Measure; Income Levy May Replace Sales Tax

Collection Loss Feared if States Receive Priority

By James D. Secrest.

With a District income tax rapidly gaining favor over the sales tax, the House sub-committee on fiscal affairs will meet tomorrow in executive session to start drafting a new revenue measure, Chairman Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said yesterday.

Senator King, chairman, and other members of the Senate District Committee, will be invited to sit with the House sub-committee in order to expedite the legislation. Expert advisers will be called upon to submit estimates as to the probable yield of a local income levy modeled after the Federal law but with lower rates.

Hailed as Victory

Advocates of the income tax hailed the decision of the sub-committee to rewrite the bill as a preliminary victory.

Senator King, while insisting that he still favors the income levy, questioned its revenue potentialities. He forecast a loss of the income tax on between 70,000 and 100,000 Federal employes who, he said, would pay the taxes of the States in which they maintained legal voting residences.

At the same time King warned that unless the District revenue bill is speeded up Congress would adjourn without enacting any new legislation.

"In that event we would have to put through a joint resolution to continue the business privilege tax and the $1.75 realty rate," he said.

Dr. Chester B. Pond, who drafted the $13,000,000 tax program; Colin F. Stam, counsel of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, and Jo V. Morgan, of the District Board of Tax Appeals, will assist in rewriting the tax measure.

Hearings Concluded

Nichols abruptly concluded public hearings on the revenue question yesterday morning on the ground that the Supreme Court decision upholding the validity of reciprocal Federal-State income taxes had removed all doubts as to the constitutionality of a District levy on the salaries of United States employes.

He pointed out that the $14,000 base for the income tax section of the dual income-sales tax is no longer necessary as it was designed to effect a court test of the constitutional issue.

Herbert S. Wood, a spokesmen for the Citizens Committee on Fair Taxation, argued that the District should have prior claim on the salary of Federal employes working here, regardless of the fact that they maintain legal residences elsewhere.

Both Nichols and King, however, said the States are entitled to collect the income tax first, although the employes work in the National Capital, and that the District must credit the payments.

Utility Rate Retained

Nichols said that the noncontroversial provisions of the tax program proposed by Dr. Pond and approved by the citizens advisory committee probably will be retained in the revised bill. These include higher utility taxes, a levy on parking lots and a revision of the personal property tax on motor vehicles.

The combined income-sales levy was expected to produce $6,775,000, of which $5,500,000 would have come from the 2 per cent retail sales tax.

Repeal of the intangible personal property tax, as urged in the Pond report, will be recommended by the sub-committee, Nichols said, despite the fact that it takes $3,000,000 out of the present revenue system.

Mrs. Cummings Ill; Doctor Won't Comment

Mrs. Homer Cummings, wife of the former Attorney General, is ill at her home, 2700 Tilden street northwest, it was learned last night.

Dr. Paul F. Dickens said Mrs. Cummings had been confined since returning from a Florida vacation last Friday. It had been decided, he said, not to discuss details of her illness at present.

Make Rails Avoid Waste, Eastman Tells Committee

Joseph B. Eastman, Interstate Commerce commissioner, said yesterday that elimination of the "very large amount of waste" in transportation would do more than anything else to revitalize all branches of the industry.

He told the House Initerstate and Foreign Commerce Committee that the Government would at least have to take the leadership in eliminating such waste and perhaps should resort to compulsion.

Meanwhile, the House Judiciary Committee approved the Chandler reorganization bill authorizing railroads to initiate reorganization procedure before the Interstate Commerce Commission if such plans have the approval of three-fourths of the security holders affected.

D. C. Health Report Finally Completed

The Olesen report, a 400-page study of the District Health Department and its hospital, appeared yesterday a year after the investigation was completed.

Major findings and recommendations in the survey, conducted under direction of Assistant Surgeon General Robert Oleson, were made public last year. Construction of a general medical building at Gallinger Hospital, one of the recommendations, has been launched.

shouting, soon were roaring through the streets.

All were unbelievably glad it was all over.

"We are sick of war," everyone said. "We are sick of politics. All we want is a chance to live in peace and a chance to eat again."

There also seemed little fear of the kind of justice Gen. Franco will mete out. Some republicans were prepared—even desired—to see those who had utilized their former power to commit "crimes" receive punishment.

In uptown Madrid there was little outward sign it had undergone a siege of nearly 29 months. But in the suburbs there was line after line of vacated trenches, pile after pile of paving stones barricading the streets, huge holes in the pavements, houses through which the sunlight filtered and piles of rubbish that once had been dwellings.

Early this morning, Gen. Miaja, head of the national defense council and one time "savior of Madrid;" his War Minister Segismundo Casado, and all republican leaders except Foreign Minister Julian Besteiro, fled to Valencia.

[A dispatch from Valencia said the National Defense Council was understood to be negotiating there for the early surrender of that important Mediterranean seaport.]

Nationalist authorities followed the troops into the capital. They immediately assumed control of the municipal administration. One of their first acts was to free 18,000 political prisoners and Nationalist sympathizers in Madrid prisons.

Royal Anthem Played

Dozens of motor trucks and automobiles conveying members of the famed "Fifth Column" toured the streets. They distributed nationalist armbands and flags. Fascist automobiles carried phonographs and loudspeakers played the Spanish royal anthem and the Fascist anthem.

Frnaco sympathizers seized the radio station during a broadcast with shouts of "Give us the radio!" After moments of silence they shouted: "Madrid is ours! Viva Franco! Arriba Espana!"

Balconies were hung with carpets, bright shawls and religious and monarchistic insignia. The old red and gold monarchist flag was unfurled on the top of the 14-story American-owned Telephone Building, tallest structure in the capital.

The new administration ordered the staffs of theaters and other places of entertainment to stay at their posts so that the life of the city could continue normally, as far as possible.

Republican bank notes were no longer accepted.

Fugitives Throng Exits

City exits were thronged with fugitives who feared they were marked for nationalist reprisals, but cars were scarce because of a shortage of fuel.

Scores of nationalist airplanes put on a circus over the shell-pitted telephone building.

Subways were running almost normally, the transition was so swift and orderly that the "fifth column" took over the metropolis almost as a going concern.

Refugees who had been cooped up in embassies since the beginning of the war sang the Fascist hymn. Republican soldiers streamed homeward with kitbags over their shoulders. Fascists celebrated the lifting of a siege that began November 6, 1936, and had killed hundreds in intermittent artillery and air bombardments.

When the Nationalist forces entered Madrid they found groups of Madrilenos sluicing the streets with streams of water as if to wash away every memory of the long siege. Some of the inhabitants flung their arms around the necks of the newcomers. Haggard faces showed the ravages of hunger in the city of nearly 1,000,000 population.

Conservative Spain to Resist Autarchy by War, Writer Says

Madrid Editor Asserts Peninsula Will Fight Fascist Vassalage Operated by Germany's Gestapo

By Manuel Chaves Nogales,
Former Editor of Ahora, Madrid Newspaper.
By Wireless and Special Wire to The Post.

Paris, March 28.—The general view is that the fall of Madrid amounts to the ending of the Spanish war through the victory of Gen. Francisco Franco.

The naive conception that the war was merely an internal quarrel between the right and the left, between monarchists and republicans, capitalists and proletarians—has resulted in the fallacious conviction that once the war terminated Spain will be merely desirous of peace and that her natural resources will permit of prompt reconstruction, thanks to an assured and rapid influx of international capital.

The real situation is that Spain is a vassal of the totalitarian states.

New Civil War Forecast

If Spain wishes to dispense with the financial assistance offered by France and Britain as a guaranty of peace, she must resign herself to the abolition of a liberal economic regime and to the introduction of the barter system by submitting to the autarchial system of the Third Reich and Fascist Italy.

This the Conservatives, who have supported Gen. Franco, will never accept of their own free will, and in a very short time we shall see a reaction which will take the form of a second civil war.

If it were a question of the Spanish forces alone, Burgos would be compelled shortly to break off relations with Germany and Italy, but it must not be forgotten that the war has served as a pretext for the installation in Spain of an extra-national power which, in the long run, controls the destinies of the country.

This power by which the Spaniards are at present governed is none other than the Gestapo, the secret police of the Third Reich.

Gestapo Instructs Burgos

The Gestapo is the real weapon of the Franco government. The proud and sensitive hidalgos may be easily irritated by the presence of the petulent Italian troops, but they do not perceive that their veritable masters are not the vainglorious officers of the Italian army, but the German agents, who, without any external formalities, have obtained possession of the vital resources of the country and now instruct the Burgos government as to its line of conduct.

Almost the whole Grman staff in Spain has been recruited from among the former Gestapo agents in South America, who are well informed of the Spanish character and speak the language correctly.

It is the policy of the Third Reich which daily solves the problems raised by the introduction of a totalitarian regime. As regards national reconstruction, it is the Gestapo itself which has enabled Gen. Franco to reach a solution which enables him to dispense with the assistance of international finance.

Serfdom Forecast

The vanquished armies of the civil war, transformed into serfs, will be called upon to reconstruct the country without wages. It is in order to obtain this virtually free labor that the Spanish concentration camps have been created and that the government is preparing a law based upon the principle of "redemption through labor of political delinquents."

In concentration camps now are about 500,000 prisoners, according to the official figures of the Burgos government. With the fall of Madrid and of the rest of the peninsula, it is possible that the number in the camps may exceed 1,000,000, whose labor will form the basis of the totalitarian state.

On the basis of this serfdom of the people and the facilities offered by the barter system derived from the German expansion in eastern Europe, it will be possible for the Burgos government to do what the democratic powers regard as impossible, namely, to eliminate liberal capitalism and to erect a state hostile to the great western powers.

Instrument of Nazi Expansion

This is the sole and real mission of Gen. Franco. Thanks to him, Spain is being transformed into an instrument of German expansion, not only in southwestern Europe but also in North Africa and very shortly in South America.

The German agents who were obliged by North American influence to leave the Spanish-speaking republics of America and are now in Spain wish to return to the new continent as delegates of Spain and as apostles of the Franco doctrine—the channel of the German expansion overseas.

Will Spain resign herself to this mission? As long as a people in arms was fighting for its own independence it was possible to believe that this project would fail. At the present day the resistance of the conservatives, the purely material interests of the capitalists and the aristocrats' sentimental idea of their dignity are not designed to foster illusions on the part of the democratic powers.

There may be a second civil war in Spain, but the German tiger will not be easily compelled to release its prey.

Reds Defeated, Duce Declares As Throng Shouts 'Tunisia'

End of Spanish Civil War May Herald Italian Move to Realize Colonial Claims on France

By the Associated Press.

Rome, March 28.—Premier Mussolini marked the fall of Madrid with the declaration tonight that the Spanish war "is finished with the defeat of bolshevism" and added: "Thus will all enemies of Italy and fascism finish."

Il Duce appeared on the balcony of the Palazzo Venezia while thousands of cheering Fascists below were shouting "Tunisia! Tunisia!" He smiled and then addressed them.

The belief has been general here that when the Spanish war ended Italy would move to realize her colonial claims against France, which Il Duce himself only last Sunday said involved the French North African Protectorate of Tunisia.

With his balcony appearance the premier brought to a climax Italy's "Aviation Day," the sixteenth anniversary of the Fascist air force. Fascists asserted that any potential enemy of Italy must count on an Italian air fleet capable of dumping a cargo of bombs as far north as London or as far south as Mogadiscio, port in Italian Somaliland on Africa's east coast.

This would mean that in addition to the French and British capitals and the Suez Canal, the great British naval bases of Malta, Haifa, Alexandria and Aden would all come within Italy's claimed range of attack.

Fascist aviation authorities reported that Italy has 18,000 trained military pilots, an increase of 8,000 in two years. Virginia Gayda, authoritative editor, wrote in Il Giornale D'Italia that each plane could carry more than a ton of bombs more than 2,000 kilometers (1,243 miles) at a speed above 248 miles an hour. He said also that Italy had developed a pursuit plane which could climb 8,749 yards in eight minutes, a fighting plane capable of more than 310 miles an hour, and a bomber able to carry a five-ton load 1,243 miles.

Lemke Advocates 'Bank of America'

Control of the Nation's monetary and credit system should be taken from private hands and placed in charge of a "Bank of America" with power to make loans to large and small business alike, former Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, told a meeting of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Lions Club last night.

Seventy-five club members and friends attended the meeting at the Kenwood Country Club in charge of J. R. Enright, president.

Paris Expected To Insist Duce GetOut ofSpain

Daladier Calls Cabinet To Go Over Speech Answering Mussolini

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 28.—Diplomats tonight believed France would press demands for early withdrawal of Italian forces from Spain as a sequel to capitulation of Madrid to Gen. Franco.

Both France and Britain prepared measures to cope with the new situation presented by the nationalist triumph.

In London it appeared Britain's chief objective was to reassert her influence over Spain and keep the Rome-Berlin axis from dominating Franco. Britain's first ambassador to the nationalist regime, Sir Maurice Peterson, was expected to leave London for Burgos tomorrow.

Daladier Calls Cabinet

Daladier called his cabinet to meet tomorrow for a review of the Spanish War, the prospect of negotiations with Italy over Rome's claims against France and the French national defense.

Daladier intended to present to the cabinet for approval the text of a speech he is to broadcast tomorrow night in reply to Premier Mussolini's speech of last Sunday in which Il Duce said Italy's colonial ambitions concerned French-controlled Tunisia, Djibouti and the Suez Canal.

Sources close to the government indicated Daladier would take the position it was up to Italy to make the first move toward negotiations.

Navy Increased

Despite the statements of Mussolini and King Vittorio Emanuele of Italy that the Italian note of last December 17 set forth the Italian claims on Tunisia, Djibouti and the Suez Canal, government sources maintained the note simply denounced the 1935 colonial pact and presented no concrete demands.

Decrees increasing enlisted strength of the navy to 77,500 men and permitting the government to place frontier regions under military rule on an instant's notice were put into force today.

A third decree made it obligatory to provide all storage depots containing more than 14,000 cubic meters (494,410 cubic feet) of gasoline or other volatile fuel with defense against air bombardment.

Belgium Protests Nazi Meddling

Brussels, March 28 (AP).—The Belgium government disclosed tonight a protest to Berlin against a German broadcasting station's asserted meddling in Belgium's general election campaign.

A radio program from Cologne last Sunday was directed to the German-speaking population of Eupen and Malmedy cantons, which Germany lost to Belgium after the World War.

supplies and munitions. This plan would answer the smaller nations, previously expressed fear of Soviet troops on their territory, but at the same time would give the military guarantees demanded by Poland as the price for joining any "Stop-Hitler" movement.

Meanwhile there was new evidence of strong pressure against Chamberlain for a swift and more vigorous change in British foreign policy.

Former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, with 33 of his friends, introduced a motion calling for a national government to start conscription of the nation's wealth, manpower and industry, and to proceed with the "vigorous prosecution of the foreign policy recently outlined by (foreign secretary) Viscount Halifax."

Hitherto content to call for a national government in speeches only, the Eden group now demanded a formal Commons vote on a motion in which the mention of Lord Halifax's foreign policy was regarded by some observers as a deliberate slap at Chamberlain.

Other men who signed the motion included Winston Churchill, rebel tory and wartime first lord of the admiralty who resigned because of Chamberlain's negotiations in the four-power Munich conference on Czechco-Slovakia September 29. There was no indication when the motion would be debated.

U. S. Planes Superior

New York, March 28 (AP).—The performance of American warplanes being delivered to, or available to, France and Great Britain, without exception, exceeds that of the machines Fascist Editor Virginio Gayda describes.

As against the pursuit plane which Gayda said could climb 3,280 feet a minute, this country has the Curtiss-Wright interceptor which climbs at 4,800 feet a minute.

Italy's fighter, says Gayda, can chase an enemy at more than 310 miles an hour. The Curtiss Hawk 75-A is rated at "faster than 320 miles an hour."

Italy's light bombers are described as being capable of carrying more than a ton of bombs to an objective 1,243 miles away at a speed exceeding 248 miles an hour.

A Martin (American) bomber can carry a ton of bombs at 265 miles an hour 1,400 miles and return. Douglas 2-engine bombers are described as faster than 325 miles an hour. Lockheed bombers can carry a ton of bombs 1,500 miles from their base at better than 250 miles an hour.

The Boeing "flying fortress," is capable of carrying more than 5 tons of bombs 1,500 miles at more than 250 miles an hour. That compares with an Italian bomber, described by Gayda, with an equal bomb capacity and a one-way range of 1,243 miles.

Spanish Ambassador Sees Roosevelt About Refugees

Embassy

A diplomat who began his career when Alfonso was King, Cardenas is well-known and popular in Washington, where he is known as "Jack." He first came here in 1918. After serving as counselor of embassy, he was named Ambassador. By that time Spain had become a republic. From here he and Senora Cardenas—the former Lulu Nano, a Rumanian, whom he met here—were transferred to Paris.

Cardenas had been assigned to Washington as Ambassador a second time when civil war broke out in Spain. Thereafter he became Franco's agent in New York.

Neither President Roosevelt nor Secretary of State Hull has given any intimation as to what course the United States will take with respect to recognition of Franco. The Roosevelt Cabinet is said to be divided on the question, but the prospect is that recognition will be extended.

What Ambassador de los Rios asked President Roosevelt to do to help the refugee situation, or what the President had to say in connection with it, was not made known.

The embargo on shipment of arms to Spain, which brought more than 150,000 telegrams and letters of protest in on the White House and the State Department, soon will be lifted, it was said yesterday by officials.

Now that Gen. Franco has Madrid, they said, the lifting of the embargo need not await recognition of the Franco regime.

Kennedy's Son Reports He Is Safe in Madrid

U. S. Reported Backward in 8 Medical Fields

Foundation Advocates 'Support in Dozen Different Areas'

The Rockefeller Foundation yesterday turned the spotlight on "backward" fields in medicine, pointing out that "adequate support in a dozen different areas might well bring results of incalculable benefit to human health and welfare."

Raymond B. Fosdick, president of the foundation, made public a portion of the review of the agency's activities in 1938 in which eight specific lines of attack were recommended. They are:

Chemotherapy—Treatment of diseases with chemical compounds. Sulfanilamide, salvarsan, sulfapyridine and tryparsamide, among others, were developed abroad and "in the United States research in this field could be greatly stimulated, and funds of considerable magnitude over a period of years could profitably be employed."

Dermatology Lags

Dermatology—"It is a matter of concern that dermatology has lagged so far behind many other branches of clinical medicine. Though active research on skin diseases is going on in several medical centers in this country, we have no departments or institutes of dermatology which would compare favorably with the best in Europe."

Pharmacology—The foundation said this field is hampered by lack of financial support and that instruction in the administration of drugs is notably weak in most American medical schools."

Legal or forensic medicine—This subject is, in most places in the United States, "paralyzed in its development by the existence of the coroner system." The medical and legal professions share responsibility for this situation, according to the report.

Behind in Occupational Studies

Industrial medicine—This country, it was charged, is far behind Russia and Germany in the study and prevention of occupational diseases.

Dentistry—"Until our dental schools are brought more closely into line with our medical schools, much of the mechanical brilliance of American dentists will remain that and nothing more, and the essential curative and preventive measures will go unstudied."

Public health—"Relatively few of the 77 recognized medical schools in the United States have adequate instruction in preventive medicine and public health.

Diseases of advancing years—"The circulatory failures, high-blood pressure, chronic kidney disease, rheumatism and the faults of nutrition in elderly people are only a few examples of subjects in a wide and at present largely neglected area. Concentration on this group of diseases, backed by sufficient funds, would undoubtedly prove highly productive."

The Chapel of the Redeemer, Glen Echo, will welcome a former vicar tonight, as Dr. Hulbert A. Woolfall, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, St. Louis, speaks at 8 p. m. Dr. Woolfall is this week's noonday speaker at Epiphany Church.

Police Boys Club Drive Extended

The Police Boys' Club funds campaign, which yesterday reached $63,468, will be extended to April 7 in an effort to reach the $75,000 goal, Gen. Albert L. Cox announced yesterday. He said many residents of outlying sections had not yet been contacted.

No Cannibals in Africa, Woman Lecturer Insists Here

The Natives Are Good Cooks And Many Are Employed in White Homes, She Explains

African natives are not cannibals, but they are good cooks, according to Mrs. V. Coddington, of Johannesburg, Union of South Africa. In Washington yesterday on her third visit to the United States, Mrs. Coddington complained that most Americans seem to think "everybody in South Africa is more or less savage."

"I've had five Zulu servants for the past five years, and I'm not eaten yet," she declared. Most of the native men work in the mines, do menial work in office buildings, or go into domestic service, while the women stay in the native villages and look after the children and cattle, she explained.

The natives live under their own tribal law, administered by their chiefs, with white magistrates to take charge of serious offenses like murder, Mrs. Coddington said. They are not allowed to live in the cities, unless they are in domestic service, but have suburban homes to which they go by the hundreds every evening on bicycles and in "native taxicabs," broken-down old motor cars, filled to overflowing and driven "like lightning" with as little attention to other traffic as if they were oxcarts.

Every couple of years the clothed tribesmen feel the need to go back to the native villages and "sit around and get fat for a while," she continued. There is no way to stop them, and they may stay a few weeks or several years before returning. Mrs. Coddington hopes to get some pictures of their native dances and wedding festivals in the next few months. She is planning a 20,000-mile tour of the Union of South Africa, Nyasaland, Rhodesia, Belgian Congo, Kenya and Tanganyika before coming to America again in October.

Halliburton Junk Feared in Danger

San Francisco, March 28 (I.N.S.)—Anxiety over the safety of Richard Halliburton increased tonight at radio operators failed in repeated attempts to contact the Chinese junk which the adventurer and writer is sailing from the Orient to San Francisco. Mackay radio operators had contacted Halliburton at regular intervals until last Friday, when the junk's radio suddenly went dead. It was feared the wooden vessel had been caught in a typhoon.

Art Gallery Out As a Barometer

Maj. Joseph F. Murray, superintendent of construction at the National Gallery of Art, yesterday spiked a story the Tennessee marble structure will be an informal weather forecaster by turning pink at approach of rain.

"It is true," said Maj. Murray, "that rain or a heavy dew will bring out a rosy hue in the stone. The color change does not, however, occur in advance of rain."

House Kills Parity; Farm Aid Cut a Third

Farm

ing the farm tenant act, only to find it hadn't done so. The motion, by Representative Moser (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, carried 118 to 107.

But Cannon announced that, due to faulty draftsmanship, the amendment had striken only the total figure at the end of the authorization and left the itemized farm tenant appropriations intact.

But a surprise move from the floor by Representative Andresen (Republican), of Minnesota, reduced the maximum that could be paid to individual farm owners in soil conservation and parity benefits from $10,000 to $2,500. This amendment was approved 194 to 61, and apparently was aimed at large-scale farmers collecting large benefits, and institutions conducting multiple farm operations.

Parity Doubling Fails

Hopelessly defeated early in the afternoon was a farm bloc effort led by Representative Ferguson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, to double the $250,000,000 farm parity amount in the Cannon amendment. The $500,000,000 proposal, which Ferguson said would pay farmers 90 per cent of parity (based on 1909-1914 farm prices), was decisively rejected, 226 to 70.

The $60,000,000 proposed as an addition to the bill by Representative Jones, supplementing customs receipts now used to promote farm markets, failed on a 2 to 1 vote, following vigorous denunciation by Representative Woodrum.

"If this is the way we are going to proceed," shouted Woodrum, "we might as well repeal the budgeting and accounting act and let pandemonium take over. This amount wasn't in the budget, the President hasn't recommended it, and it was never considered by the committee. If it has merit, let them send us a budget estimate."

If successful, the Jones amendment would have made available an aggregate of $150,000,000 for disposing of farm surpluses through relief channels, and for subsidizing both domestic and export sales. Jones said it was primarily "for dairy products and other farm commodities in trouble." Not once did he mention cotton. A restriction would have limited expenditures for any one commodity to 25 per cent, thus it could not have provided the full amount sought by the President for cotton export subsidiy, to which it was closely related.

Cotton Request Slated

But 25 per cent of the $60,000,000 new money asked by Jones would have provided precisely the $15,000,000 asked by the President to finance the cotton program through August 1. A budget request to supply this amount is expected to be sent to the Appropriations Committee.

Defeat of the $250,000,000 parity price payment amendment dealt a setback to a policy inaugurated by Congress last year, when $212,000,000 was appropriated for that purpose. The President repeatedly asked taxes to finance the program, and when these were not provided he eliminated the item from his 1940 budget. Still Cannon insisted the President was not opposed to the payments.

Based on buying power of farm commodities in the pre-war years, 1909 to 1914, the amendment would have provided 75 per cent of this so-called "parity" for five major commodities. Cotton growers would have received an estimated $90,000,000 to $100,000,000; wheat farmers, $70,000,000 to $75,000,000; corn farmers, $70,000,00 to $75,000,000; rice growers, about $2,0000,000. Although tobacco was included, tobacco farmers, whose prices alone have been holding up, probably would have received nothing.

G. O. P. Running Attack

A running Republican attack on "spending" was kept up all day. Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, was applauded from the galleries when he charged Congress already has appropriated more than current estimated revenues and plans to appropriate more than $4.000.000,000 more.

"Stop being pollywogs," yelled Rich, "collect money before you spend it."

Representative Lambertson (Republican), of Kansas, likewise warned members to "stop being spenders" and declared "agriculture will never come into its own on parity payments. The hope of agriculture is not in giving farmers a little candy."

Representative Gifford (Republican), of Massachusetts, charged the Administration "is sneeringly daring Congress to balance the budget."

Shortly after the opening gavel, the House adopted, 141 to 31, an amendment by Representative Johnson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, to reduce expense money of the Soil Conservation Service's Washington personnel by $52,000, decentralizing the administrative work and spreading it to the field.

A last-minute inflationary amendment by Representative Burdick (Republican), of North Dakota, directing issuance of Treasury notes to pay costs of the farm bill, was killed on a point of order.

Plane Crash Laid To Motor Defect

Oklahoma City, March 28 (AP).—Tom Hardin, vice president of the Civil Aeronautics Authority safety board, today said a Braniff Airways transport plane crash which killed eight persons here Sunday was "undoubtedly" caused by a "structural failure" in the left engine.

He said he was "reasonably sure" the victims were killed by fire and not by the actual crash.

I Dies as Fire Sweeps Aid Home

Darby, Pa., March 28 (U.P.).—One man was burned to death tonight and several others suffered burns and injuries when fire swept a "rescue mission" here, forcing 270 men assembled for evening prayer service to flee.

Roll Call On FarmParity

Denmark Expels 3 Nazi Youths

Copenhagen, March 28 (AP).—The Danish ministry of justice tonight ordered the expulsion of three German Nazi youths accused of clandestinely posting propaganda bills in northern Schleswig, gained from Germany in a 1920 plebiscite.

The youths were said to have entered Denmark to campaign for the German minority in current Danish elections. Police said 147 others would be permitted to stay on good behavior.

into the executive civil service employes of emergency agencies and other Federal units not now included. Ramspeck estimated some 200,000 would be eligible to take noncompetitive examinations for continuance under civil service status. Another 100,000, chiefly in unclassified day labor posts, and those at the top end of the ladder in policy-forming jobs, would be exempted.

Only major controversy in the committee has been over the examination method of covering over personnel from non-Civil Service agencies.

Mrs. Rogers said she is contending for the "open competitive" examination method, as "most of these agencies are emergency in character, and their personnel was not originally intended to be permanent." She said she thought all should be given an opportunity to compete for the jobs.

Chairman Ramspeck contends that general competitive examinations not only would be prohibitive in cost but "would disrupt the service."

Dewey and Taft Favored in Poll

Gallup

you like to see win the Presidential election in 1940?"

The vote of those with opinions was:

Would Like Republicans to Win	51%
Would Like Democrats to Win	49

The study found that approximately one voter in every five (18 per cent) had not yet made up his mind which party he wanted to see win. Since most of the undecided group voted for Roosevelt in 1936 their future decision will have an important bearing on Democratic prospects.

What party the majority of voters will favor in 1940 depends largely, of course, on what candidates are selected. In order to have some rough gauge of how much the selection of specific candidates might affect party strength, the Institute has run various opposing candidates against each other in informal "trial heats."

Political observers have lately been linking the names of Garner and Farley as possible candidates for President and Vice President, respectively, on the Democratic ticket, and Dewey and Taft as candidates on the Republican ticket.

In a companion question in today's survey the Institute matched these pairs against each other, with the following results:

Would Prefer Dewey-Taft Ticket	52%
Would Prefer Garner-Farley Ticket	48

The undecided or "no opinion" vote was approximately 16 per cent.

It is interesting to note that there is a close correlation between the number of voters who say they would like to see a Republican win in 1940 (51 per cent), and the number who favor the Dewey-Taft ticket (52 per cent).

As a further experiment, the Institute put Senator Taft's name at the head of the Republican ticket with Dewey as Vice Presidential candidate, and ran this combination against Garner and Farley. The results were the same—52 per cent for the Taft-Dewey ticket, 48 per cent for Garner and Farley.

In Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

FAVORITES RETURN: Scott and Douglas, the dancers who've been prime popularity pets whenever they came to Washington, have just opened an engagement at the Pall Mall Room. They were at the Shoreham not so long ago, and, if your memory is good, you'll recall their lacquered dancing at the first opening of Heigh Ho. They've recently been at Manhattan's Casino-on-the-Park and Boston's Biltmore. Highly rhythmed waltzes are their current specialty.

Screened Greatness: Occasionally a portion of the dining room at one of the finest countryside dining places is screened off. It is said that if you could look behind this screen you would see—President Franklin D. Roosevelt and party.

EASTER PARADE: Houston and Harden are rushing this Easter cavalcade business in Shoreham's Blue Room, both vocally and sartorially, with pretty Miss Harden wearing an Easter bonnet that's both lovely and amazing. Dancers Taylor and Allen, who've come out of the West like young Lochinvar, do the fastest Viennese waltz you've ever seen, also an exotic South American dance to brilliant Barnes-directed music. Card sharping by Fred Roner—what a bridge partner he'd make!

CHECK ROOM TO BANDSTAND: Vincent Gallagher, owner-operator of the Hour Glass and King Cole Room, believes he's discovered a star singer in Betty Davis, the demure little brunette who checks hats at the Hour Glass. Betty has a two-octave range, is now taking vocal lessons. In about two weeks she is going to step right out of the checking corner and onto the Hour Glass bandstand.

When the Heigh Ho tap room reopens, Leo, the former manager, will be right there—and in a big way. Also a very popular singer, now in another spot, will probably be on hand.

BLONDE PAGEANTRY: It's a "Picture Parade" at Bamboo Gardens currently, with those "Blonde Aristocrats" in pale blue chiffon with muffs and picture hats formed of violets. Very eye-filling. Mona Stafford has a dance called "Memories of a Dying Savage." We think it should be called "Savage Resurrection." Russ Le Beau balances a bottle on his head and drinks a Bamboo special cocktail at the same time. They're both good tricks, even if not done simultaneously.

Junior Jitterbug: Austin Peterson, jr., the talented young (just entering his teens) son of Manager Peterson, of the Mayfair, has just won a medal for playing the clarinet—one of the hottest instruments in modern swing.

LEIS IN LOTUS: If you're ringsiding at Lotus this week, you'll probably be draped with leis by the beautiful Francis Allis girls before they go into their Hawaiian number. The Allis South Seas is a honey—subtle and sensuous, climaxing in a delightful scene in moonlight blue lighting. Dancers Nels and Nadine present a gorgeous acrobatic waltz, performing really startling feats with apparently effortless grace. Maestro Bill Strickland's smooth emceeing is a pattern of what emceeing should be.

Radio Impresario: Russ Lyons, the tall attractive young fella who is one of the head men of Consolidated Radio Artists, for all of his youth, was a highly welcome visitor in Shar-Zad the other evening. Most of the time he sat with Mrs. Don Taylor, the stunning blonde wife of Maestro Don, of the Biltmore Boys.

ROMANTIC DRAMBUIE: Both the Lounge Riviera and the Wardman cocktail lounge have chosen that fascinating Scotch liqueur, drambuie, as the base of their special cocktails. Drambuie was the favorite drink of "Bonnie Prince Charlie" of the House of Stuart. In 1745 he gave the formula to a faithful retainer and since that time it has been made only on the Isle of Skye. Not until recent years has it been exported, the Scotch preferring to keep it for themselves.

Brown Derby Zoo: Al Simmonds has got another duck as a companion to "Derby, Jr." The pair of them waddle around after Al, even hopping up on the bandstand. Verra funny. And if you snoop in the Brown Derby kitchen, you'll see a handsome little white pig wearing a brass-studded leather harness.

LYRICS IN CAPRICE: A friend of "Tiny" Meeker (Cafe Caprice) has written some practically inspired take-off lyrics on "Isle of Capri" and "You Must Have Been a Beautiful Baby." "Tiny" is going to break out these uncanny ballads in a few days.

Hi Hat's contralto nightingale, Angie Rodante, has finally recovered from that tonsil operation to the stage, where she can eat anything she wants. And is she giving those steak and spaghetti dinners the dickens!

MELODIC ENCHANTMENT: The "Serenade Espagnol" of Chaminade, as violined by Sasha Lukas at Troika. The harmonies are delicate as Spanish lace.

Those magical arangements of the "Blossom Time" melodies that Carr and Don are getting up for Madrillon's own "Cherry Blossom Festival" on Friday eve.

When the Rainbow Room's novachord takes on the perfect semblance of an old-fasioned harpsidhord under Milton Davis' skillful fingers. At such periods Milton is likely to play minuets, gavottes and suchlike appropriate music.

PIRATE TRAFFIC: Since the opening of the Pirates' Den, the Georgetown waterfront has been crowded with more cars than ever were seen there before. But don't worry about parking. A bucko buccaneer will park your jalloppy or 2D sedan—bring it back, too.

Bunny West and Valentine McCann, of Bamboo Gardens' Blonde Aristocrats

Japan Forces Big Battleships, President Says

Tokyo's Secrecy 'One Of Factors' in U. S. 45,000-Tonner Plans

President Roosevelt's decision to launch a building program of 45,000-ton battleships, fastest and most powerful war vessels ever projected, was partially motivated by Japan's refusal to disclose its naval plans, the Chief Executive said yesterday.

Extraordinary measures taken by the Japanese Admiralty to keep the size of its three new battleships secret, together with a formal denial of information, by the Tokyo government has convinced the Administration that it must build the bigger warships.

That the activities of the other two-thirds of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo axis may have played a part in his decision was indicated at the President's press conference yesterday. Asked if Japan's refusal to confirm or deny reports that she was building capital ships in excess of 35,000 tons—the old treaty limit—was responsible for his stand, the Chief Executive said this was one of several factors influencing him. He declined to reveal the other factors.

Under the naval expansion act of last year, the President is given the authority to determine the size of the new battleships. Two months ago, it was disclosed, he told the Navy to go ahead with plans for the 45,000-tonners and they presented recommendations for ships of this size to the House Naval Appropriations sub-committee on Monday.

Opposition Develops

It is expected that funds to start two of the giant craft, estimated to cost from $83,000,000 to $100,000,000 apiece, will be included in the regular naval appropriation bill. Some opposition in the House committee, however, already has developed.

Meanwhile, the foreign affairs and defense front saw the following developments:

On the eve of a Senate Foreign Relations Committee meeting to fix the date for commencement of neutrality hearings, Senators Nye (Republican), of North Dakota; Bone (Democrat), of Washington, and Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, yesterday introduced a bill that would tighten the mandatory provisions of the present neutrality law.

At the Senate Foreign Relations Committee meeting today, the group is expected to give approval to a plan to strengthen "the defense of the American continent" by building warships and munitions for Latin-American republics in United States navy yards and arsenals.

The House Naval Affairs Committee approved the establishment of two additional naval air bases, one at Jacksonville, Fla., and the other at Quonsett Point, R. I. They would be in addition to the program of 12 such bases voted by the House some weeks ago, and now awaiting action in the Senate.

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, in a speech at Worcester, Mass., hit the violation of treaties by totalitarian states, and declared the United States must take active steps to combat the propaganda which he said they spread in this country.

The Senate debated legislation authorizing the War and Navy departments to acquire a $100,000,000 reserve of "strategic and critical" materials needed in war but not produced in quantity in the United States. It will be considered again tomorrow.

Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, told the House Military Affairs Committee, considering his anti-Nazi Bund bill to prohibit private semimilitaristic organizations, that the American Civil Liberties Union, labor unions and war veterans back the measure.

Chairman Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, of the House military appropriations subcommittee, said hearings on the War Department civil functions bill would delay for a week a Senate-House conference on the $513,000,000 Army appropriations measure. The Senate added more than $13,000,000 to the bill Monday.

A plan to establish an additional Army chemical warfare arsenal at Muscle Shoals, Ala., simila rto the existing station at Edgewood, Md., was presented to President Roosevelt by Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, at a White House conference yesterday.

16-Inch Guns Favored

The new "super-battleships" will be 880 feet from bow to stern—130 feet longer than the six 35,000-ton battleships now building or contracted for. To enable them to pass through the Panama Canal, the larger ships will have about the same beam—108 feet. Naval officials said this will leave a foot to spare in the Canal locks.

While plans are not finally approved, it is expected the 45,000-ton craft will mount the same size guns as the North Carolina class now building. Although reports have been received that Japan intends to equip her new large dreadnoughts with 18-inch guns, our Navy's ordnance experts are said to be opposed to "experimentation" with the larger guns.

Speed and cruising range will be emphasized, it is understood. Large new power plants will propel the ships at speeds in excess of 30 knots, faster than any other battleship afloat or projected today.

Safe Easy Way To Lose Fat

How would you like to safely and harmlessly lose 15 pounds of fat in a few weeks? How would you like to lose your double chin and your too prominent hips and abdomen and along with it get the increase in energy and improvement in health which so often accompanies excess fat reduction?

Get on the scales today and see how much you weigh. Then follow the sensible, safe, pleasing food hints inside a jar of Kruschen. And for a wholesome beneficial aperient effect on liver and bowels and for a mild helpful diuresis of the kidneys—don't forget to take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water first thing every morning.

Then after 30 days, weigh yourself again and just see if you haven't lost pounds of ugly fat.

Refuse imitations. Demand and get the genuine Kruschen made right here in the U. S. A. Leading druggists America over, sell Kruschen.

Crawford's Mail-Order Decree Denied, Judge Wants to See Her

JOAN CRAWFORD

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, March 28.—For fear, he said, that California might get the name of granting "mail order divorces," a superior judge today refused to take Joan Crawford's word—via a deposition—that she should be divorced from Franchot Tone.

Judge Benjamin Scheinman continued the case until April 18. And so Joan, in New York, announced she would return home Sunday—"ready to testify personally when the case is called."

"I want to see the plaintiff as well as hear her testimony," the judge said after Joan's attorney explained it was necessary at the moment for her to be in New York—where the reporters find her much in the company of Franchot. Hollywood recalled Miss Crawford was very friendly with her first husband, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., after their divorce.

"I think that a vast majority of judges in this State follow that same policy in order to avoid the stigma that the courts are giving out so-called mail order divorces," Judge Scheinman said.

A witness to corroborate the detailed charges of cruelty against Actor Tone which Miss Crawford cited in her deposition was present, but was not called. She was Kashi Haroldi, former wife of Joan's brother, Hal Leseuer, and Joan's stand-in.

In New York last night Tone and his wife dined together on what they thought was the eve of their divorce. They talked, they laughed, they applauded and they danced.

As they left the night club a reporter asked, "Maybe the divorce will be called off?"

"No," replied Mrs. Tone, "it will not be called off."

McAfee Wins New Trial in Brutal Slaying

Gets Chance to Escape Chair in Death Of Mrs. Anderson

William (Major) McAfee, 63, colored, who was sentenced to death for beating a woman Government worker to death with a furnace shaker 19 months ago, was granted a new trial for technical reasons by the full bench of the Court of Appeals yesterday.

McAfee won a new chance to escape the electric chair after half a dozen reprieves and consideration of his fate for a year by the appellate court.

Mrs. Henrietta Barbara Anderson, widow of a war veteran, mother of two children and a clerk at the Veterans' Administration, was found murdered Sunday, August 22, 1937, in her apartment at 1633 L street northwest. Her skull had been crushed.

A trail of blood led to McAfee's working quarters in the basement, when he kept his tools as a janitor. He was drunk when arrested. Next day he confessed the crime and said the woman was chasing him with an ice pick.

Later McAfee blamed the killing on jealousy and made shameful charges against Mrs. Anderson. Investigating officers said they determined these to be unfounded.

McAfee's confession was admitted on evidence when he was tried in October, 1937, and he was sentenced to death. Attorneys Robert I. Miller and Joseph A. McMenamin carried their objections at the trials to the Court of Appeals.

Justice Stevens wrote the court's opinion. Justice Miller agreed with Justice Stevens throughout. Chief Justice Groner, Justices Vinson and Edgerton dissented from portions of the opinion and agreed with other portions.

Held Properly Admitted

Justice Stevens held, with only Edgerton disagreeing, that the confession was properly admitted.

The trial court did the jury that even if the confession was voluntary they must consider whether the suspect understood what he was signing.

The trial judge used the language, "if a confession is freely and voluntarily made," it ought to be considered of great importance. This language did not satisfy the Court of Appeals, however. Justice Stephens commented, "at no place in these instructions is the jury in express terms told that if they find the confession to be involuntary they must disregard it."

Indore Rajah Marries American Girl

Wife of Indian Prince Thought to Be California Nurse

Indore, India, March 28.—The wealthy, Oxford-educated young Maharaja Yeshwant of Indore surprised his subjects today by announcing he had followed in the footsteps of his abdicated father and married an American girl.

He told an assemblage which included nobles and officials he had decided on the marriage to give himself "the mental peace" necessary for the proper discharge of "my duties as a ruler" over the 1,325,000 inhabitants of his central Indian state.

The 30-year-old ruler, son of the former Maharaja Tokoji Rao Holkar, whose marriage to the American, Nancy Miller, in 1928, caused a sensation, said the wedding had taken place recently in Europe.

The bride's name was said by the government publicity director to have been "Miss Branyen" and earlier her name was given as Marguerite Lawler. She and the Maharaja were understood to have met in California about two years ago.

(It was believed that the bride was Marguerite Lawler, 30-year-old nurse who attended the Maharaja during his California visit. She was born at Fargo, N. Dak., and was one of seven original Union Pacific Railroad nurse stewardesses who lived at Los Angeles and Omaha. She formerly was married to John Paul Branyen, of Los Angeles.)

Announcement of the marriage was received with less opposition than was expected, since the Maharaja is the descendant of a shepherd and therefore not of a high caste Hindu dynasty.

Maharaja Yeshwant visited Los Angeles a few years ago with his first wife, the daughter of the junior chief of Kagal, in 1936. She died in 1937.

the reciprocal trade agreement with Great Britain, a heavy exporter of textiles to this country, Japan, the other principal exporter of textiles to the United States, manufactures them from American cotton.

The principal purpose of the cotton proposal, it was learned, is to break the log-jam created in cotton exports as a result of the Administration's loan policy.

Mr. Roosevelt admitted that the present cotton loan of 8.3 cents a pound has proved a "price-pegging" loan. But he blamed this on the heavy cotton surplus, which now amounts, he declared, to 8,000,000 bales in excess of the normal 5,000,000-bale carryover.

"Foreign cotton," he said, "is underselling our cotton in world markets and is likely to continue to do so until we restore American cotton to its normal competitive position."

The fact that foreign cotton is underselling American staple is a direct result of the loan policy, which, it was revealed, permits sale of foreign cotton at prices from one-half to seven-tenths of a cent below comparable American staple.

Mr. Roosevelt definitely blamed the Supreme Court for the cotton surplus problem. It is due mainly, he said, to the 1937 crop of nearly 19,000,000 bales which "followed invalidation by the Supreme Court of the control provisions of the Agricultural adjustment act."

It is a historical fact, he remarked, that the court's decision caused an interlude of one year in the department's control program. Several years of adjustment will be necessary, he said, "to bring our supplies back to normal."

$1.25 a Bale to Farmers

Farmers who have obtained loans against cotton held by the Commodity Credit Corporation would be paid $1.25 a bale to release title.

No subsidy would be paid on cotton for domestic use. The subsidy, however, would apply to all cotton for export. Although details of the plan have not been worked out, payment of the $1.25 per bale may be limited, it is understood, to 1937 loan cotton—that is, to the big crop.

Mr. Roosevelt said that, if he adopted the advise of some editorial desks, he would withdraw the loan and let cotton drop back to the depression price of 4½ cents a pound. He declared, however, that he was thinking of the welfare of cotton farmers. The prevailing loan price, he declared, is only about one-half parity price. For this reason, the loan will be continued for 1939.

Against Burning Surplus

The 8,000,000 bales of "excess" cotton, he commented, could be towed out into the Gulf of Mexico and allowed to sink, or it could be burned. He favored the export subsidy plan. Some action is imperative, he declared, to prevent the 1939 crop from increasing the excess to a still higher figure—in other words, to prevent the loan policy from doing more harm than good.

Emphasizing that the purpose of the cotton plan was merely to restore this country's normal competitive position, the President said it was not contemplated that subsidized exports would exceed average exports in past times.

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized that an effort would be made to avoid depressing prevailing world prices for cotton.

Roosevelt Text on Cotton Exports

The cotton situation requires prompt and effective action. Loan stocks total more than 11,000,000 bales and if our exports continue at their present rate our shipments of cotton abroad for the year ending August 1, 1939, will be the lowest in more than 50 years. And unless we build a spillway out of the loan we are likely to add several million more bales from the 1939 crop to the mass overhanging the market. Carrying charges alone on the cotton already in the loan approximate $45,000,000 annually.

The present status of the cotton industry goes back in large part to the almost 19,000,000 bales of cotton we grew in 1937. This record crop followed the invalidation by the Supreme Court of the control provisions of the original agricultural adjustment act. Since that time another law enabling an effective control program has been enacted, but several years of adjustment will be necessary to bring our supplies to normal.

So great is the cotton surplus that the current loan of 8.3 cents a pound—a loan only a little more than half of parity—has proved a price-pegging loan. Foreign cotton is underselling our cotton in world markets and is likely to continue to do so until we restore American cotton to its normal competitive position.

This might be done by abandonment of the loan if we did not take the welfare of the growers into account. But abandonment of the loan for this year means a sharp drop in the already pitifully meager income of producers. The continuance of protection for the growers necessitates the continuance of the loan for 1939 and, with that continuance, action to prevent the loan from doing more harm than good.

Objectives Listed

A cotton program at this time should include the following objectives:

(1) The merchandising in an orderly fashion of our excess supplies of cotton:

(2) The maintenance of our fair share of the world market for cotton:

(3) The protection of producer income;

(4) The accomplishment of our aims with the least possible cost to the Treasury.

Various proposals are pending which aim at the retention and expansion of our foreign markets for cotton and the reduction of loan stocks. Of them, I believe the best plan is an export program for cotton, a program which would include a payment on all cotton exported during the life of the plan.

The details of such a plan remain to be worked out, but it probably would include:

(1) A payment of $1.25 per bale to producers who release their loan cotton to the market.

(2) A moderate payment on all cotton exported after the plan goes into operation.

Would Protect Inventories

Such a plan would protect mill inventories by fixing a rate at which cotton could be released from the loan. I believe there is ample authority under existing legislation to establish import quotas which would protect both the domestic producers of raw cotton and probably domestic manufacturers as well from foreign importations. A payment could be made on exports of manufactured goods so the program would not put them at a disadvantage in the world markets.

Frankly, I wish it were possible immediately to expand domestic uses of cotton to the point where our own people would absorb the surplus. That time has not yet arrived and pending its arrival our farmers and consumers too will be injured unless we protect our foreign markets.

The plan does not contemplate payments on exports in excess of our average exports over a representative period in the past. What we are proposing is to restore the normal competitive position of American cotton and our normal share of the world market.

An export plan for cotton should cost a good deal less than proposals to pay the growers to keep their cotton out of the loan. The export program calls only for payments on cotton sold abroad; the other plan calls for payments on all the crop. And the export proposal promises to be more effective in retaining and expanding our foreign markets.

Effort to Restore Order

As you know, an export program has been in effect for wheat for several months. This program was adopted to retain our share of the world wheat market. I believe the majority of wheat producers will agree the plan is one of the reasons why wheat prices in this country are more than 20 cents higher, as compared with the normal relationship, than Liverpool prices. The rejection of an export plan for cotton is certain to raise doubts as to the advisability of its continuance for wheat.

I want to emphasize that the proposal for a cotton export program is in no sense a repudiation of the reciprocal trade programs. If the spirit behind these trade programs had prevailed in the post-war era it would not be necessary now to take steps to protect our export markets. The reciprocal trade programs are an effort to restore order out of the chaos prevailing in international trade. They should be pressed vigorously.

I believe the export plan, if put on a sound and workable basis, will not only help the cotton farmers, but will help the entire industry. As I see it, this plan would not do away with the long-established system for handling cotton, but would eventually reduce surpluses and restore trade so that this system could be put on a firmer basis.

Need Of Analysis

The value of the inquiry into the WPA just voted by the House will depend largely, if not altogether, upon the methods followed in assembling and analyzing data.

What Congress urgently needs is guidance in the formulation of a basically sound relief program to take the place of the WPA. It would be worse than a waste of time for members of the Appropriations Committee entrusted with the investigation to devote their efforts either to "whitewashing" the relief organization or attempting to discredit it for political reasons. Furthermore, there is no need for prolonged hearings in Washington or extended journeyings about the country to pile up evidence upon which to base decisions.

A great amount of information has already been assembled about the WPA by Congressional committees, by local investigations and in hearings on appropriation bills. Moreover, a comprehensive study has just been completed for the use of an advisory group appointed by Col. Somervell, WPA administrator for New York City.

This document discusses in great detail problems of policy connected with the administration of relief not only on a local but a national scale. It is analysis of this kind more than additional facts that Congress needs if it is to legislate intelligently. Hence a study of available material is likely to yield more fruitful results than listening to a succession of witnesses appearing to condemn and defend the existing system.

Furthermore, time presses, for Congress will soon be called upon to vote relief appropriations for the coming fiscal year. Already it is too late to place a really effective curb upon WPA spending this year. The most that can be hoped for is that Congress will insist upon withholding part of the deficiency appropriation requested. And even a modest economy gesture is lacking in force when Congress is without a constructive relief plan for reducing costs.

Representative Cox has rightly emphasized the importance of conducting the House inquiry in an impartial manner, without hostility to the WPA or to those who administer it. But neither Mr. Cox nor other speakers appeared to be adequately impressed with the importance of a thoroughgoing examination of the basic problems of relief that call for solution.

To some the inquiry seemed designed primarily to determine what validity lay in charges of political graft and maladministration. Others expected it to throw light on the necessary cost of relief under the existing system. These are short-run objectives that have the advantage of drawing attention to the relief problem. But the House inquiry will not be of much value unless it constitutes a basis for a complete overhauling of the relief system, with a view to evolving something distinctly better.

Standing Firm

While Mussolini is prodding France to make colonial concessions to Italy, Hitler has begun to put pressure on Poland to permit the return of Danzig to the Reich.

However, both France and Poland appear to be standing firm. Reports from Paris indicate that the Daladier government will refuse to negotiate with Italy on matters at issue between the two nations if Rome advances any claim for French territory. Poland, for her part, is indicating that she is prepared to fight rather than submit to the Third Reich. An extraordinary national loan has been floated by the Warsaw government, reserves have been called up and rallies held throughout the country.

The point is that now, as heretofore, the nations from whom concessions are demanded are under temptation to give way in order to avoid trouble. It is such submission to Fascist bullying that has enabled the totalitarian powers to score a long succession of triumphs. Yet, as the case of Czecho-Slovakia has made plain, there is no certainty that either Hitler or Mussolini can long be content with even far-reaching concessions. There is, on the contrary, every likelihood that concessions will be regarded by them merely as a sign of weakness and therefore as the signal to press further.

This fact is now realized in Paris, in Warsaw and in London. A stiffer attitude on the part of those governments is, therefore, the inevitable result. And far from increasing the danger to their nations such a strong stand, if maintained, is very likely to turn the tide in Europe toward peace.

The End Of Civil War

On July 23, 1936, discussing the revolt which had then just flared out in Spain, we noted in these columns that this was "civil war on which is superimposed a merciless class struggle, making the combat not merely sectional but one which divides every village, town and city throughout the land."

A week later The Post expressed the opinion that this new element of class war "may easily become more inhuman and more terrible in its effects than any of the historic national rivalries. Not since the religious hatreds of the Thirty Years War methodically devastated much of northern Europe has such an appalling prospect been spread before the highly-developed civilization of that continent."

The events of the past 32 months in Spain have more than justified those gloomy forebodings. In nearly every province the physical destruction has been enormous. The toll of human life is estimated at one in every five of the population. But more dreadful even than these losses is the bitterness which the long struggle has engendered, the hatreds stirred by excesses impossible to condone. No phase of reconstruction will be more vital to the future of Spain than the elimination of these attitudes. For while they are uppermost the military success of the Nationalists can produce no national unity worthy of the name.

Upon the victors now rests the major responsibility for moral reconstruction. Adherents of the fallen government must, of course, be expected to accept loyally and faithfully the change of regime brought by the arbitrament of war. But those who have conquered must also realize that a policy of vengeance, no matter how justifiable, will never secure allegiance from the defeated, that co-operation can never be exacted from brave men by punitive measures.

On dozens of hard-fought battlefields the Nationalists have demonstrated their military prowess. It remains for them to prove the even nobler virtues of wisdom, restraint and magnanimity toward the equally courageous supporters of the republic. With few exceptions these too are Spaniards; these too are proud of their inheritance and their country; these too have demonstrated willingness to give their all for an ideal. Victors and vanquished talk the same language, have the same background, confront the same urgent problems. There is no longer room for animosity between them.

There has been comforting indication, in the two months since Barcelona fell, that Gen. Franco has stature to confront the enormous task before him. At any time in these two months he could have swept the crumbling republican armies into defeat. At any time since January he could have taken Madrid by frontal attack. He has preferred to hold his hand, to avert further bloodshed, to let the capital of Spain drop painlessly into the hollow of his hand, as happened yesterday. For these wise tactics thousands of those who fought his military rising will now regard the Nationalist chieftain as a leader whom they too can trust.

The greater his magnanimity, the more pronounced will be this trend; the more widespread the voluntary loyalty now accorded Franco the better the prospects for Spaniards from both camps. Recriminations as to the causes or conduct of the slaughter now ended will serve no useful purpose. Rejoicing that it is over, on the other hand, may be a prelude to a brighter future for this shattered people.

Spaniards of this generation can never forget the 32 months of civil war now ended. But they can forgive. And the obligation to be charitable rests most heavily upon the victors. This is not merely because theirs is today the power and the glory. The obligation is even heavier because it has been the proud claim of the Nationalists to fight for that religion which above all others decries revenge and advocates mercy.

If the Nationalist leaders rise to their heavy responsibilities, in the spirit of the Christianity which they acclaim, the prospects ahead for Spain may seem as bright as they were obviously tragic in July of 1936.

Five Generations

Alexander Graham Bell probably influenced more destinies than any monarch who ever lived, not excluding our modern dictators. Everyone knows that he invented the telephone and thereby revolutionized the business side of civilization. But in contemplating the aura of international acclaim which surrounds him, we sometimes lose sight of the fact that for 40 years he was one of Washington's first citizens. So it is peculiarly fitting that the premiere of "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" should be presented in Washington, under the auspices of the National Geographic Society, of which he was the second president.

Before the war, Dr. Bell's old home on Connecticut avenue, near Dupont Circle, was the scene every Wednesday evening of a gathering of eminent scientists and men of letters, many of whom will be in the audience which honors him tonight. These famous meetings continued up to the time of Dr. Bell's death in 1922, and to this day are widely remembered for their contributions to the advancement of science, and for the variety of the topics discussed. Also remembered are his many civic contributions, such as the foundation and endowment of the Volta Bureau, an organization to promote the interests of the deaf, which still flourishes in Georgetown.

Five generations of Dr. Bell's family are represented in Washington history. Both his father, Alexander Melville Bell, and his father-in-law, Gardiner Greene Hubbard, the latter one of the founders of the National Geographic Society, lived here. His son-in-law, Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, has been the editor of the National Geographic Magazine since 1899, and his grandson, Melville Bell Grosvenor, is now assistant editor.

Among the interested spectators at the preview tonight in Constitution Hall will be the fifth generation, Melville Bell Grosvenor's three children. For them there will be unfolded on the screen an old, old story, handed down from generation to generation. Often have they heard of the sublime romance which flowered side by side with Dr. Bell's achievements in the realm of science. On the screen they will see re-enacted the story of a tender love that lasted from the time Alexander Graham Bell and Mabel Hubbard met until they were parted by death.

Fixing Responsibility

In previously delaying its hearings on the proposed amendments to the national labor relations act, and now in fixing a date for those hearings to go forward, the Senate Labor Committee has shown good judgment. There is no inconsistency in these two decisions. Hearings were postponed to give the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. an opportunity to patch up their differences. By this action the committee sustained the almost universal hope that unity in the labor movement will be restored. But it is not willing to jeopardize modification of the Wagner act at this session of Congress by delaying consideration of amendments indefinitely.

By fixing April 11 as the date for beginning these hearings the committee has left the rival labor groups ample opportunity to adjust their differences, if their will to agree is sufficiently strong. Indeed, the fact that the committee is determined to go forward with the hearings, after allowing a reasonable time for the desired rapprochement, may stimulate the labor negotiators to renewed efforts. For it is obviously to the advantage of organized labor to establish a united front before legislation so vital to its welfare is overhauled.

On the eve of the committee's decision the case for amendment of the Wagner act was greatly strengthened by the opinion of the local Court of Appeals in the Zirkin case. In plain language Justice Harold M. Stevens pointed out that the act now operates to create "inequality before the law as between an employer and employes." Indeed, the effect of the decision was to inform the appellee that his cause is just, but so long as the Wagner act stands as it is the courts can do nothing for him.

The court manifested a fine sense of judicial responsibility in ordering the lower tribunal to dissolve an injunction by which picketing of the Zirkin establishment in Washington had been restrained. The court found no basis in law for the injunction. "Where, under the language of the statute, the intent of Congress is plain," Justice Stevens said, "it is the duty of the courts to apply the statute as it stands, even if the consequence is hardship and injustice." Complaints of such injustice, it was pointed out, must be addressed to Congress.

That clear judicial reasoning centers responsibility for eliminating "the one-sidedness of the act." For a long time it has been evident that employers who are willing to bargain collectively with any organization set up by their employes may nevertheless be "caught between the upper and nether millstones of disputing groups or unions." But Congress has waited to see whether the courts would not, in one way or another, smooth over these sources of injustice. Now that possibility seems to have disappeared.

In this case, as the court noted, the majority union had no incentive to ask the National Labor Relations Board to hold an election for choice of collective bargaining agents. The minority group resisted an election for obvious reasons. And the employer has no right to call upon the NLRB to settle the dispute. So his shop may be picketed indefinitely, even though all his present employes are working contentedly under a union contract.

Since the act was passed before the labor movement split into rival factions, Congress could not have foreseen this particular problem. Yet if the law were even-handed as between employes and employers, damages resulting from disputes of this sort could at least be minimized. In spite of the complications arising out of the labor schism, Congress is now obligated to give this statute the balance it so conspicuously lacks.

Taxicab Problems

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I must express myself as being against the newly instituted taxi zone fares —20, 40, 60, 80 cents. This step will only be harmful to the industry. It will result in a loss of patronage and will simply compound the present unfairness of the zone system. If the Public Utilities Commission is forbidden to provide a low meter rate, the least they could do would be to realign the zones so as to eliminate the inequalities.

Each and every legislative and regulatory step in recent years affecting the taxicab industry has been a step to hamper and throttle an industry which supports wholly or in part about 20,000 people in the District.

We who drive cabs and support our families thereby are not crying for higher fares. We want fair fares that will promote patronage and permit the industry to be of more service to more and more people.

Congress and the PUC want to cut down the number of cabs in operation. Who is going to employ the men thus deprived of their livelihood? Maybe the officials will expand the relief rolls and permit the community at large to support us.

In my opinion, no taxi fare should be less than 25 cents. But two people should be able to ride 2 miles for that quarter. After that first zone there should be at least four or not more than five equal-size 10-cent zones. This would more nearly insure that the paying public would get its money's worth and the drivers would more nearly be paid for service rendered. This system would eliminate glaring inconsistencies in present zones.

A very important point that I want to stress is the question of ownership of the $25 PUC license. At present, fleet operators are rushing large numbers of new cabs on the street in anticipation of impending limitation. These cabs are ostensibly being sold to the men driving them. But the PUC license is in the name of the fleet operator. In the event of limitation it would not matter whether the driver ever paid out his contract or not. He would just own a private car, as the PUC license would remain in the name of the fleet owner, who could then put out a new cab under the same license.

The limitation bill should contain a provision to the effect that the PUC license be transferred to the buyer-driver immediately. Otherwise the purpose of the limitation bill would be defeated.

Foreign Jobholders

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At this time, would it not be appropriate to paint a true picture of actual conditions existing right here on our own front doorsteps?

I refer in one instance to the recent employment of an immigrant in Alexandria as an electrician's helper, and the statement in the press at that time that the employment of this young man would not displace anyone else. I ask these writers to explain just how they square this statement with the actual fact that there have been many thousands of American-born Americans who have been out of work for years and who would have gladly accepted even a place as an apprentice or electrician's helper.

I say keep all foreigners out of the country until we have taken care of our own people with some sort of employment. Everyone knows that the WPA and the PWA have been used primarily for political purposes and will continue to be used that way so long as the New Deal is in power.

How to Economize

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President states that unless Congress appropriates $150,000,000 more for relief at once he will have to drop 1,200,000 WPA men. It does not seem to me that this would be at all necessary and I sincerely hope Congress will continue to fight for economy, lower taxes, encouragement to industry and, as a result, reduction of unemployment.

The President can easily take care of all the relief necessary (and balance the budget) by reducing the Government's enormous expenditures in many ways. Of the many that could be named, I will only state one. Stop at once all Government work that in any way, shape or form competes with or interferes with industry, or work that could be conducted by industry.

That would save a vast amount of money. It would also encourage industry to expand, take men out of the ranks of the unemployed and give them living wages, instead of the starvation $10-a-week-wage many, many thousands now receive.

War and Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The latest sophistry trumpeted by the isolationists to scare the American people from co-operating with other decent world citizens in establishing law and order in the world is the entirely false assertion that war inevitably destroys democracy, turning it into dictatorship—that democracies emerge from wars as dictatorships!

This insults our Stars and Stripes! Our Republic was established by the Revolutionary War. The Civil War extended our democracy—it freed the slaves, broadened the franchise. After none of our wars was our democracy less. Always, after a temporary "supreme command," which is not cognate to real dictatorship, we automatically reverted to our normal processes. This is a fixed national habit.

Other countries show similar experience. Switzerland gained her independence through war, and other peoples too numerous to mention. Russia, after the war with Japan, set up a Parliament. The World War even brought a republic to Germany, which they bungled. It brought a republic to Czecho-Slovakia, which they did not bungle, but managed to the admiration of all.

History shows that liberty is won only by fighting for it, or by uniting in a federation to maintain it. Also, that you preserve liberty only as long as you are willing and able to put forth the necessary energy.

On the other hand, the dictatorship of Germany was fastened on its people in time of peace, also those of Italy and Japan and other examples in history. If war comes, let us not burden our souls with this added unnecessary grief that we must bid final farewell to our liberties!

The Serum Bank Fund

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the last regular meeting of the board of lady visitors of the Children's Hospital I was requested to write you a note expressing the very deep gratitude of the board for the part The Washington Post took in sponsoring the St. Valentine's Day bridge parties for the Children's Hospital Blood and Serum Bank Fund.

We received a check for $1,950 which has been added to since then, bringing the total amount to a little over $2,000.

This is the beginning of a very fine piece of work from which the hospital and its little patients both benefit. ELIZABETH W. LEE.

Majority Rule

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In 1916 the Democratic Party, headed by President Wilson, won the election on the promise to keep us out of war. In 1920 we had a recession in business and the Republican Party was returned to power, the majority believing the war was a mistake. In 1929 we had a business depression; in 1930 the majority disapproved; in 1932 the depression was still on and the majority put the Democrats back in power. In 1937 we had a recession in business and the majority disapproved in 1938.

Since we have the greatest reserve wealth of any nation on earth, I wonder if it is an established fact that the majority has nothing to do with this important issue. But if so I would like to know how we may obtain an efficient Congress.

Was The "War To End War" A Failure?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We can all agree when Senator Borah again reminds us that the best defense against totalitarianism is a triumphant exhibition of democratic success; and when he points out how impossible it will be for the United States to collaborate with those British leaders who, in their exaggerated fear of communism, have given aid to Hitler. These leaders, however, are not the British people.

Three of the Senator's points are wide open to objection. It is true that Europe is embittered and impoverished. Europe is sick. Is the Senator's conclusion that of all things we must not do anything to help her?

He complains that the European democracies are more interested in the "imperialism" of the totalitarians than in the wickedness of their form of government. What does he expect? Should we, or anyone else, interfere in the internal affairs of other nations? Isn't our business with what they are doing—with their predatory policies, which are somewhat stronger than ordinary imperialism?

He cites the "failure" of our expedition to Europe in 1917-18 as a warning against ever trying to do anything again. But the expedition did not fail. Its object was to block Germany's bid (or supposed bid) for world power. And it accomplished that. The failure was later, with the League of Nations. A widespread, if not general, European opinion today is that this failure was determined by the abandonment of the League by this country. The Senator was one of the leaders in bringing about this abandonment.

That is not the worst of it. One powerful reason for action against the League was the unwillingness of Senators to sacrifice any portion of their power and prestige. But some such sacrifice is an indispensable feature of any plan for co-operation. This Nation settled a similar conflict very differently when the Constitution was adopted. Then there were local politicians who opposed union for reasons much the same as kept us out of the League. If there had been a few more "isolationists" in the States in 1787 there would be no United States today—and this land might be another Europe.

The Post Impressionist

Real Estate

"What am I offered, ladies and gentlemen, for this fine example of eighteenth century architecture set in 30 acres of farm land?

"In 1740 an old man died and left his property to this three sons. The two eldest took the high, good land to the south and east. One of their houses is now an inn. The State police use the other as a barracks. But what the tourists make of the scroll-and-roll paneling in the one or what the cops do in the great barrel room of the other is not our immediate concern. The youngest brother, Titus Hutton, built this house. It's not so grand as the other two; but solid, gentlemen, you can inspect the cellar for yourselves. And, ladies, this very fireplace here was used then for cooking all the food. Maybe he was angry, this younger brother, because his land was low and sour and he could build only a simple farmer's house.

"Or, maybe, English raised, he took it for granted that he should have the least. Anyway, he built solidly, and maybe he planted that elm tree, or maybe he left it where it was already growing—a slender thing, it must have been then. He lived and died, and what he thought we don't know, only that he got the least good out of his father's death.

"That was many years ago, ladies and gentlemen, and we can't pretend to say about all the people who lived here. But, around 1800, I should say, somebody built a new barn—built it of hand-hewn timbers for three cows and a couple of horses. And it may have been 60 years later that the apple orchard was planted. The trees are old now—only good for sitting under or for children to climb in. But at the time of the War Between the States they bore firm Baldwins and Macs, and there is one Northern Spy. And maybe it was that same person who planted the apples who drained the lower field, thinking to have a hay crop out of it at least.

"If you were to climb into the loft of the barn, you would see 1910 burned on a box that someone split up when he made the pigeon nests. Maybe he took squabs to the market, or maybe he liked the sound of cooing. There is no way to tell what kind of pigeons he raised, only the date when he thought of doing it. And now the swallows own the nests.

"In 1918 a couple bought the place, hoping to find peace on the land. They unbricked the fireplaces and bought an old spit to put in this one, the first having been long ago thrown out. They floored the milk house and used it to raise flowers in. They didn't try to farm the land, but dammed the pond and let the overflow go into the field that an earlier owner had drained. Because they planned to raise ducks.

"Change, ladies and gentlemen, everyone changes a little something during his life, even if its just to put things back like they were before. And, if you ask me, that's the way time gets measured in the end. This duck raiser must have come with high hopes, for he changed a great deal. He put a furnace in the cellar and side fixtures for the electricity. I think he neglected the apple orchard, old by then anyway, and worthless.

"Still, there's some would have sprayed and pruned till the trees fell apart; as some will feed and care for an old horse while others will sell it to the boneyard. People have their own ways and they get written down in the places where they live. Anyway, they made a nice little flower room out of the milk house and the man scattered duck hutches along the pond. It must have been a pretty sight in the spring to see all the young ducks bobbing for water weeds.

"But I guess the rats got more ducks than the man, because after eight years he sold the place—sold it to a young couple for what he could get. The man took the train into town every day. Ladies and gentlemen, his wife threw out the range and put in an electric stove. The man brought money out from the city and dug a big hole in the field and let the pond flow into it and made a swimming pool. These people were young and gay, as I said, they didn't harass the poor land to make money for them. They tended the elm tree. You can see the great scar that the tree experts hesled.

They built a dance floor down in the cellar and gave parties there. They were great parties, ladies and gentlemen, the people gave in the twenties. There was love and hatred born from them. Young folks left that little dance floor to become man and wife. Sweethearts left it never to speak again.

"The couple had children and forgot about dancing. They built the ell to hold the children and shut up the dance floor. To see it now, ladies and gentlemen, you'd think it had been closed since that Titus Hutton dragged the foundation stones with his two oxen But when things are passed, they are passed in a lump—gone, and it matters to only a few curious old gentlemen whether their passing dates from a hundred years or five years.

"This couple built a garage beside the barn—What's that, sir? The gentleman says that I have been talking about a barn and all he can see is a pile of logs and shingles out by the garage. The barn folded up in the hurricane a few months ago. It's not even good for firewood now. Yet the barn was a century younger than the elm tree, and that still gives grateful shade. You can't tell about things, ladies and gentlemen; some last and some don't. The old fireplace here still gives heat, but the swimming pool is cracked by frost, and leaks. But it was only a few years ago that the young people swam there, pretty and gay as the ducks in the springtime.

"So, ladies and gentlemen, what am I offered for this fine house and these 80 acres? You might think it empty, but you see it isn't. Planes of life criss-cross through it like the sun rays through Venetian blinds. Some folks say they like houses new. But you get more for your money when you buy old. You get the house and land and your own life to dance for a while in the sun. And you get all these other lives piled in, too—not in the way, at all, but piled like sun planes on top of each other, bright and warm.

Amateur Satires

THIS IS THE WEEK of the Dutch treat show in New York, one of a series of traditional or habitual amateur theatricals, occurring in various cities, in which artists, reporters, columnists, fictioneers, aldermen, State legislators, dentists and veterinarians smear rouge on their cheeks and sing crippled parodies on "Casey Jones" and "Old Gray Bonnet" to more or less pickled audiences. The spirit is one of revelry and, in the Gridiron and Dutch treat shows, at least the lyrics and sketches and the acting sometimes rise to the level of lower mediocrity by comparison with professional standards. Most of the material is intended to lampoon persons and issues of current national or parochial importance, but in actual fact the jesters more often lampoon themselves.

Of recent years in Washington, under the lively influence of Mrs. Roosevelt, who brought to Capital society the spirit of the taffy-pull or Halloween party, the ladies—God bless and forgive them!—have succumbed to the same temptation. They now indulge in charades under stately conditions which, in the White House, on the word of principal witnesses, have out-awfuled many things never perpetrated by the males that would be very bad indeed.

Gridiron Shows On High Moral Plane

THE GRIDIRON shows always proceed on a high moral plane, with neither word nor jest to offend the principles of a Sunday school superintendent. The Dutch treat, at times, employs cleverized vulgarity, and the Society of Illustrators, also of New York, has been known to present scenes which would make even a Minsky uneasy.

The Gridiron is the oldest of these fixtures and enjoys a prestige which has no proportion at all to the quality of actual entertainment. This prestige is due to the presence of the President of the United States, guest of honor and principal speaker, and of assorted diplomats, statesmen and bureaucrats at the long table. The other tables are occupied by invited guests of the 50 Gridiron members, including, not unnaturally, a large proportion of publishers, newspaper business managers and advertisers.

At one such party, when the defeated Presidential candidates of 1936 were invited to crumble bread with the winner, Norman Thomas, the Socialist, drove Earl Browder, the Communist, out of the place with a running fire of nasty remarks ostensibly addressed to Hugh Johnson, who sat between them. When the time came to introduce the losers to the audience Browder had vanished. He had appeared in a dinner jacket, scorning to wear the aristocratic white tie and tails, although the Soviet Ambassador, Mr. Troyanovsky, who was supposed to indicate the party's sartorial line, conformed to Washington custom without loss of standing, unless it could be that he has since been shot for this heresy.

Public Bosses Impose On Correspondents

WASHINGTON journalists' salaries, though good, are not lavish, but each member, nevertheless, pays about $100 a year for his guests at the dinner, including, frequently, the boss. They also often burden themselves with the bother of obtaining hotel reservations for these bosses who affect an air of helplessness in this matter and may feel ill-used if their rooms are not of the best, and, lately, if their wives are not invited to the distaff party at the White House.

The social complications arising from Mrs. Roosevelt's well-meant interference in the scheme constitute a pain in the neck, because every boss' wife or the wife of every guest advertiser thinks she is as good as anybody's wife and demands an invitation which must be produced by the Gridiron member whose own hospitality is entirely lost sight of. People forget that the Gridiron show is strictly a party for guests, not a racket like the familiar type of testimonial dinner.

There are minor Gridirons in some State capitals and city Gridironers under various names, having to do with State or city politics, and some of these produce localized doggerel, intended as a satire, which would make a hillbilly minstrel hide behind a corncrib and cut his throat. Guests, however, are put in a position which demands that they refrain from throwing rolls or French fried potatoes, and, to the credit of American manners, it must be reported that they sometimes do refrain.

Public Revulsion Anticipated Soon

SOME WHO do not wish to violate etiquette solve the problem by getting very drunk and staggering away. Far into the night such refugees may be seen and heard prowling the hotel corridors, waking up innocent Americans with their braying and pounding as they are trying to find where they left their overcoats and hats.

It has been observed that such productions are increasing in number and that new and old alike are growing rapidly worse, so perhaps a few years more will see a public revulsion and the return of the amusement business exclusively to the competent hands of men and women who make a profession of hamming it.

Poland's Tinder Box

The Ukrainian Problem

Warsaw.

TO THE WORLD the Ukraine has been featured as a European sore spot. But to Poland it seems of little international concern. In fact the closer one approaches eastern Galicia—base of the Ukrainian movement in Poland—the farther seems to fade the likelihood of German penetration, short of open war.

The heart of the Ukraine lies in Soviet Russia with its estimated 35,000,000 Ukrainians, and not in Poland with less than a fifth of that number. The dream of a Greater Ukraine encircling the Ukrainians of Russia, Poland and even sub-Carpathian Ukraine and Rumania, hinges primarily on the breakdown of Russia from within or aggression from without.

The Ukrainians of eastern Galicia are becoming more and more separatist in their sentiments, owing to the failures of their frequent demands for antonomy. But they apparently think in terms of an independent Greater Ukraine and not of a separate state confined to their people now in Poland.

IN POLAND the Ukrainians do not form a mass bloc. According to the official census of 1931 there are only two districts in the country, where they are in a majority. In the city of Lwow, center of the Ukrainian movement—the Poles far outnumber the Ukrainians. This is true in most towns, while in the rural communities the Ukrainians are likely to predominate. But in their autonomy demands they lay claim to districts where the Poles are in a majority.

The frequently quoted figure of 7,000,000 Ukrainians in Poland needs explanation. It includes the Ruthenians, Ukrainians, and the White Ruthenians. According to the official figures of 1931 these total about five and a half millions, but allowance must be made for the rapid increase in population and the natural "modesty" of government figures.

Not All Ukrainians Strongly Nationalist

THERE IS a great difference in the national consciousness of these various branches. Following the eastern border of Poland from north to south one finds varying degrees of national feeling. The White Ruthenians, some authorities say, consider themselves more Russian than Ukrainian. In the Polesie district the White Ruthenians and Ukrainians have almost no national consciousness, in Volhynia there is a little more. But to the south in eastern Galicia the Ukrainians are strong nationalists and very annoyed because the Poles won't allow them to develop this feeling in Volhynia.

Undoubtedly the reason for this advanced nationalism in eastern Galicia was due to the Austrian regime of prewar days. For it was Austria which really created the Ukrainian problem and even brought the word "Ukraine" into use. The purpose was to keep down the Poles by encouraging the Ukrainians—the aristocrats and landowners being Polish and imbued with a strong sense of nationality themselves.

Another factor breaking the unity of the Ukrainians in Poland is religion. For in these parts religion is closely related to nationality. When a Tsar wanted to Russify his subject Ukrainians in the Volhynia and Polesie districts he converted them to the Greek Orthodox Church. But those of eastern Galicia, under Austria, were Uniats (the eastern rite of the Roman Catholic Church). Today it is their Archbishop Szeptysky who is the central figure of the Ukrainian movement, although his own brother is a famous Polish general.

The Uniats would like nothing better than to convert their brothers of Volhynia to their church, while the Poles hope to persuade them to the Latin rite of Roman Catholicism and thus to make them Poles.

FROM THIS confusion of different racial branches and religious one can see some of the obstacles a national Ukrainian movement has to surmount. Such a movement is undoubtedly strong in eastern Galicia, but there again it is divided in ideology, although not essentially in the ultimate goal. There are parties ranging from left to right, yet Fascists and Social Radicals can all agree in the aim of autonomy and the dream of independence. Only one organization, a very active woman's party, has succeeded in drawing together all shades of opinion. Whatever the party affiliation of the husbands, their wives belong to a single group which consequently has a force all its own.

The largest Ukrainian party is the UNDO. This party came to terms with the government after the Polish-German accord in 1934; and in the recent elections of November it co-operated with Warsaw and sent 14 deputies to parliament from eastern Galicia. There are also five deputies from Volhynia, bringing the total to only 19 Ukrainians out of 208 deputies.

An important branch of the UNDO did not approve of this policy toward the government, but a reconciliation between the two took place early in February, and was considered a possible prelude to further unification of the different Ukrainian parties—the USRP (Social Radicals), USDP (Social Democrats), and the FNY (Fascist group).

THE UNDO was in an unfortunate position. Having decided to co-operate with the government it had nothing to show for a result. In December they presented a petition for autonomy, more probably to justify themselves than out of any hope that this time it would succeed. They demanded territorial autonomy with their own Parliament and a government responsible to it; foreign and military affairs they left to the jurisdiction of the central government.

The petition was disregarded on the ground that it would necessitate a change in the constitution, and therefore required many more signatures. On that basis there are not enough Ukrainian deputies in Parliament to bring up the petition.

Besides the regular parties there are other organizations, one of which—the UWO—should be mentioned for its terrorist activities. It used to have its headquarters in Germany and very possibly still has. Because of its clandestine character there is little accurate information about its activities. But its work has been anti-Russian as well as anti-Polish; and it is rumored that the Japanese were very interested in it. Col. Konovaletz, who was recently murdered in Holland by a Soviet agent, belonged to this organization.

Germany's Role Not Easy To Discover

HOW MUCH basis there is for suspecting German agitation in eastern Little Poland is difficult to say.

In Lwow itself there are rumors of German money being used to further Ukrainian aspirations, but no outward evidence. And, of course, the Ukrainians deny that any of them, even those of opposing parties, receive such support. Probably much more American money—from Ukrainians in the United States—has gone into the movement than Nazi change.

Since the makings of agitation are there in the frustrated nationalism of the Ukrainians, there seems little need for outside propaganda unless and until Hitler contemplates bringing the question to a head. Although the Ukrainians of eastern Galicia are wary of the Germans, still any show of sympathy is welcome. If it comes from Berlin then the Ukrainians turn toward Germany, surprisingly confident that if once their Greater Ukraine is established it will be so strong that it can resist any foreign influence.

THIS SPEAKS for the Ukrainians of eastern Galicia, for while they are listening to a Ukrainian broadcast from Vienna, their brothers of the Volhynia are listening to the Russian stations. So their foreign orientation differs as to region and even as to social level; for the political leaders are apt to pin their hopes on Germany, while the Ukrainian peasant has a left tinge.

The barometer of relations between Poland and its subject Ukrainians varies with the relations between Warsaw and Berlin. If Germany and Poland are hitting it off, then the Ukrainian problem becomes less pressing.

The Poles generally feel that if concessions are made to the Ukrainians they will be just a prelude to further demands or even separation. Both of which would be dangerous for the Poles living in the areas. Moreover, the Polish government can hardly give the Ukrainians political privileges it denies its own peasantry. If more cultural autonomy and the demand for a Ukrainian university was met, as was practically promised some years ago, then many people fear that Ukrainian agitation would increase.

Home Front Sabotage

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Purse Patriots

THE WAR PROFITS taxation bill, introduced last week by Senator Bone on behalf of himself and 49 other Senators, is already causing agony in various quarters—among them the New York Times, Miss Dorothy Thompson, and, so I am informed, the Communist Daily Worker.

Last Saturday the New York Times announced on its front page, with an air of triumph, that among the Senatorial sponsors of the bill it could find only ten who avowed that they had read its full text. This is a 183-page revenue bill. Any bill of such length which has been read line by line by ten Senators before it has been considered in committee is a bill which has commanded unusual attention. In fact, as much can be said of any revenue bill which has been digested line by line at any time by ten Senators, with the exception of those who have worked on it in committee. I suspect that the bill had not been read line by line by any member of the staff of the New York Times before last Saturday.

But the New York Times knows the substance of the bill—and so do the Senators of all parties who are its sponsors. The substance is to be found on four pages—7, 8 and 9, which set up certain tax schedules, and 183, which makes these tax schedules effective upon the declaration by Congress that a state of war exists between the United States and any foreign government.

FOR CORPORATIONS the bill sets up a tax of 15 per cent on the first 2 per cent of profits on the adjusted declared value of the corporation's capital stock, 25 per cent on the next 4 per cent of profits, and 100 per cent on all profits in excess of 6 per cent.

For individuals, the bill reduces the personal exemption to $500 for an unmarried worker, and to $1,000 for a married worker, with an allowance of $100 for each dependent. It applies a normal tax of 6 per cent on all taxable income and a surtax which rises from 10 per cent on net income of between $3,000 and $5,000 to 93 per cent on net income in excess of $20,000.

Miss Thompson says that to adopt this war tax bill would "give notice to the world and ourselves that we shall accompany war with revolution," and so "make an international promise to commit suicide." The New York Times says it would "practically insure our industrial disorganization at the very moment when our industry would be called upon to function at its highest pitch."

So we are warned that if corporations and individuals with large incomes were so heavily taxed they would be too discouraged to work for the victory of their country. In short, there would be sabotage on the home front.

HOW MUCH INCOME and how much profit are necessary to induce these patriots of the home front to work while their country is at war? Both the New York Times and Miss Thompson suggest that it would be nice if war profits taxes were to take only the excess over normal peacetime profit. The New York Times proposes that the same principle be applied to personal income.

So we are warned that American corporations and recipients of large incomes won't do their part in the event of war unless they are assured of approximately their peacetime profits and incomes.

If that is so, it is well to know it before a single American youth is dispatched to face a foreign foe.

I doubt that most managers of American business and most recipients of large incomes are inclined to be so treasonable as Miss Thompson and the New York Times credit them with being.

Morally there can be only one attitude toward the bill of Senator Bone and his 49 colleagues. That is that it does not go far enough. It will permit corporations to make a substantial profit and individuals remaining safely at home to enjoy substantial incomes while others are risking their lives at the front.

BUT AS A PRACTICAL compromise, the bill seems reasonable. It is designed to preserve the system of private enterprise during the war. It permits capital to receive its "wage." It is an alternative—probably the only alternative acceptable to the American people—to the socialization of important enterprises during a war. It will still permit many thousands of people at home to receive larger remunerations than are paid to the highest officers of the Army and Navy.

On the economic side, Senator Bone's tax schedule, or something approximating it, would restrain a war inflation. We had one during the late World War, largely because we didn't tax heavily enough. The next time the inflation may be worse. A pay-as-you-go tax policy is the best check on inflation.

Some of the support for this bill arises, of course, from the belief that it will help to keep us out of war. It will not keep us out of any war in which we belong because we have a vital interest at stake. But it should subdue agitation for war, not only by those who would profit from it, but by those who, in the absence of a threat to their purses, feel free to indulge their personal animosities at the expense of other people's sons and fathers.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

On Party Material

MY ESTEEMED colleague, Mr. Louis Sobol, of the New York Journal and American, has been conducting his own Gallup poll on a party-for-twenty. He has asked his readers to tell him whom they would like to have at a party if they knew everybody and could invite anyone they liked.

The party turns out to be terrible. It includes the following persons: Hedy Lamarr, Dorothy Lamour, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, Helen Hayes, Clare Boothe Luce, Dorothy Parker, Anne Morrow Lindbergh, Eleanor Roosevelt, Dorothy Thompson, Elsa Maxwell, Thomas Dewey, J. Edgar Hoover, Anthony Eden, Orson Welles, W. C. Fields, Don Ameche, Bing Crosby, Noel Coward, Jimmie Durante and Winthrop Rockefeller.

These are the favorites, although a lot of other people got scattering votes. Among the runners-up were Hitler, Stalin, Mussolini, Chamberlain and Ghandi. A party including some of these understudies would really be wonderful. I would give a year of my life to listen to a conversation between Ghandi and Mussolini, or Ghandi and Hitler.

But as for Mr. Chamberlain, I don't really think he would be an asset at any party. I would much rather have his brother-in-law, were the brother-in-law still alive. (And while we are still on the subject, I think the brother-in-law would have been an admirable prime minister for Great Britain at this time. He is the gentleman who once put on an admiral's uniform and reviewed the British fleet. He also once roped off Piccadilly Circus and started digging it up. He held up the traffic for days, until it was finally discovered that there was no reason for digging up Piccadilly Circus. I am convinced he is the man that Great Britain should have sent to Munich. He had imagination and no sense of the limits of possibility.)

BUT TO GET BACK to this party: I do not know Miss Lamarr or Miss Lamour, but they are beautiful, and beauty is a help at any party. I have often observed that the gaze of a pair of beautiful eyes adds brilliance to any man's tongue, whether the lady is really following his conversation or not. If she just looks as though she were it is sufficient.

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek I don't know, but I greatly fear that she would use the occasion to raise a relief fund. That sometimes happens at parties nowadays and is a very dreary business. I would O. K. Helen Hayes. She is charming, intelligent, warm and that very rare thing, a marvelous listener.

Bing Crosby would not get to my party, from what I know of him at long distance. W. C. Fields was a good idea. Mr. Ameche I don't know.

If there is going to be an Englishman, I can think of many more amusing people than Anthony Eden—Harold Nicolson, for instance, or Vernon Bartlett. Anthony Eden looks wonderful, but he wears English shyness as the badge of his caste and it's extremely difficult for him to discard it. Anne Lindbergh is another shy person, whose very listening is remote. Orson Welles is perpetually wrapped in the mantle of his own destiny, and as for Dorothy Thompson, she is terrible. She always talks politics and has a horrible habit of holding forth. Given the slightest opportunity, she makes a speech, and nothing that she says to herself in the cab on the way home seems to cure her.

Only Three In List Viewed As First Class

IN FACT, on this whole list there are only three persons who are first-class party material, whatever their other virtues may be. They are W. C. Fields, Noel Coward and Clare Boothe Luce.

Dorothy Parker used to be first class. But she has recently gotten religion and is now full of social significance, which does not sit upon her lightly. She was always full of the pain of it all, but it used to be her own particular, peculiar and individual pain, mixed with the most mordant wit and the most irresistible self-mockery. She was never the first to speak, nor the second to speak, but usually the last to speak, and the next day the only one to be remembered.

Now, if I were having a party of 20 and my object was not to invite, necessarily, the people I admire most, or think to be the profoundest thinkers, or the noblest souls, but to pick the best imaginable party material, I would have quite a different list.

I would put Clare Boothe Luce first among the women. She is very beautiful. She is exquisitely dressed. She is really adult. She is interested in nearly everything and knows something—even a great deal—about nearly everything. She can discuss politics, letters, fashion, the stage and sports with equal vivacity and knowledgeability. She knows all the gossip—which is always a help at a party—but is sufficiently discreet and seldom really malicious. She is a delightful conversationalist, quick to pick up an idea, give it a new twist and toss it back to the sender. She never holds forth. If she has convictions, she keeps them to herself.

MY SECOND choice is Alice Roosevelt Longworth, because, like Mrs. Luce, she has an enormous range of interests, a beautiful speaking voice—her discrimination about vowels is exquisite.

She always manages to look as though she had thrown on last year's clothes at the last minute, and still remains distinguished. She has wit, spiced with malice and warmed by humor, and she is one of the finest listeners I have ever met. She listens with her whole personality, and she makes everybody feel that he is much more brilliant than he is. In the elation of that feeling he sometimes really is more brilliant than he is.

I would have Beatrice Lillie, because she looks wonderful and because, on the stage or off, she is always Beatrice Lillie, and the funniest woman alive. She is an irresistible combination of gamin and grande dame. She is my candidate for queen of any country anywhere, with a moratorium on conditions, situations and reactions for the period of her reign.

Mrs. Franklin P. Adams is marvelous party material. She looks like a ripe peach, she is an inveterate liker of everybody and she always has a good time.

I'd keep Helen Hayes, for reasons already mentioned; I'd ask Neysa MacMein, because she is a great good scout and men adore her. I'd ask Katharine Hepburn, because of a modest earnestness in the midst of so much good looks. Mrs. Ogden Mills Reid would be a perfect guest; she knows about everything and never reveals it unless pressed to do so. She never thinks about herself, but she does notice everybody else in the room, and invariably drifts toward any person who may for a moment be feeling uncomfortable.

THE CONCERT pianist, Ania Dorfman, can come to any party I ever give. She is feminine, warm, appreciative, and that rarest of all things, a concert pianist who really likes to play the piano if she likes the party. She plays like an angel and she always plays the right thing at the right moment, and you can get her away from the piano, too, when conversation picks up again after a charming interlude. And, finally, there is Eve Curie, now visiting in this country, the daughter of the great Mme. Curie and a young woman who has everything.

Now, for men: Noel Coward, by all means, for his wit, his vibrancy and his enormous intelligence on all sorts of subjects, including things most remote from the stage.

You can keep all the Senators, politicians, Presidents past, Presidents present, and Presidents future, but for a party give me "Kip" Fadiman—Clifton Fadiman, if you please—a man who makes a large part of his living by public speaking and never makes a public speech.

I'll exchange Jimmie Durante for Walter Duranty, full of gossip, oddities, information, history—ancient and contemporary—a natural viveur and a superb story teller.

Henry Mencken Can Come, If He Wants To

I'D ASK Henry Mencken if he would come to a party of 20, which I doubt. His rubicund countenance, resembling—somebody else has remarked—that of a butcher's boy, casts an oblique light over human folly, followed by volleys of silvery laughter. He would help keep this party within bounds. He is a perennial putter of salt on the bird's tail.

If Charlie Chaplin will once again tell the story of his adventures of hunting a wild boar in France, or if he will tell it a hundred times again, he can come to a hundred parties. But if he is going to talk about social credit, he can't.

Sinclair Lewis can come to all my parties, and not because it is his right. Nobody living talks better, if he likes the party. Nobody can kill a party sooner, if he does not. But he'd like this party. He never lets a conversation become an argument. He quickens the pace of everything. When things are boring, he explodes in epigrams and changes the subject. He can change the subject oftener and more entertainingly than any one I have ever known. Off the stage he is a marvelous actor.

For a soupcon of learning, epicureanly introduced so as not to unbalance the meal, I would ask two college presidents, Robert Maynard Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, and Stringfellow Barr, the president of St. John's, in Annapolis. Both of them are prodigiously educated, and you don't mind it at all. Both of them are marvelously good looking. Both of them talk, with all their learning, a racy idiom.

W. C. Fields, from the public's list, is O. K. And, finally, since I have got to be at this party myself, I shall ask my own favorite, Sir Willmott Lewis, the veteran correspondent of the London Times in Washington, and I shall drag him into a corner, and he and I will do our best to talk each other down.

Our Own Screen Test

1—What film comedian named W. C. Fields was once a juggler?

2—Name the picture produced during the last three years in which Lee Tracy, Mickey Rooney or the "Dead End Boys" did not appear.

3—What Hollywood producer was once professor of English literature at Harvard?

4—Who were the three sisters who played the three sisters in a play about three sisters?

5—In the play "Jesse James" how many lengthy conferences were held between executives before the idea of having Shirley Temple play Jesse James was killed?

6—What is there about Charles Laughton that reminds people of Charles Laughton?

7—Did Mickey Mouse play the lead in the screen play, "Brother Rat?"

9—Name an American college which forgot to give an honorary degree to Walt Disney during 1938.

10—Name a movie in which Bing Crosby ever appeared in which he appeared to be interested in his part.

13—What musical picture produced since 1908 has not had a supper night-club scene in it?

16—Is this statement true or false: Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain doesn't have to worry whether he is deposed or not; he can always get a job in "Gone With the Wind."

18—What movie star named Fredric March is now starring in a Broadway show starring Fredric March?

19—Name two pictures produced in the last 18 months which you did not object to as interfering with the newsreels and travelogues.

Your Figure, Madame!

—By Ida Jean Kain

A Lovely Posture Can Be Acquired By Earnest Work

MOST OF us are guilty of having a "special-occasion" posture which is assumed for very important or gala occasions. But if it is noticeably better than the every-day posture it is much too constrained to be graceful—and too uncomfortable to last!

A lovely posture is no superficial thing to put on or take off as you please. It must be built from the inside out and from the ground up, and if you want to stand out in the Easter parade, now is the time to begin changing your posture.

Here's the Routine

At a swank Fifth avenue salon which draws the beauties of the social and theatrical world, lessons in posture are the most highly prized commodity sold. If you were to enroll in one of these classes you would be taught to line up like this:

Stand in the bare feet, with the back to the wall and the feet about three inches from it. The feet should be flat on the floor about four inches apart and parallel, with the toes pointing straight ahead. That's groundwork for you! Ready? Without raising the heels from the floor, bend the knees and spread them apart. Dig into the wall with the small of the back—you can't do it unless you tuck the hips under. Pull up with the chest, and up with the muscles back of the ears. Have the chin in, shoulders back and relaxed.

No Easy Task

For the first day or so, you would do well to get your back to the wall according to the specifications. You are expected to carry out every one of those orders and to hold the position for several minutes. You will find that it isn't easy.

When you are able to complete this first part of the straightening-out process, you are ready for the real test—walking on the toes as you hold the tuck under-position of the hips, keeping the back straight, and pulling up with the tummy, chest and neck muscles. But first you have to get away from the wall. Do this by walking backward and rising on the toes at the same time, always, of course, holding that position you got yourself into! Then when the legs are straight, bend forward very slightly at the waist and place a book on top of the head. Walk about the room on the toes without letting the book fall off—and without holding it with the hands. Your hands are supposed to be down at the sides.

If you can manage to keep the book balanced as you walk, the chances are that your body is in perfect alignment, but it is a great advantage to be able to watch your performance in a full-length mirror. See how nice and slim your figure looks! That is the way you should look when walking in your high heels.

Keep Practicing

Keep practicing this little routine over and over. It may take a few days just to get the feel of good posture, and you may need additional exercises to strengthen the muscles of the abdomen and lower back.

Here is one similar to the line-up: Lie on the back on the floor, knees bent and up over the chest, arms straight out at the floor on the sides. Spread the knees apart but keep the feet together and try to glide the feet down on the floor without letting the small of the back rise off the floor.

Man Without Glamour

When he is herding along the sidewalk two or three small children, one of whom is demanding an ice cream cone.

When he is sheepishly going down the office stairs on pay day to meet his wife at the cashier's window.

When in the Sunday afternoon motor parade he is driving a sedan filled with several large aggressive-looking women and several children with balloons and all-day suckers.

Whe he is sitting around the house—or anywhere—in pants and undershirt.

When he is unable to fix the kitchen gadget that is broken, unable to pay the paper boy without borrowing from his wife, or unable to prove conclusively to whatever woman he is with that she is the weaker sex.

Man With Glamour

When he is freshly shaven, has a new haircut and that neat, clean, talcum powder look that indicates he is fresh from the barber shop.

When he rises gallantly and with a mere flick of the hand makes a "stuck" window on a street car go up or down.

When he sits calm and perfectly poised as a mouse darts across the floor.

When in the dead of night he gets up and advances boldly downstairs to investigate the strange noise that might be a burglar.

When he orders a meal in a restaurant in a definite, assured and masterful manner.

When he wears a dress suit with ease and distinction and as if he liked it.

When his authoritative voice causes a gang of dogs on the front lawn to disperse, or a group of quarreling children to become suddenly quiet.

One of Life's Mysteries

Why does every woman who joins a society—
Consider it a matter of evangelical piety
To make all the rest of us come to committee-meetings
And sit for hours listening to the bleatings
Of persons who have an obsession with dull details,
When we would so much rather be out buying hats and veils?

Mary Haworth's Mail

Should Mother Permit Daughter to Accompany Fiance on Week-End Visit to His Parents?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My daughter, aged 24, has asked permission to travel with her fiance on a week-end trip to his parents' home in New York City. Inasmuch as I know that "common gossip" will be created if I allow her to go, I am inclined to refuse her permission. Yet she is eager to visit her future "in-laws," and I do want her to be happy. Please advise me whether or not it would be better to refuse her permission to make the trip. Yours respectfully, HESITANT.

DEAR HESITANT: According to modern social usage, it is quite good form for an engaged girl to accompany her fiance on a week-end visit to his parents' home—providing, of course, that she has been expressly invited by his mother to make the visit; that the invitation has been duly accepted, and a mutually acceptable date decided upon. Of course, if an overnight journey were involved, she might prefer to arrange to meet her fiance at his home, purely as a means of nipping any possibility of idle gossip in the bud; but it isn't strictly necessary, by anybody's etiquette book.

In this instance, the trip can easily be made in an afternoon, going by train or motor; or in much less time, by plane. So there is no reason why your daughter shouldn't make the trip in company with her beau; providing, as I have already said, that arrangements for the visit have been engineered by her future mother-in-law. M. H.

Broods Over Past

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Some years ago it was necessary for me to fill out a paper giving information about myself, and since I knew so little, I wrote my maternal parent asking if the meager information I had was correct. I received no reply, and since it was necessary that the paper be turned in, I let it go as I had filled it out. Later I went to see her (a long trip) with the idea of finding out something about a subject that had always been avoided—namely, my other parent. The things that I learned almost brought on a nervous breakdown . . .

I have only touched lightly on this tragedy. But if you could realize what a nightmare it is to have "just growed up" with never any home life, not even a name, and unable to discuss it with anyone I am sure you would understand my feeling of desperation. I have attempted to get a copy of my birth certificate, but the record was not kept. I have no children. My husband is one of the finest persons I have ever known, and I would not hurt him in any way. I have sometimes thought of going away permanently but I can't bear the thought of embarrassing anyone. I shall be grateful for your consideration and advice. S. D. J.

Heroics Unwarranted

DEAR S. D. J.: If I am to give "consideration" to your urgent appeal, I have no alternative to answering it through the column, since I do not conduct a correspondence school of advice. I have sketched your problem in barest outline (in order to preserve your desire for complete anonymity), and now I wish to say: There is absolutely no rational justification for any adult's giving way to heroics over the discovery that he (or she) was born out of wedlock. As has been said, there are no illegitimate children, but only illegitimate parents. And I am of the opinion that the legitimacy of one's begetting is rather less important—so far as one's social worth is concerned—than the source, or we might say quality, of the blood that flows in one's veins.

If you will read Albert Edward Wiggam's "Fruit of the Family Tree," you may be comforted by his convincingly documented argument that where you find fine persons, you will also find—if you care to seek—some ancestry of native or ingrained superiority. That person who is yourself (and I am judging by the form and content of your entire letter) constitutes most reassuring evidence that, while the circumstances of your introduction into the world may have left much to be desired—from the conventional point of view—nevertheless, you were endowed at birth with a heritage which gives you much to be thankful for.

Whatever your immediate ancestors may have been, whatever their sins of omission or commission, your own performance is indicative of inborn qualities of exceptional merit. You have demonstrated rugged strength of character, a high order of intelligence, a fine sense of social responsibility—not only toward your talents but toward your mother (in contributing to her support for years)—and a respect for the conventions (both in performance and in present unhappy mental attitude) which argue that your ancestors must have been, in the main, dependable and orthodox individuals. You need feel no shame, nor offer any apology, for the human frailty of those two who produced you, since no just and rational person would dream of charging their lapse to you.

There is some possibility that your emotional preoccupation with these unhappy chapters of your past is not your real problem, at the moment. Persons who are nervously or emotionally ill from unsuspected causes sometimes select, from the grab bag of their past, this or that episode upon which to brood, fancying it to be the occasion of their depression, when it is merely a convenient peg upon which to drape their symptoms. If my foregoing remarks are insufficient to restore your perspective, I suggest you submit the matter to a psychiatrist or diagnostician. Whatever you do, don't be such an idiot as to visit your lament upon your husband, or to give serious thought to making off with yourself, in any shape or form. Let the dead past bury its dead, and concern yourself with the secure and substantial present—in which you seem to have virtually everything that makes a woman's life worth living. M. H.

A Woman's New York

New York, March 28.

SHUT YOUR eyes tight if you can't bear it, but that old mattter of the hair must be discussed again. For as the quaint American hoodlums phrase it, "the heat has been on." Our thriving city has just finished playing host to representatives of some 75,000 American beauty parlors, or salons, or shoppeys, in convention assembled, and obviously the prime problem on the agenda was the immediate future of the feminine thatch.

As I have noted gloatingly before, the womanhood of our Nation licked the hairdressers to a befuddled frazzle in their drive to sock over the upswished hair as a national style. The great bulk of us wouldn't have any part of it. As a result, the convention of beauty shop owners settled hopefully on a compromise. They choose to call it the "swirl."

Roughly speaking, the swirl is a combination of soft waves and curls—up in front and at the sides, and the swirl itself coming in the rear, or stern, of the skull. The hair all over the head will be no more than 4 inches long.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I hear that Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and wife Ethel call their baby, Franklin 3rd, "Joe" for short. Well I want to know! Why on earth? But shucks—you know how young parents are! . . . That nice Irene Dunne has been around town lately, enjoying one of her visits with the spouse, Doc Francis Griffin, and having fun. Very sedate in Hollywood, Irene likes to go places when on parole in New York—and she does get around. The other night she enchanted the customers at a popular Greenwich Village haunt by warbling "Get Out of Town"

Our Mrs. Mary Quinn, 62, but full of fight, is receiving the congrats of her Brooklyn neighbors these days. The other morning, at 5:30, a burglar woke her up and said, "How about your money?" She said it was in a kitchen cupboard, but she emerged with a broom and let the bloke have it good and hard over the skull. By the time the rest of the family galloped in, the burglar had run down a fire escape leaving the gallant Mrs. Q. with her money—and her good old broom.

Anita Colby, nee Counihan, is thought by many to be the most beautiful model in town. Right now she and her intended, Charles Hornburg, jr., are shopping for a dove cot in nearby Connecticut. Anita has had scads of beaux, but Hornburg, jr., simply romped in, the winner.

Gloria Swanson, looking top-hole as usual, just got off the Ile de France and went straight back to business. The first Mrs. Wallace Berry certainly does hang onto her famous oomph. She's an eye-snatcher in any company, however big and however tasty the competition . . . Grace Moore has cracked the prints again by sponsoring the vocal career of Dorothy Kirsten, a 22-year-old girl from Jersey. Gracie is going to foot all the bills. "The loveliest, freshest voice I've heard in a long time," says the famous lark from Jellicoe, Tenn.

Mrs. Hull to Welcome Royal Pair at Border

By Hope Ridings Miller.

The Post Society Editor.

SCRAPS OF INFORMATION, gathered here and there, now can be pieced into a fairly complete picture of the forthcoming visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth. Latest word from London is that Secretary of State Hull will greet the royal visitors at the Canadian border when they enter the United States on their trip to America.

MRS. CORDELL HULL

The bit of news not included in the report from abroad is that Mrs. Hull will accompany her husband to the Canadian line and probably will be the first high-ranking American woman to catch a glimpse of Great Britain's King and Queen on our soil. From what I can learn from the State Department, Lady Lindsay, American-born wife of the British Ambassador, will not be with her husband when he meets Their Majesties. She will greet them here when they arrive with much fanfare at Union Station, where a number of notables, including President and Mrs. Roosevelt, will be on hand to welcome them.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Hull will have had quite a good chance to become acquainted with Queen Elizabeth, as she will be on the train with her all the way down from the Canadian border. Several other notables will also be in the company, which is scheduled to roll into Washington early in June.

While Mrs. Hull is not active in public life, in the same sense as are some wives in high positions, you can always count on her to be by her husband's side when he goes tripping out of town. She accompanied him to the conference at Lima and recently was with him on his Florida vacation. And while he is improving each shining hour at the Department of State, she is almost as busy attending to her duties as an official hostess—answering her own mail, putting in appearances at luncheons and teas, and entertaining newcomers in the Diplomatic Corps at small teas in her handsomely furnished apartment at the Carlton Hotel.

This afternoon, she will receive during the tea hour the new Ambassador of Brazil, Carlos Martins Pereira e Sousa and Mme. Martins, and the Minister of Finland, Hjalmar Johan Procope.

John Mason Brown To Visit Lodges

When John Mason Brown, noted drama critic, comes to Washington on April 8, he will be the guest of Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge. Mr. Brown will be here to lecture at the Mayflower Hotel on Broadway plays, the event being arranged for the benefit of the Washington Committee of the Frontier Nursing Service of Kentucky.

The friendship between the Lodges and Browns began long before politics became the Senator's career and Mr. Brown achieved fame as an outstanding lecturer on drama. Their paths crossed frequently and pleasantly when young Henry Cabot Lodge was on the editorial staff of the New York Herald Tribune and Mr. Brown was, as now, dramatic critic of the New York Post.

Mention of something dramatic reminds me that one of the theater's most noted men, John Barrymore, disappointed around 100 newspaper women yesterday when he failed to appear at the luncheon of the Women's National Press Club. There was an excuse, and a very good one—he has been suffering from laryngitis—had fever yesterday morning, and stayed in bed under orders from his doctor, his wife, and his manager. But Mrs. Barrymore, who is well known as Elaine Barrie, attended the luncheon; answered a flock of questions, and made quite an impression on her audience.

Elaine Barrie Is Surprising Person

Truth is, from the minute she walked in—looking very dashing in a trim suit, wide-brimmed beige straw hat, and a red fox jacket—the press women were surprised. She's better looking than her pictures indicate; has a dynamic quality that impresses you right off the bat; knows what she's about and is as quick on the trigger as anybody I've seen lately.

She said her husband loved being back on the stage, but expected to return to screen work now and then for a change. She would like to see him alternate his stage and screen career with a series of Shakespeare plays on the radio. If she had her choice of a Shakespearean role, she would do Lady Macbeth; thinks that's more her type than Juliet would be. As to whether she has done a lot to bring her famous husband back into line and back to the stage, she will not say. "I hope I've helped him," she averred with disarming frankness. "I have tried."

Other guests at the luncheon included Otto L. Priminger, director of the play in which Mr. Barrymore is starring; Phillip Reed, who also has a role in it, and Pierce Power-Waters, general manager for the company. Still another notable at the head table was Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton, writer and explorer, who will be at the Mayflower for a couple of weeks before returning to her home in Greenwich, Conn.

Mrs. Richberg Gives Interview

Mrs. Donald Richberg, who with her husband and her daughter, Eloise, recently returned from Mexico City, was interviewed while there—with some unusual results. What she said, and a few things she didn't, were published in a newspaper, all in Spanish, of course. The piece has been translated for her since she returned to Washington, and she has discovered that more than one sentence was put into her mouth by the reporter, "just like newspaper people do here," she said with that gay little laugh that lets you know she doesn't take herself too seriously.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Mrs. Rudolph Stanley-Brown is in New York, where she is spending ten days with relatives before taking her son, Edward Garfield Stanley-Brown back to school in South Kent, Conn. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja have cards out for an "at home" on Wednesday afternoon, April 5, "to meet the Minister of Finland, Hjalmar Johan Procope." . . . That evening, the Hurjas will fete Minister Procope at a dinner at the 1925 F Street Club

Plans to Sail Away Soon on Vacation

When school bells ring recess for spring vacation, attractive Miss Peggy Wilmer will close her books at Trinity College and be off on the bounding main. She will leave Washington for New York April 6 and and then on April 8 will sail for Bermuda on a holiday cruise. Miss Wilmer is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pere Wilmer, who divide their time between their place in Leesburg, Va., and their apartment here at the Highlands

Hessler Studio.

The A. V. Dyes Dinner Guests

Dr. Alexander V. Dye, who is retiring as director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce to become the United States Commercial Attache to Great Britain, was honored, with Mrs. Dye, at a reception and dinner party last evening in the Blue Room at the Shoreham. The company included Dr. Dye's associates at the burea, with which he has been connected three years.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Draper were among those at the guest table. Mr. Draper, now a member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, is the former Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and held that post at the time Dr. Dye was appointed to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce by former Secretary of Comerce Roper. Also at the guest table with Dr. and Mrs. Dye were Dr. Nathaniel H. Engle, acting director of the bureau, and Mrs. Engle, and Fletcher Rawls, assistant director, and Mrs. Rawls.

Gifts were presented to both Dr. and Mrs. Dye from the members of the party. Active in arrangements for the function were Mr. and Mrs. William P. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. John Howard Payne, Mrs. H. C. MacLean, Mrs. S. E. Day, Mrs. Wilford L. White and Roy Mundee.

Col., Mrs. Johnson To Visit Marion, S.C.

The Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Col. John Monroe Johnson, and Mrs. Johnson will spend Easter at their home in Marion, S. C., where their memorial garden of Flanders Field poppies is scheduled to be in bloom.

Col. and Mrs. Johnson have grown the poppies from seeds picked by Col. Johnson in Flanders Field in the World War. Every year since the war they have given seeds to veterans in almost every State, and to the veterans' hospitals.

Birth Announced

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Caffery, jr., announce the birth of a son, John M. Caffery 3d, at Columbia Hospital on March 24. Mrs. Caffery formerly was Miss Phoebe Soaper, of Harrodsburg, Ky.

Reeds, 3 Cabinet Members Guests At Envoy's Dinner

The Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil gave another in their series of dinners last evening.

There were 32 in the company, which included Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring, the Attorney General, Frank Murphy; the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, and Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings.

The Ambssador and Senora de Espil will entertain at another dinner tomorrow evening.

Parties Arranged For the Raineys

Dr. and Mrs. Homer Price Rainey left yesterday afternoon for Texas, where they will be widely feted this week-end in connection with the tenth Annual Roundup, at the University of Texas. Newly appointed president of the university, Dr. Rainey will be in the spotlight at the series of events planned for the annual "homecoming" celebration.

On Friday, Dr. and Mrs. Rainey will view the roundup parade, in which almost a hundred floats have been entered. That evening, Dr. Rainey will be guest of honor and one of the speakers at the dinner given by Hulon Black, president of the Texas Ex-Students Association. Later, Dr. and Mrs. Rainey will appear at the annual ball. On Saturday, they will attend the alumni luncheon and other events, including a reception that evening, and on the following day, they also will appear at several gatherings.

Dr. and Mrs. Rainey will return to Washington the latter part of next week. Just when they will go to Texas to make their home has not yet been decided. Dr. Rainey, who is still director of the American Youth Commission, will take over his duties as president of the University of Texas some time next summer.

Farewell Party Given Here

When Senora de Viteri entertained yesterday at a farewell luncheon at the Shoreham, many of her guests were women prominent in the official life of the Capital. The hostess and her husband, Dr. Homero Viteri, will will leave Washington on Saturday to return to their home in Ecuador. Senor Viteri has served for two and a half years as special ambassador from Ecuador and chairman of the boundary delegation.

Among those who attended the party were Miss Mabel Vernon, chairman of the People's Mandate Committee; Representative Caroline O'Day, Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, and Mrs. Ruth B. Shipley, chief of the passport division of the Department of State.

Other guests were Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Mrs. George B. Trible, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. Nelson H. Darton, and her daughter, Mrs. William J. Kerlin; Mme. Enrique Prieto, Mrs. Robert Shores, and her daughter, Mrs. Marie Medora Peterson; Mrs. Rebecca Notz, Mrs. Gaeda Boyer, Mrs. J. Donald Halstead, Mrs. Leland W. Miller and Miss Anna Walcott Archibald.

J. F. T. O'Connor Conferring With Cuban President

J. F. T. O'Connor, former Comptroller of Currency, is conferring today in Havana with Col. Frederico Lareda Bru, president of the Cuban Republic.

Mr. O'Connor, who now lives in Los Angeles, stopped in Washington for a few days before going to Havana. He was entertained at a bon voyage party at the Shoreham Blue Room on Saturday evening by Juan J. Tomadelli. Also present were Senators James E. Murray and George L. Radcliffe.

Mrs. Seton to Fete Mrs. Dorothy Watson

Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton will entertain tomorrow at the cocktail hour in honor of Mrs. Dorothy DeMuth Watson. The party will take place at the Mayflower Hotel at 5 o'clock.

Miss Gudger Gives Tea For Friend

100 Guests Honor Nancy Hallinan, Of London

Miss Elinor Gudger, pretty debutante daughter of Capt. and Mrs. E. C. Gudger, entertained at a tea yesterday afternoon in honor of her house guest, Miss Nancy Hallinan, of London. Mothers of both were classmates at Vassar. Their daughters became acquainted when the Gudgers were traveling in England. Miss Hallinan is now following in her mother's footsteps and studying at Vassar. Miss Gudger is home for the spring holidays from Mt. Holyoke College.

The party, attended by about 100 young people many of them here on vacation from school, was held at the quarters of Capt. and Mrs. Gudger, in the Navy Yard. The house was decorated with boughs of cherry blossoms. The hostess wore a street length frock of green lame and Miss Hallinan had chosen a gown of red silk.

Among those who dropped in during the afternoon were the Misses Sylvia Alexander, Maisie Howard, Christine Gawne, Agnes Magruder, Elizabeth L'Anglais, Margaret Craighill, Jane Eustis, Julie Cahill, Betty Burton, Nancy Hoskinson, Margaret Jeschke, Joanna Huntington, Barbara Bell, Betty Fischer, Marianna Evans and Nancy Glover.

The young men present included Charles Glover, Hilary Hoskinson, John Magruder, Day and Merle Thorpe, Frank Holcomb, John and William Gwynee, John Wallace, Alexander Shields, George Eliot, Thomas Armat, Douglas Bogart and Phillip Evans.

Miss Gudger will entertain at dinner for her guest before the dance on Friday evening at the Sail Loft in the Navy Yard. Miss Hallinan will leave Washington on Saturday.

200 Diplomats Will Attend Blossom Festival

More than 200 members of the diplomatic corps in Washington have accepted invitations to attend the crowning of the Queen of the Cherry Blossom Festival at 4:30 p. m. Friday. The coronation will take place on the polo grounds in Potomac Park. Edgar Morris is chairman of the festival committee.

Representative of foreign countries will view the festivities from a special box along with Mr. and Mrs. Morris, Commissioner Melvin Hazen and Mrs. Hazen, and Commissioner David McCoach, jr., and Mrs. McCoach.

A party of 26 will be on hand from the Mexican Embassy and there will be 25 in the party from the Colombian Embassy. Fourteen members of the British Embassy staff have accepted invitations. The Cuban Embassy has requested reservations for 15 persons and the Brazilian Embassy will be represented by 11.

Many of the diplomatic corps will attend other events of the festival on Friday including the Sunrise ceremony at 7 a. m.: the Marine Band concert at 1:45 p. m.: the Cherry Blossom Dancers at 3 p. m., and the fireworks display at 8 p. m.

Oscar L. Chapman Is Dinner Host

Oscar L. Chapman, the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, entertained at dinner at the Shoreham Blue Room last evening for Miss Mary Agnes Sullivan, of Denver, Colo. Others in the company of guests were Dr. and Mrs. Wendell Lund, Mrs. Mary Riger, of Denver, and Joseph Barnnett.

Miss Sullivan was chosen "Miss New Deal" by the Young Men's Democratic League of Denver. Mr. Chapman is formerly of Denver.

Sailing Friday

Armed with a cruise ticket which she won at a recent bazaar in Philadelphia, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, accompanied by Mr. Tuckerman, will sail on Friday on the Grace liner Santa Maria for a voyage in Southern waters. They will visit Jamaica, Haiti, and other countries before returning.

Summerscale-Collins Party Talk Ranges From New Deal to Hitler

A COCKTAIL party at which nobody could be accused of small talk was that given jointly yesterday by the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. J. P. Summerscale and Henry Collins at the Summerscale residence on Tracy place. There were many members of the intelligentcia present and much intelligentzia present and much in- and cons of practically everything from the New Deal to Hitler.

Everybody gathered in the living room, where a fire blazed on the hearth. The furniture is a soft green and the big bay windows looking out into the street are hung with yellow curtains. Mrs. Summerscale, who was one of the few women members of the United States Foreign Service before her marriage, wore a print frock.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Borton, William McComb, John Ross, Ann Dahlman (a sister of Mrs. Harold Ickes), Miss Peggy Duffy, David Cushman Coyle and Mrs. George Galloway.

NEWS FROM ABROAD: The former Financial Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Noel Trentham are the proud parents of a daughter, born last month and christened Dudley Noel. The Trenthams have been transferred to Berlin.

We also hear that Andrea Ferrero, formerly with the Italian Embassy, is about to become a husband. His fiancee is an Italian girl. Ferrero is the last of the famous "Three Musketeers" of the embassy to forsake bachelorhood. The others were Bartelemo Migone, who recently married the Countess Hamilton, and Guiseppe Tomasi, who was wed in Rome last winter. The three kept house together when they were with the embassy here and were hosts at many a gay party, including a never-to-be-forgotten fancy dress ball.

THE TWO newest arrivals in the Italian diplomatic corps already have gotten themselves settled in apartments here. Carlo Nichetti, new Secretary of the Embassy, has set up quarters at the Mayflower, and Lieut. Filo Torre, recently named Assistant Naval Attache, is at the Marlyn, the new modernistic apartments near the Westchester.

The Ambassador to Belgium and Mrs. Joseph Davies, who always entertain in the grand manner, will give a magnificent ball shortly after Easter in honor of the envoy's daughter, Emlen, and her Belgian banker fiance, Robert Grosjean. It will be held at the embassy in Brussels, where Emlen will arrive this week for a visit. Since the prospective bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Grosjean, are in deep mourning, it is doubtful if they will entertain formally for the couple.

UNLIKE most ladies, who would rather give the day of their birth than the year, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers will tell you only the year. Even the month is not listed in the paragraph alloted to her in the Congressional Directory. People in public life are too often embarrassed by birthday presents from total strangers . . . Did you know that the current vogue of dotted veils is rather bad for the eyesight? The late Dr. Richard Wilmer, Washington's great eye specialist, used to say that he built his summer home in the North out of ladies' veils.

WHEN Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth was a pretty, pig-tailed miss in Louisville, Ky., a gangling lad of the town, John Mason Brown, was already firmly resolved to be a dramatic critic when he became a man. Now Mrs. Wigglesworth is busy selling boxes for the lecture which Mr. Brown, now a famous play reviewer, will give at the Mayflower April 8 under auspices of the Washington Committee of the Frontier Nursing Service. Mrs. Wigglesworth's father, Percy Booth of Louisville, has been one of its most enthusiastic supporters since the organization was founded 14 years ago.

Erteguns Aid Benefit Party

The handsomely furnished Turkish Embassy, which has been the scene of many social gatherings, will be used for a "party with a purpose" on the afternoon of April 14. The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun have consented to let the Women's Auxiliary of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club give its annual benefit card party there on that date. Proceeds will go toward the summer camps for more than 2,000 boys.

Mrs. Roosevelt is honorary auxiliary president. Miss Mae Helm is president. Honorary vice presidendts are Mrs. John Allan Dougherty and Mrs. Henry L. Doherty. Miss Elizabeth Howry, who is chairman of the educational and entertainment committee, is helping to work out plans for the card party in which a number of officials, diplomats and members of residential society will participate.

Mrs. Dow Harter Gives Luncheon for Eighty

Mrs. Dow W. Harter, wife of Representative Harter, and Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, wife of Representative Duncan, entertained a company of 80 at luncheon in the Louis Seize room at the Shoreham yesterday.

Bride-Elect Feted

Miss Evie Johnston and Miss Edith Sappenfield entertained at a luncheon on Saturday in the Blue Room of the Shoreham Hotel in honor of Miss Frances Bulwinkle, daughter of Representative and Mrs. A. L. Bulwinkle, of North Carolina. Miss Bulwinkle's marriage to Grainger Williams, of Little Rock, Ark., will take place the latter part of April.

John Coolidge To Take Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Pasquale Rossi, of Waterbury, Conn., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Melba Rossi, to John Colt Coolidge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sprague Coolidge, of New York and Cambridge, Mass.

The bride-lect is a student at the Yale School of Music. Her father is engaged in business in Waterbury.

The prospective bridegroom is a member of the junior class at Yale. He is widely known both in Washington and New York and is a grandson of Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, founder and supporter of the Coolidge Chamber Music concerts here and internationally known in music circles.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Whittingtons Hosts to Daughter And Son-in-Law

Representative and Mrs. William M. Whittington, of Greenwood, Miss., who are staying at the Wardman Park Hotel, have as their guests there, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Davenport, of Stone Ridge, N. Y., their son-in-law and daughter, who are in Washington to spend several days.

Mr. Davenport's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Davenport, of Accord, N. Y., also are guests of the Whittingtons. They arrived here a few days ago for a short visit.

Miss Martin Engaged

Mrs. Augustus H. Martin has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Louise Broy Martin, to Carl Daniel Schlachter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. Schlachter, of Montclair, N. J.

The bride-elect's father was the late Augustus H. Martin, of Denver, Colo. No date has been set for the wedding.

Hunt Country Set Steps Out Tomorrow In Fashion Review

WITH "MODELING" at fashion shows becoming almost as much of a career for the distaff side of society as singing at night clubs, members of the hunt country set will step out in the latest from Paris at a fashion review in Middleburg tomorrow evening.

On the program will be such four-star names as Miss Jane Stevenson, Miss Fanny Nelson Lyon, Miss Mary Owen Lyons, Miss Nancy Iselin, Miss Barbara Iselin, Miss Bettina Belmont, Miss Catherine Hulbert, Miss Winifred Maddux, Miss Willett Leach, Miss Constance Lyon, Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Mrs. Rigan McKinney, Mrs. Charles Cushman, Mrs. Elizabeth Wright and Mrs. John Yohe.

MRS. YOHE was formerly Miss Mary Washington, of Middleburg. She has been living in California recently and is now in Middleburg visiting her mother, Mrs. William Washington.

Following the fashion show, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Tabb will fete the models and other friends at Glenora.

Motoring from New York to Virginia with Russell Burke, who will announce the show, are Mrs. Christian Hewitt and Miss Kathleen Boyd. Miss Boyd is a niece of Representative Caroline O'Day.

EARLE SMITH and his daughter, Miss Nancy Earle Smith, of Philadelphia, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Crompton Smith at their home near Middleburg. James Donohue, of Paris, France, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Tartiers.

Miss Aileen Harris and Miss Eleanor Flood, of Washington, have been visiting in the hunt country and other Washington visitors have included Miss Peggy Harron and Jock Merriam.

THE HUNT BALL given after the races on Saturday night by Mrs. Mildred Taylor and Mr. and Mrs. Crompton Smith at Goodstone, Mrs. Taylor's home, was attended by 300 guests. The large living room at Goodstone was cleared for dancing and an orchestra played from 10 o'clock until 4 in the morning. At midnight a supper was served in the dining room. Nearly all the men wore scarlet evening coats.

Mrs. Taylor, who is from Toronto, Canada, has come to Virginia recently to make her home.

'Models' Bearing Four-Star Names To Be on Parade

Among week-end guests who came down for the races were Count Frederick Ledebur, of Austria; the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, and Mrs. Chauncey Parker.

MISS MARY RUMSEY and her brother, Pete Rumsey, of New York, entertained at a house party at their home near Middleburg. Mr. and Mrs. John Hughes and their son, Mansfield Hughes, are now spending some time at their hunting box.

A WEDDING OF interest to friends in Virginia took place Saturday in Syracuse, N. Y., when Miss Ruth Farlin, of that city, became the bride of Alexander Carter Beverly, of Blandfield, on the Rappahannock River in Essex County, Va. The Rev. T. H. Colmon, rector of Erwin Church in Syracuse, officiated.

The maid of honor and only attendant for the bride was Miss Helen Barnum, of Syracuse. Samuel Adams, of The Plains, was best man. The ushers included George Brooke, of Lexington, Va.

Among those from Virginia who attended the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. R. Bland Beverley, parents of the bridegroom, and Miss Edith Carter, his aunt. The couple will live in Syracuse.

Mu Phi Epsilon Honors National President

Chapter Officers Give Luncheon for Mrs. King, of Minneapolis; Alumnae Also Fete Her With Colorful Dinner

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Bertha Marron King, of Minneapolis, president of Mu Phi Epsilon, national honorary musical sorority, was guest of honor last night at a dinner given by the local alumnae chapter at Columbia Country Club. In the afternoon she also was honored at a small luncheon at Woodward & Lothrop's Tea Room, given by the chapter officers, and a tea at the Washington Musical Institute on Sixteenth street, with Mrs. Weldon Carter, of the faculty, as hostess.

The national president was introduced last night by Mrs. Vera Neely Ross, president of the alumnae group, and a well known contralto. Aside from the greetings of these two officers, there were no talks, the program after dinner being devoted to music. The sorority colors, purple and white, predominated in the table decorations for which Spanish iris, jonquils and forsythia were used.

Musical Program Is Presented

Members of the sorority who presented the program in the evening were Mrs. E. K. Neumann, soprano, accompanied by Mrs. John Frey, who is secretary of the chapter; Miss Anne Smith, of Alexandria, and Mrs. Lloyd Henbest, both of whom presented piano selections.

The luncheon at which the officers entertained was attended by Mrs. Ross, Mrs. Frey, Miss Dorothy Sornborger, treasurer; Miss Helen Lyon, historian; Miss Jane Darby, Mrs. William Torrey and Mrs. Myron Witters.

Local Chapter 12 Years Old

The local chapter of the sorority was formed 12 years ago and has nearly 50 members, many of them now prominent musicians.

Among the guests last night were Miss Sylvia Meyer, harpist of the National Symphony; Miss Edith Athey, organist; Mrs. Earl Bellman, assistant director of music in the public schools; Miss Lyon, Miss Charlotte Klein, organist at St. Margaret's Church; Mrs. Don McAdoo, of the Powell Junior High School music faculty; Mrs. Gertrude Parsons, Mrs. Ross Pratt, Mrs. John Logan, Miss Leland Parker, Miss Mildred Fallcucci, Mrs. Dorothy Todd, Miss Frances Bronson, Miss Darby, Mrs. Torrey, Miss Alta Smith, Miss Anne Smith, Mrs. Ruth Morgan, Miss Frances Harper, Miss Sornborger, Mrs. Earl Wagner, Miss Inez Miller, Mrs. Ralph Wolfe, Miss Hazel Wood, Miss Flora Clayton, Mrs. George Hudson, Mrs. Frey, Mrs. Herman Fakler, Mrs. Alton Bradford and Mrs. Neumann.

Stresses Need Of Education

The importance of educating every individual in Government affairs was stressed yesterday by Mrs. John C. Livingston, president of the Montgomery County League of Women Voters, in a talk at the morning meeting of the League of Republican Women.

Mrs. Livingston, speaking on a program arranged by Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, explained the process by which a bill becomes a law in Maryland and how Maryland officials are elected.

She asserted that education in government was the only effective means of combatting subversive influences. The League of Women Voters, she explained, carries such a program of education as a nonpartisan organization and is always ready to assist those who desire information in the field of government and its operation.

Mrs. D. B. Davis Entertains P. E. O. Chapter at Home

Chapter B of the P. E. O., with 40 members and guests, was entertained at the home of Mrs. Daniel B. Davis, 3752 McKinley street, Chevy Chase, yesterday afternoon. Assisting hostesses were Mrs. Dean C. Turley, Mrs. A. W. Caldwell and Mrs. G. H. Mitchell.

At the business meeting following luncheon, the president, Mrs. Charles Marvin Jones, presided, and the new officers conducted the initiation of Mrs. William Bradford Cafky, a new member, and Mrs. James F. Albert, of Chapter F in Moulton, Iowa, who was accepted by demit.

Mrs. D. M. Stafford was in charge of the program on which the guest speaker was Miss Mabel R. Cook, Girl Reserve executive of the Y. W. C. A. She spoke on "Young People and Their Responsibility Today."

Many organizations will send representatives to the luncheon of the Voteless District League of Women Voters at the Y. W. C. A. Monday at 12:15. Jacob Kepec's report on "Public Child Care in the District," will be discussed. Mrs. Howard Leland Smith will preside.

Mrs. Spencer Gordon, member of the Board of Public Welfare, and chairman of the Child Welfare Committee will present the main points covered in the report. It will be discussed by Mrs. William Hurd Hill, chairman of the board of the Children's Protective Association; Mrs. Aileen Burton, chief social worker of the Child Guidance Clinic; Miss Genevieve Gabower, director of social work of the Juvenile Court; Mrs. Morris Klass, director of the Jewish Social Service Agency, and a representative of the Catholic Charities.

Yesterday the Department of Government and Education met at the home of Mrs. W. H. Gaumits, 3216 Walbridge place. Mrs. Charles Moore, chairman, called on Mrs. Samuel Horne and Mrs. R. E. Mobley to report on the bill before Congress providing for Federal aid for education.

Supreme Dean Of Iota Tau Tau To Be Feted Here

Florence K. Thacker, of Indianapolis, supreme dean of Iota Tau Tau, national legal sorority, will come to Washington Sunday to be the guest of Xi Chapter. She will be honored with a dinner at the Wardman Park Hotel in the evening.

Preceding the dinner there will be a business meeting of Xi Chapter, at which Mrs. Thacker will also be present, and following the meeting two candidates will be pledged. They are Gertrude Leibson and Rose Weiss, both students at National University.

Another feature of the dinner will be the installation of new officers by the supreme dean. The new officers are Sylvia Kessler, dean (re-elected); Sarah H. Halbfinger, vice dean; Dina C. Jekofsky, secretary (re-elected); Shirley Silver, treasurer, and Rae Racoosin, historian.

The arrangements committee is headed by Miss Jeanette Rod.

Iota Tau Tau was founded at Southwestern University, Los Angeles, in 1925, and now has 17 chapters. Xi Chapter was founded at National University in 1935.

Children's Home Party Given

The March meeting of the Washington Chapter of the National Home for Jewish Children was a luncheon and card party held at the Community Center yesterday.

Mrs. Nettie Brett, chairman, was assisted by Mrs. Albert Sherman and Mrs. Harry Sirkis, hostesses, and their committee. Plans are being completed for the gala donor luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel on May 9. The proceeds of it will aid the work at the national home as well as the local charity work in providing milk and cod-liver oil for the underprivileged children in Washington and the Center Camp Fund. The program will include a musical show, the cast of which is made up of members of the organization under the direction of Mrs. Albert W. Jacobson. Representative Sol Bloom will speak.

Tickets for the donor luncheon are in charge of Mrs. Ellis Kossow.

Y. W. C. A.. Officer To Give Supper

Miss Elsa Peterson, second vice president of the board of the Y. W. C. A. and chairman of the building committee, will entertain the Girl Reserve advisers and program volunteers at a buffet supper at her home, 2001 Twenty-fourth street northwest, this evening.

Miss Elizabeth Haney, general secretary of the Y. W. C. A., and Mrs. William Lee Corbin, president of the board, will receive with the hostess and she will be assisted by members of the executive committee of the Girl Reserves. These include Mrs. Arthur Brandon, chairman; Miss Grace Johnson, Mrs. G. P. Barger, Mrs. William Burdick, Mrs. Ernest Danly, Mrs. George Lipscomb, Mrs. Elwood Street, Mrs. Stuart Rice, Miss Veryl Schult and Mrs. Van Smith.

Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, Honorary Official, Relates D. A. R. History in Broadcast

MRS. HOWARD L. HODGKINS, honorary vice president general of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, yesterday reviewed the first 25 years of the organization's history in a radio talk sponsored by the District society over Station WMAL.

She told of the organization's ready response to any national need. When war was declared against Spain the proffered services of the society were accepted by the Government and an accredited committee handled all applications of women nurses which were received by the War Department. This "hospital corps" handled over 4,000 applications during the war, she said.

The D. A. R., shortly after the society was formed, assisted the Mary Washington Monument Association in plans for the monument at the grave of the mother of George Washington in Fredericksburg, Va. Later they assisted in the campaign for a gift to France of a statue of George Washington from the women of this country and of a statue of Lafayette from the children.

Mrs. Hodgkins recalled that the first public appearance of the Daughters away from Washington was at the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893, where they had an exhibit.

They indorsed the firs bill introduced in Congress forbidding improper use of the United States Flag in 1897 and continued a crusade for similar laws in the States.

In 1902, more than $50,000 had bben raised and the site purchased for Memorial Continental Hall and on April 17, 1905, the dedication services were held in the auditorium.

WHILE we're on the subject of the D. A. R., the National Historical Magazine, of which Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes is editor, is just out, and it is a real spring number.

There is a message from the president general, Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., pointing out the growth in patriotic sentiment throughout the country; an account of the restoration of historic churches in southern Maryland by Sarah Bohanan Russell, former regent of Maj. William Thomas Chapter, and an article on "Old New England Pulpits" by Clarissa Lorenz, and in addition many other interesting features—And, just in case you love kittens, or even if you don't, you should see the cover picture. There is a soft little gray kitten, beside a vase of pink dogwood, a suggestion of the color of the flowers, reflected against his fur. Personally, I think I'll frame it.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB of Riverdale met last night at the home of Mrs. L. H. Van Wormer, 205 Jefferson avenue, with Miss Kathleen Smith as guest speaker. She discussed community beautification. L. L. Powers showed colored motion pictures of his recent trip through Florida.

Mrs. Burke On Duke U. Symposium

To Speak on Program This Week-End Marking School's Centennial

Mrs. Thomas Burke, chairman for Latin America of the People's Mandate Committee, is one of a group of distinguished women who will take part in a symposium on "Woman and Contemporary Life" to be conducted this week-end in connection with the centennial celebration of Duke University, Durham, N. C.

The symposium is sponsored by woman's college at Duke with the co-operation of the symposium committee of the American Association of University Women.

Simultaneously, there will be regional meetings of the alumnae of Duke, Bryn Mawr, Goucher, Meredith, Mount Holyoke, Smith and Wellesley at Durham.

Mrs. Burke, Chilean by birth and wife of the chief of the division of international communications of the State Department, will be on the opening program of the three-day meeting Friday afternoon and will speak on "Woman's Relation to Pan-American Good Will." She was the ranking member of the "Flying Caravan" of the mandate committee which last year traveled 17,000 miles in support of the Buenos Aires peace treaties.

Dr. Woolley To Preside

She will be introduced by Dr. Mary E. Woolley, president emerita of Mount Holyoke College, who will preside. On the program with her will be Sarah Wambough, research fellow of Radcliffe College, who was appointed by the League of Nations as one of three experts to draft regulations for the Saar plebiscite and was former adviser to the Peruvian government.

Dr. Meta Glass, president of Sweet Briar College, will preside Friday night when Dean Marjorie Hope Nicholson, of Smith College, noted author, will speak.

Saturday morning, Dr. Marion Edwards Park, president of Bryn Mawr, will preside and the program will be devoted to "Women in Leadership." Dr. Woolley will discuss "Women's Leadership in Education" and Judge Florence E. Allen, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, will discuss "Women's Leadership in Civil and Social Service."

One Session Devoted to Church

Saturday afternoon, Rowena Morse Mann, cleric, lecturer and author, will preside and Georgia Elma Harkness, professor of religion at Mount Holyoke, will speak on "Women's Leadership in the Church." The afternoon will be devoted to "Women and Art" with Katherine Pendleton Arrington, president of the North Carolina Art Association, presiding, and Elizabeth Gilmore Holt, former instructor in fine arts at Duke University, as speaker.

Saturday night, Hanya Holm, with a concert group, will discuss and demonstrate "The Modern Dance."

Among Duke alumnae from Washington who expect to attend the symposium are Mrs. Arthur W. Dew and Miss Dorothy Huneycutt. Another who will be in Durham for the alumnae reunion will be Evelyne Hall Turner, whose marriage to Dorsey D. Smith will take place Saturday night in the university chapel.

You Obey, Too, Police Told on Jay-Walk Law

Chief Brown Blames Public's Laxity to Officers' Bad Example

Reports that members of the Metropolitan Police Department, while patrolling downtown streets, have recently been observed in infractions of the pedestrian control laws yesterday prompted a special order from Maj. Ernest W. Brown requiring members of his command to set a "public example" by strictly observing the new rules.

"It has come to my attention," said the police chief, "that members of the department are failing to comply with pedestrian control laws. Whether on or off duty, members of the department will hereafter set a public example by strictly observing these rules."

Fails to Appear

At the same time yesterday, Washington's first case under the new regulations went uncontested in Traffic Court when Bernard Klateman, local florist, charged with failing to comply with a light signal, failed to appear for trial and forfeited his collateral. Klateman, arrested March 10, the first day the laws were effective, had previously announced he would "fight the charges to the limit."

Soon after the pedestrian "education" period ended, crowds of persons were seen standing at every downtown intersection waiting for proper signals before crossing.

Lost Their Zeal

These patient waiters, however, have diminished in number and a survey yesterday disclosed that downtown walkers have apparently lost their earlier zeal for pedestrian control. Said one man at Thirteenth and E streets:

"I was willing to obey these walking rules at first, but no one seems to pay any attention to them now—not even policemen—so why should I lose time by waiting for the green light?"

Of aproximately 50 persons, among them a sprinkling of police officers, observed crossing Fifth and E streets in front of Police Court yesterday, only three observed the signals.

Women to Discuss Living Standards

Improvement of living standards will be discussed here by 60 women from 31 States and the District on April 13 and 14, it was announced yesterday. The meeting was called by Secretary Wallace.

Mrs. Nathan Straus, wife of the Housing Authority administrator, and Mrs. Annetta Zillmer, League of Women Voters, will represent the District.

2,000 Divorces In D.C. Perilled By Test Suit

Wife's Action Questions Validity of 'Unresisted' Decrees

Persons worried about their divorces probably will cause telephones to jangle in hundreds of Washington law offices today because the District Court was asked yesterday to rule, in effect, that more than 2,000 decrees granted in the last few years were absolutely void and the persons who got them still are married.

Attorney Jean M. Boardman filed the test action for Mrs. Myrtle E. Beene, of 820 E street southeast, who divorced her husband three years ago. She wants the decree held void because the husband did not resist her suit.

Mrs. Beene married Jesse J. Beene at Elizabeth City, N. C., May 2, 1927. She sued for divorce, charging desertion, in Washington, October 18, 1935. The husband hired a lawyer who appeared in the case, but filed no denial of the charges and presented no evidence. Mrs. Beene proved her case June 17, 1936, won a decree and on October 2, 1936, she married Alfred Roland Mears, an engineer at Forestville, Md.

The action Mrs. Beene filed yesterday was against Mears, to have her marriage to him declared void because, as she claims, her divorce was void.

Boardman cited the law as requiring that an uncontested divorce be defended by an attorney appointed by the court. He said it would appear that to hire a lawyer, without resisting a divorce action, was not a "contest" and that the law was not followed in the Beene case. If this theory is right, Boardman said, the divorce never existed in the eyes of the law.

Among the 2,000 cases which may be affected will be very few in which Boardman appeared, he said, because he had been shying away from from such a misfortune for years, always asking the court to appoint lawyers to resist his clients' suits.

BACKACHE

STOP GETTING UP NIGHTS

When the delicate filtering tubes of the kidneys become less active, waste, excess acids and poisons are apt to linger in the blood, then the kidneys often need a good stimulus just as do the bowels. It doesn't do the blood any good to retain these harmful materials which should be filtered out by the kidneys.

So to gently stimulate kidneys and help them to function more properly get a 35 cent box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—a grand, safe and harmless kidney diuretic and stimulant right from Haarlem in Holland.

But be sure and ask for and get GOLD MEDAL—the pure—the original and genuine Haarlem Oil Capsules. Don't be an easy mark and accept a cheap substitute—look for the Gold Medal on the box.

At times other symptoms of sluggish kidney action may be puffiness under the eyes—nervousness—leg pains and moist palms. 35 cents. —Adv.

F. I. Thompson Nominated For FCC

Alabama Publisher Named to Succeed Eugene O. Sykes

By the Associated Press.

Frederick I. Thompson, Alabama publisher, was nominated by President Roosevelt yesterday to be a member of the Federal Communications Commission.

He was named to succeed Eugene O. Sykes, of Mississippi, whose resignation is effective April 5. The appointment was for the unexpired portion of the Sykes' term of seven years dating from July 1, 1934.

Thompson is 63 years old and a native of Aberdeen, Miss. He formerly published newspapers in Mobile and Birmingham and now is president and publisher of the Alabama Journal and Times at Montgomery.

He also served for years on the United States Shipping Board, having been appointed to his first term on that board by President Wilson in 1920.

Dean Wiley B. Rutledge of the University of Iowa Law School, nominated by the President to the District Court of Appeals, yesterday won approval of a Senate Judiciary sub-committee, following questioning on his views and experience.

Senators Hughes (Democrat), of Delaware, Connally (Democrat), of Texas, and Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, voted for the favorable report, while Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, reserved the right to oppose confirmation.

Isn't This Why You Are Constipated?

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? White bread, meat, potatoes? It's little wonder you're constipated. You probably don't eat enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It's a kind of food that forms a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a movement. If this is your trouble, may we suggest a crunchy toasted cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—for breakfast. All-Bran is a natural food, not a medicine—but it's particularly rich in "bulk." Being so, it can help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. You won't have to endure constipation, you can avoid it. Eat All-Bran daily, drink plenty of water, and life will be brighter for you! Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

Aid Promised For School In Anacostia

Rep. Randolph To Seek Funds for New Junior High to End Overcrowding

Immediate action on the condition of overcrowding at the Anacostia Senior-Junior High School was promised last night by House District Committee Chairman Jennings Randolph after Principal John Paul Collins had declared it "manifestly impossible" to house more pupils in the present building.

Representative Randolph said he would confer today with Representative Collins (Democrat), of Texas, on an appropriation for a new building. He himself was thoroughly convinced of the need, he said.

The promise was made at a meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association of the school, with more than 300 attending. Collins had previously pointed out that the school was accommodating more than 1,500 students now and expected at least 200 more next year. The capacity of the school is only 1,248, he said.

Overcrowding has forced the school to operate on a staggered schedule. The cafeteria, the stage and the auditorium have been used as classrooms. The solution, he said, is to build a junior high school building on the site already purchased for that purpose.

Representative Randolph asked the group, "even though you can't vote," to support his bill to require deportation of aliens who have not declared their intention of becoming citizens.

These groups "spread discord and foment strife," the Congressman said. He declared he had reliable information that more than 450 of the participants in the recent hotel strike were unnaturalized aliens. The association unanimously approved his bill.

Southeast Citizens

Complete rejection of any plan for District reorganization which does not include suffrage was voted last night by the Southeast Washington Citizens Association, meeting at the Buchanan School.

The resolution was adopted upon a motion by Vernis Absher after he had explained that Representative Kennedy and members of the subcommittee conducting hearings on the Griffenhagen plan had no intention of including suffrage in the final draft.

One member suggested a Washington equivalent of the Boston Tea Party be staged with the slogan, "Taxation without representation is tyranny," if suffrage is not granted.

The association also attempted to forestall placing of the Occoquan Workhouse docks in the Southeast area.

Hampshire Heights

The Hampshire Heights Association voted approval of the Griffenhagen plan, with the exception that the Board of Education should retain its independence. The Capper bill for District suffrage was referred to committee.

The group opposed the Sheppard bill for an investigation of retail liquor trade in the District with a view to establishing Government-owned dispensaries. A committee report pointed out that more than 4,000 employes would lose their jobs if the plan went through.

A petition was sent the Commissioners and the Congressional District committees asking a new firehouse in the Hampshire Heights section.

fellow townsmen he has "even been accused of being a Yankee."

"I had five uncles in the Confederate army," the magistrate replied indignantly. "My mother made the first Confederate flag ever seen in the District of Columbia. I married the daughter of one of Mosby's guerrillas. I have always considered myself a Southerner."

Mrs. John E. Brown, president of Ridgely Brown Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, said, "The clock doesn't look right in the same small plot with the statue—regardless of any historical considerations." The county commissioners granted the plot for erection of the monument, she added, and didn't intend that anything else should stand there.

"Reverence for Our Traditions"

An appeal for "reverence for our traditions" was voiced by Dr. Forrest J. Prettyman, former chaplain of the Senate, one of a dozen more who spoke against placing the clock beside the statue.

A special committee appointed by Mayor Blandford went into session immediately after a public hearing and unanimously rejected the courthouse square site.

Expressing appreciation for the gift from the Brownley estate, the group agreed to meet at 3 p. m. Saturday in front of the courthouse and walk around the town to find another location for the clock.

Committee members are Mrs. Brown, Mrs. J. Harry Gormley, Mrs. Margaret A. C. Welsh, Mrs. Rosalie Bullard, Mrs. J. Frank Wilson, Mrs. Emmett Dove, Paul Brunett, W. Valentine Wilson, Dr. Prettyman, George H. Lamar, Clifford H. Robertson, and Townsend Howes.

Youthful orators from three Catholic schools took part in a debate last night in Immaculata Seminary, sponsored by the Catholic University Conference of Clerics and Religious. Among those who spoke on increased participation in foreign missionary work were (left to right) Mary Ann Reynolds, of Holy Name Academy; Jesse Mann, of Gonzaga High School, both runners-up, and Evelyn Zimmer, of St. Rose's Technical School, the winner

Nazi Bigotry Hits All Creeds, Provost Avers

Fitzpatrick Calls on Catholics to Attend Refugee Concert

Nazi persecution is not an exclusive Jewish problem, Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick, provost of Columbus University, warned last night.

Thousands of Catholic and Protestant refugees are also the target of Hitler's "madness," he said.

The provost, speaking over Station WOL, made an appeal on behalf of the refugee benefit concert to be given tomorrow night at Constitution Hall by Mischa Elman, celebrated violinist.

Dr. Fitzpatrick said one-third of the proceeds would be donated to the Committee for Catholic Refugees in Germany, with the remaining two-thirds to be turned over to Jewish and Protestant groups.

Pointing out that 7,000 Catholic refugees from Germany are wandering about Europe, Dr. Fitzpatrick declared that "a good attendance of Washington Catholics will add just that much more moral support to the vast army of liberals throughout the world who are working incessantly to stem the rising tide of intolerance which threatens to wreck democratic institutions." He added:

"We Catholics cannot afford to stand idly by, viewing with unwarranted smugness the parade of hatred and bigotry as it poisons its ranks with the spleen and malice of an irresponsible leader."

Minnesotan Heads Training School

Harold E. Hegstrom, superintendent of the State Training School for Boys at Red Wing, Minn., has accepted appointment as head of the National Training School for Boys in Washington, Warren E. Martin, board president, announced yesterday.

Hegstrom visited the school about a week ago and announced he would accept if school heads would promise certain improvements. He succeeds Col. Claude D. Jones, who resigned.

Race Theories Anti-Christian, Says Mgr. Ryan

Constitution Makes Hatred Futile in U. S., Professor Declares

Anti-Semitism is contrary to Christianity and violates the basic principles of American democracy, Mgr. John A. Ryan, professor of social ethics at Catholic University, declared last night.

"It is not possible for Christians to indulge in anti-Semitism," he told Argo Lodge, B'nai Brith, at the Jewish Community Center.

Followers of Christ, he emphasized, "cannot believe He would hate the race from which he sprang, or any other people."

Clings to Constitution

"I want to bring out the futility and stupidity of anti-Semitism in this country," he stated. "With our constitutional guarantees it can get nowhere."

Drawing attention to the words of the late Pope Pius XI, who told his followers that "anti-Semitism is inadmissible," Mgr. Ryan asserted "there could be no more immoral doctrine than the principle justifying any means to preserve the purity of the blood" of a race.

Cites Bible

He added that "the Bible tells us God created men and women, but nowhere does it tell us of the creation of Mongolians, Jews . . . or Germans."

"By estranging Jews, incalculable damage, temporally and spiritually, . . . come to the nation," he remarked, adding that "anything like racial hatred hurts the hater more than the hated."

President Seymour S. Guthman presided.

Cartoon Winners

Winners in the "Mac the Sailor" animated cartoon contest, announced yesterday by the Washington Animated Cartoon School, are Elliott Twery, H. M. Pluto, Barbara E. Bartenstein, Martin Brown, Joseph L. Mills, Robert C. Klar, Anthony J. Wright, Mae Johnson, Johnny and Evelyn Trammell.

Drivers Ask Number of Cabs Be Cut

Charge Domination Of Industry by Finance Firms At House Hearing

A chance to become "reputable business men with credit ratings and some standing in the community" was asked yesterday before a House District sub-committee by taxicab drivers favoring passage of a bill introduced by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, to limit the number of cabs that could operate in Washington.

In addition to reduction in the number of taxicabs, the drivers—at times taking the hearing in their own hands and questioning each other while Congressional members of the sub-committee listened—asked:

Limitation of the number of hackers' licenses that could be issued.

Hit "Fihance Domination"

Freedom from "domination of finance companies."

Elimination of the 30-day clause in the bill, making its provision effective immediately after passage.

Issuance of identification cards only to a person owning or buying a cab and who actually is in possession of the vehicle.

Prohibition of any person regularly or gainfully employed from receiving an identification card.

Since the limitation measure was proposed, witnesses charged, finance companies have placed hundreds of new taxicabs in operation—in the hope of "making a big profit on the licenses when the number is reduced."

W. S. McCharen, driver, who stated he represented "only myself," termed "taxicabbing the second biggest racket in Washington," only the numbers game topping it. He urged that license titles should be held by "the man who is buying the car and not by the company that is financing him."

Commission Agrees

Approximately one-fourth of the licenses to the city's 4,000 cabs are held by companies who have titles to the vehicles until the last payment is made, Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, estimated.

"The commission agrees with these men that the license should be issued in the name of the buyer, but the law does not make that stipulation today," he said.

Harry Wender, representing the Federation of Citizens Associations, asked the committee to "look into the law that prohibits the utilities commission from even discussing the possibility of a meter rate in the District."

Door Salesman Tries to Attack Housewife, 26

Police yesterday sought a man who, posing as agent for a "household improvement company," got into the home of Mrs. Evelyn B. Golway, 26, of Treemont terrace, East Riverdale, Md., and attempted to attack her.

Mrs. Golway's screams caused the man to flee. She told police he used a ruse to get into the house and grabbed her when he learned her husband was not at home. Her husband, H. C. Golway, is a Navy Yard employe.

The man was described as 35 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighing 140 pounds. He wore a slate-colored hat, a dark blue overcoat and striped trousers.

Mrs. White to Marry 3d Time; Weds Maj. Whiteley Sunday

Date Moved Up Because Air Officers' Leaves Are Curtailed; Ceremony to Be Held at Her Home in Georgetown

Socially prominent Mrs. Rebekah Lipscomb White, whose first marriage failed to survive the frost of Russia and whose second marriage to her first husband foundered on the sunny sands of Miami, will become a bride for a third time Sunday afternoon.

In a quiet wedding at her Georgetown home, the Washington debutante of 1926 will be wed to Maj. John Frederick Whiteley, jr., of the Army Air Corps.

Whiteley, like Mrs. White's former husband, Capt. Thomas Dresser White, also of the Air Corps, is stationed at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

The exchange of vows, originally scheduled for June, was suddenly moved up to Sunday after the Air Corps had announced it would sharply curtail leaves of officers, needed to carry out intensive expansion of the air wing.

Bridesmaid and lone attendant for her mother will be 8-year-old Becky Ann White. Edward Cremer, of Northport, Long Island, will be best man. Only relatives and close friends have been invited to attend. The Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain for the House of Representatives, will officiate at the 5:30 p. m. ceremony.

Mrs. White, who was graduated from Vassar in 1926 and made her debut here that fall, is the daughter of Mrs. Blaine Lipscomb and the late Charles E. Lipscomb. She is a grand-niece of the late James G. Blaine, who served in the Cabinet and was Republican nominee for President in 1884.

The debutante's wedding to Capt. White the following year was one of the season's most brilliant social events.

Son of Episcopal Bishop and Mrs. John Chanler White, of Springfield, Ill., Capt. White saw service in China and in Washington, and later was ordered to Moscow as assistant military attache. He served as pilot for Ambassador William Bullitt.

In the winter of 1935, Mrs. White obtained a Russian divorce and returned to the United States. Nine months later the couple was remarried aboard the liner S. S. Excalibur, en route from Marseille to Naples. That marriage also ended in divorce in 1938 at Miami, and five days later Capt. White wed Miss Constance Rowe, of London.

Maj. Whiteley, now a student at the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Whiteley, of Cincinnati. His first wife was the former Miss Jane Grice, of San Antonio. There are two children, John, 9, and Grace, 7.

The couple will leave for a short honeymoon trip. The bride will then return to Washington, and Maj. Whiteley will return to his post at Fort Leavenworth. They will rejoin each other at Maj. Whiteley's new station in June.

Randolph Asks $10,000 for D. C. Milk Inquiry

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee yesterday introduced a resolution asking for $10,000 to conduct the authorized local milk investigation after a conference with Chairman Warren of the House Committee on Accounts.

Randolph, who originally suggested $2,500 would be ample, reiterated the belief that $10,000 is not needed. He introduced the resolution, he explained, at the direction of his committee. Meanwhile, Police Judge Hobart Newman set for 11 a. m. today arguments on motions to suppress evidence and for continuance filled by defense attorneys in alleged "bootleg" milk cases against two Washington dairies.

Roosevelt Shifts Lincoln Portraits At White House

The Healy portrait of Abraham Lincoln, which Robert Todd Lincoln, his son, described as the best likeness of his father, has been hung over the mantel in the White House dining room, it was learned yesterday.

The Cogswell portrait, which formerly hung there, has been removed. After repairs, it is destined for the diplomatic reception room.

The President told his press conference he might call in the Fine Arts Commission to ascertain whether it approved the rearrangement.

Capital News In Brief

Meteor Flashes Here

An exceptionally bright meteor, visible in the Southern sky from 10 to 12 seconds, brought scores of calls to newspaper offices and the Naval Observatory last midnight. Observers said the meteor gave off a "beautiful" green and blue light as it streaked across the Potomac in an easterly direction. Several said it was so bright that momentarily they believed an airplane was crashing.

Representative John Dingell, of Michigan, who Monday night aided in the capture of a 'possum on the grounds of the House Office Building, was one of the first to report the phenomenon to The Post.

Bal Poster Chosen

Walter R. McCloskey, 135 Thirteenth street northeast, yesterday won the first prize in the annual poster contest of the Arts Club for its Bal Boheme, "Paris au Printemps," to be held Easter Monday night at the Willard Hotel.

The second prize went to Alice LaRoque, student at National Art School. Winner of the third award was Charles H. Serodino, 3407 Twenty-ninth street northwest. A special prize went to Brooke B. Todd, jr.

The entire collection of posters will be on display at the Arts Club through Sunday.

3 Juveniles Arrested

Three juveniles were arrested last night as suspects in three purse-snatchings when they arrived home for dinner. They were caught after a witness to the third theft took down the tag number of their getaway auto.

Victims of the thieves were Mrs. Bessie L. Burgess, 3810 Twenty-sixth street northeast, $30; Miss Evelyn Miller, 27, of 229 Jefferson street northwest, $9; Mrs. W. Warren, 302 Garfield avenue, Riverdale, Md., undetermined sum.

2 Hurt in Traffic

Wright L. Deaner, 20, of 207 Sixth street northeast, suffered hand and face injuries yesterday when his motorcycle collided with a cab at Sixteenth and I streets northwest. Luther Riley, 80, of 321 B street southeast, was taken to Providence Hospital when struck by an auto in 200 block Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Policeman Kills Self as Dinner Waits

Wife and Children Hear Fatal Shot; Private Jett Was 16 Years on Force

JETT

Private Robert D. Jett, 41, shot himself through the mouth in the upstairs bedroom of his home, 1413 Trinidad avenue northeast. Coronor MacDonald said the policeman had been in ill health for a long time and issued a verdict of suicide.

The tragedy occurred a few minutes after Jett's wife, Grace, and their children, Marjorie, 15, and Robert, jr., 10, had called him to dinner and he had answered: "I'll be down in a minute."

Mrs. Jett's screams attracted a neighbor, who called police and a Casualty Hospital ambulance. The patrolman was dead before aid could reach him. Jett was found lying on the floor of his bedroom, his .32 service revolver by his side. The bullet had passed through his head.

Jett had served all of his 16 years with the department in the Ninth Precinct. He covered a "beat" which included Casualty Hospital, and had gone off duty at 8 a. m. yesterday. He was to have reported to work again last midnight.

Jett was one of the first to be assigned to radio car duty when the police radio patrol system was inaugurated about 10 years ago. Capt. Richard A. Mansfield, commanding officer of Ninth Precinct Station, last night said of Jett: "He was one of the best men I ever had."

Dr. Draper to Give Health Lecture

Certain gains against preventable disease will be discussed at 10:45 a. m. today by Dr. Warren F. Draper, of the United States Public Health Service at the Junior League Gallery, 2001 Massachusetts avenue northwest. The meeting will be under the auspices of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Association and the Junior League.

'Retired,' but at 81, Mrs. Printup Refuses to Quit Welfare Post

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

During the feverish war days of 1917, when thousands of girls and women were coming to Washington from all over the country to take Government jobs, the War Department decided it needed a welfare division.

Mrs. Lura Printup, widowed in June of that year and faced with the responsibility of finding employment at the age of 59, took the civil service examination for the post of welfare director and, to her surprise, got the job.

Today, at the age of 81, she is still on duty, one of the best liked individuals in the department. Technically, she is in retirement, drawing the reduced pay which goes with that status, but actually she is working daily, at her desk in the afternoon, and making sick calls in the morning.

Although it comes under the Bureau of Ordnance, the welfare division covers nine bureaus in the War Department, including infantry, cavalry and coast artillery, among others. Mrs. Printup has some 900 men and women civil service employes under her wing.

Five Workers on Staff Kept Busy

"The main thing I try to do," she says, "is keep them healthy. To this welfare room (No. 3733 in the Munitions Building) they come when they are ill, in need of a loan or desirous of assistance of nearly any kind."

She has five workers on her staff and all are kept busy ministering to the employes' needs. While they never have an idle moment, Mrs. Printup concedes that these times are not as action-packed as the 1917-18 war period, when she had to look after the housing of incoming women, few of whom had ever been in a city as large as Washington before, as well as their routine needs.

Two influenza epidemics also did their part in making her job one of the hardest in town, for she personally nursed many of the victims. The later Newton D. Baker, then Secretary of War, heard about her unceasing activity and complimented her. When she recommended that the welfare division be permitted to establish candy and tobacco stands in the building to raise money, he gave his consent.

Baker "A Great Man"

From 1917 until a few years ago the welfare division conducted a cafeteria in the old temporary building at Nineteenth street and Constitution avenue. When the structure was torn down to make way for the Federal Reserve Building, the restaurant was not replaced.

"I invited Mr. Baker to lunch in that cafeteria once," Mrs. Printup recalls proudly. "And he accepted, too. Ah, there was a great man."

MRS. LURA PRINTUP

She is a native of Jonesboro, Tenn., and has been interested in church, club and social work all her life. She, her husband and their daughter came to Washington in 1901 from Rome, Ga., where Mr. Printup had been in business.

Mrs. Printup lives at 16 West Underwood street, Chevy Chase, Md.

'Cafe Society' Assumes Familiar Triangle Form

Three Stars Distinguish Misnamed Film; Shirley Ross, Costar, Wants to See It Again; Vagrant Thoughts Concerning the Theater

"CAFE SOCIETY," the Paramount production coming to the screen at Loew's Palace Theater on Thursday, is not so much a minute study of nocturnal life on Fifty-second street in New York as it is a slight variation of the "boy-meets-girl" theme—only in this case it might better be expressed as "girl-meets-boy."

If a speedy analogy had to be arrived at, it might, perhaps, best be said that "Cafe Society," in plot, presents the inverse of the "White Collar" motif by reversing the formula that was employed in "Rich Man, Poor Girl." That, it will be recalled, was the story of the rich young man who married a working girl and then had himself a bit of a time reconciling her and her family to the fact of his huge bank account. In "Cafe Society," as I have said, the procedure is exactly reversed. A fabulously rich young woman, seven years "out" since her debutante days and still unwed, marries a crass young ship news reporter in order to win a $1,000 wager from a gossip columnist who has expressed the numbing notion that she no longer is news. After that the picture previewed by a 50 per cent quota of the drama desks yesterday afternoon becomes more or less the usual celluloid rendition of the familiar "triangle" sort of thing.

BELL

It is an engaging triangle that is depicted on the screen. The most gorgeous of the cinema's blondes, Madeleine Carroll appears in the role of the gold-plated young queen of a dubious social set; Fred MacMurray appears as the news writer, who gets in a trifle over his head in a moment of weakness, and Shirley Ross, headlining this week's stage bill at the Earle Theater, is advantageously seen as the lovely "gardenia girl," who pesters patrons into buying her blooms in the swankier of the Gotham night spots.

The thing works out very well in the matter of agreeable, if unimportant, entertainment. There are many sprightly moments. There also are some that are not so sprightly, but the item adds up to a pretty opulent exposition of how both of the "other halves" live.

MacMurray plays with complete naturalness and Miss Carroll with complete charm. They and Miss Ross, however, are not the only ones responsible for the sum total of "wallop" that "Cafe Society" will exert upon the casual consciousness. Claude Gillingwater, Jessie Ralph, Allyn Joslyn, Paul Hurst, Robert Emmett Keane and numerous others have a more or less free hand in shaping the gilt-edged quality with which this release is endowed.

It might be said in passing that Lucius Beebe, The Post's Sunday columnist, has a part in the film out of all proportion to the salary he was paid for appearing in it. The Beau Brummellian Mr. Beebe has a scene that must last all of 10 seconds on the screen. He brings to it a voice that sounds a little like a cross between one of his favorite train whistles and a crash-cymbal. No wonder he took that trade-paper ad, announcing "bit parts, exquisitely played." He needed it!

So, because she was in it in so important a role, we stopped by Shirley Ross' dressing room at the Earle on the way back from the screening to learn first-hand whether any of her songs had been dropped on the cutting-room floor. It seems none had been. Miss Ross, with that dulcet, deep-throated voice of hers, was assigned only one song in "Cafe Society." It comes late in the action, but is worth waiting for. This number was written by Burton Lane and Frank Loesser and should be called "Kiss Me With Your Eyes," whether it is or not. Miss Ross, yesterday afternoon, seemed sorry that she had missed the preview screening of "Cafe Society." She had seen it on the West Coast, to be sure, but was so jittery at the Hollywood preview that she really doesn't remember what it is all about. She would like to have seen it again—and probably will on Thursday—except that she was posing for pictures down around the Tidal Basin with the queen of the Cherry Blossom Festival yesterday P. M.

If you have to know more about Shirley Ross—as anybody ought to—she is about as you find her on the screen and, of course, precisely as you see her on the stage of the Earle this week. A long bob of blonde hair, neat figure—so I hear—a spacious smile and one of the grandest senses of humor this column ever has encountered.

Miss Ross has been away from Hollywood two weeks now. Her jaunt East originally was intended to be a sort of vacation trip with her husband, Ken Dolan, Hollywood agent. That plan sort of went berserk about the time of its birth. After being together in Kansas City for the premiere of Bob Burns' "I'm From Missouri," the paths of Mr. and Mrs. Dolan suddenly parted. He went to Chicago, then on to New York and she accepted a few personal appearance bookings that are gradually growing into a "tour." From here she goes to Hartford, then Newark, if I have my memory on straight, then Philadelphia, then back into the Paramount in New York. After that, write your own ticket.

Paramount seems not to be keeping its stars too busy these latter days. Miss Ross is making this whirl around the circuit in "personals." Dorothy Lamour is playing around in New York; Martha Raye has not been before the cameras in weeks on end and so it goes. All contract people, though, and not free lances, so what? I'm asking you.

That old La Belle Grippe—and what is "Belle" about it?—seems to take hold of the foremost of our stage stars immediately they cross the District line. Orson Welles played his first night in "Five Kings," at the National, with a temperature of 101. On Monday night, John Barrymore, currently starring in "My Dear Children," a breezy and delightful farce, intent, no doubt, on going Mr. Welles one better, played with a reputed temperature of 102.

There was nothing in his performance, beyond an occasional cough, to indicate it. But yesterday he was kept under covers in his hotel suite by order of his physician. Too bad. But if there is anything in that "misery loves company" business, it may comfort Mr. Barrymore to know that this column has developed a tickling in the throat, too. It was tickled elsewhere by Mr. Barrymore's performance Monday night.

A-Stitch-in-Time-Etc., Note

New York, March 28.

"... and I had the baby's first shoes bronzed ... What, dear? ... I should've given the shoes to some poor family? ... I tried, but couldn't ... It seems that nobody wants to be in his shoes—the shoes of a columnist's son ..."

12 p. m.: "There's a scandal at the Saturday Evening Post," a publisher reports at the Versailles. "They recently got a New York novelty house to distribute the premiums they usually give to small boys, who get subscriptions. Well, Editor Stout got a letter from an indignant parent, complaining: 'What do you mean, sending my boy, for a premium, a jackknife covered with pictures of naked, lewd women?' The horrified editor checked and learned that the novelty house got the orders mixed and sent some snappy numbers intended for the South American trade instead of the Boy Scout knives" ... "The London Express cabled its American correspondent last night," a ringsider states at the Cotton Club, "telling him to check on a report that Willie Hitler, nephew of Adolf, is on the Normandie en route to America" ... "If we don't get our 'five Kings,'" Orson Welles confides at the Tavern, "I'll borrow the money from a $10,000 inheritance due me in a few months."

"Let's make a Shower for her—a Bullet shower" ... Capt. Gerry Wynne-Wynne orders caviar at El Morocco, and is told that another party had consumed all the caviar in the place. "So much caviar?" the Captain asks. "Whose party was it, Rockefeller's?" ... "Yes," he is told, "Winthrop Rockefeller's." ... "Although Hitler has ordered Lehar's 'The Merry Widow' to be played in Munich, with a cast of 400," a newly arrived composer reports at The Midnight Sun, Franz Lehar is trying to get out of Germany."

4 a. m.: "You see this big clip I'm wearing? Well, I lost the matching one," Thyra Samter Winslow tells the captain at the Stork Club ... "Were they real diamonds?" Thyra is asked ... "If they were," she explains, "I wouldn't worry about losing it—because I'd be satisfied to have this other one left" ...

5 a. m. "Watch this story break," a lawyer reveals at the Kit Kat. "A prominent lady will be sued by her husband, who charges that she had been married to a Maharajah and never divorced according to the law of India. Sol Rosenblatt has the case" ... "Hugh O'Connell got into an argument at The Players," a publicist relates at the 18 Club, and Bobby Clark urged him to shake hands with the other man ... Hugh refused ... "So compromise,' said Clark. 'Shake hands—and don't mean it.'"

6 a. m. "... yes, dear, I'm awake ... Well, I've got a long shopping-job scheduled for today ... I'm going to buy something for my spring outfit, which will set an unusual style ... Yes, dear, unusual ... I'm going to buy a hat—which looks like a hat."

Prize Faker Finally Lands Regular Job

After Many Vicissitudes, Bob Cummings, at Last, Abandons Subterfuge

By Frederick C. Othman.

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, March 28.—Bob Cummings, one of the biggest fakes ever to flimflam the picture producers with phoney names, accents and reputations, is giving them their money's worth now.

"And it's a relief not to be a walking lie any longer," he reported today at Universal Studios, after such a career as not even a professional confidence man could rival. Robert has fooled everybody—and possibly even himself—ever since he left Joplin, Mo., but at long last he's started going places in the movies, honestly.

After his outstanding work in Deanna Durbin's "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," Cummings is the hottest thing in town, professionally speaking. Studios all over Hollywood are demanding his services and Universal is congratulating itself on having signed him only a few weeks ago to an ironclad contract.

Cummings is the lad who could not get a job on Broadway in 1929. The managers all wanted British actors. So he went to England, changed his name to Blade Stanhope Conway, and bribed the janitor of his majesty's theater in Harrogate—which happened to be vacant—to put his name in lights on the Marquee.

Brought Back an Accent

Then Blade Stanhope Conway had his photograph taken underneath, returned to New York and became one of that city's leading actors, with an accent so thick you could cut it.

He'd married a girl from Joplin by then.

"But I wasn't the Joplin boy she thought I was," he said. "I was a British lounge lizard in a tab collar and spats and she couldn't stand me. She went back to Joplin and got a divorce and I can't say that I blame her."

The phoney Britisher went on the road in a musical show and eventually married the leading lady. She seemed to realize that he wasn't all fake. At least they're still married happily.

Bob Blade Stanhope Conway Cummings came to Hollywood 3½ years ago, still as a Britisher. He changed his name again to Bryce Hutchens and discovered that the only place open was at Paramount, where Director King Vidor wanted a native-born Texan to play in "So Red the Rose."

Got the Job

Cummings immediately became a Texan, complete with drawl, and got the job under a term contract. When at last his hoax leaked out, Paramount wanted to fire him, but couldn't, on account of that contract. So Bob worked in 23 movies. In some he played leads, but in many he was only one step above a dress extra. The studio paid little attention to him.

Another year passed. Paramount didn't pick up the option and there were Cummings and his wife worrying about eating regularly.

"When I lost out last September," Bob said, "I was poison. Not an agent would look at me. I finally got a job in a little picture out at Republic, called 'I Stand Accused.' It was a fluke hit.

"So at least I could get inside the casting offices again. Universal called me for a test in the Durbin picture, but Joe Pasternak said I wouldn't do because I wasn't a musician. He said I'd have to play the piano.

"I told him I could fake it. I'd had a lot of experience faking things harder than that. He let me try it and he signed me up. And I hope that's the last fakery I ever have to do."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 28 (I.N.S.).—Due to arrive in Hollywood Friday is Playwright Sidney Kingsley with a Paramount contract in his pocket. Kingsley is the lad who authored "Men In White," the Pulitzer prize-winning drama; "Dead End" and "The Outward Room." Even in the days when Sidney was courting Sylvia Sidney he refused to talk a movie deal so that William Le Baron, Paramount chief naturally feels elated at being able to persuade him to write the treatment for "Every Day Is Sunday."

LOUELLA PARSONS

Talked with the Para crowd today and was told Sidney's first is a story with a Stella Dallas mother love theme. Betty Fields, who came here from the stage for "What a Life," plays the daughter. The mother is yet to be found, but Henry Hathaway, the director, has started looking for an actress who can do as well as Barbara Stanwyck did in the Dallas sob drama.

Interesting gossip came to my ears just before I left for San Francisco for the "Alexander Graham Bell" preview. Wendy Hiller, whose work in "Pygmalion" made motion picture history, has been tested in England for the costarring role with Carole Lombard in Dr. Cronin's "Vigil in the Night." Most of us thought Miss Hiller was tied up by Gabriel Pascal for M-G-M but that isn't the case. She has no contract with him or any other producer. Certainly would be a casting novelty—a typical English and a typical American girl costarred. At the time the studio bought Cronin's still unpublished novel there was talk of costarring Ginger Rogers with Carole but it didn't materialize. Let's have brunette Wendy Hiller with the blonde Carole by all means if RKO can get her.

"Our Town," the Frank Craven play, is due to be bought any moment by Sol Lesser with a deal to make it for United Artists. You may remember I told you that Ernest Lubitsch, Lesser and David Loew were all negotiating deals with United Artists. Today they have all been officially signed.

Lesser finished his Bobby Breen-Irene Dare movies for RKO and then moves to United Artists, still financed by the Louis Lurie millions. Lubitsch completes Garbo's "Ninotchka" and "Shop Around the Corner" for Sullavan and Stewart before he joins Lesser as producer-director. David Loew, son of Marcus Loew, with a bankroll of $2,500,000 starts a long term contract with U. A.

Don't get the names mixed—it's Melvin, not Jerry, Wald who has just sold Hal Wallis his first book, "Benefit of Mankind," and Jerry's as proud of his kid brother as though he'd written it himself. It must be a good story because Warners are not only giving the younger Wald a chance to adapt his own brainchild in collaboration with Milton Krimsky—but John Garfield is set to play the top role. With John rating as one of the most popular and sought-after young actors in Hollywood —that is a real break for Wald, junior.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Leo Gorcey, the Dead Ender, reported secretly wed to 17-year-old Katherine Marvin; Peggy Fears in the Good Samaritan Hospital with a badcase of laryngitis, unable to keep her engagement to open at the Versailles; Reggie Gardiner is healing his broken arm and his broken heart at the same time, with Constance Moore as the remedy; Virginia Fields and Edgar Bergen the newest duet at Marcel's; Basil Rathbone gives a two-hour reading of Lord Byron's "Manfred" to the accompaniment of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra; Director Henry King has moved into a hotel until the scarlet fever sign is removed from his home; Willy Wyler choochooing to New York to talk business with Jimmy Roosevelt before he sails on the Normandie; Sam Wood docks Thursday after completing "Goodbye Mr. Chips" in England;; Sally Eilers, Constance Bennett, Mrs. Lew Schreiber and a few of the other members of the "Alexander Graham Bell" party remain in San Francisco for a few extra days to look over the fair.

Dick Powell is waiting for a Texas oil well to come in and make him rich; Ann (Oomph) Sheridan forgave the many pranks the Dead End Kids played on her and invited them and their girls to her home; Ginger Rogers sneaked in the back door to the preview of "The Castles." Fred Astaire didn't show, but Phyllis (Mrs. A.) was there to report to him; Steffi Duna reporting to RKO for additional tests in "The Dove"; Eleanor Powell and Billy Seymour have been doing lots of stepping these evenings at various spots.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 28.—All actors returning from Broadway give you glowing reports about this past winter in the New York theater. But it might interest you to know that the people who have poured gold into New York this last winter are refugees from Hollywood. We couldn't make up our minds about them. Sophie Tucker, Victor Moore, William Gaxton, Olson and Johnson, Bee Lillie, Jimmy Savo, Elsie Janis, Jimmy Durante, Ethel Merman and Tallulah Bankhead. They supported Broadway, but we kicked them out of Hollywood.

HOPPER

And how about Tony Martin? He's getting $4,500 a week on p.a.'s and stopping traffic and climbing to the top of taxicabs to sign autographs for the kids who follow him in the streets. His manager had to fly on to handle all his offers. But in pictures we wouldn't even let him sing. Bob Hope's doing all right for himself here, however. In a little over a year he's gone from $2,500 to $3,000 a week.

Producer Eddie Grainger is having superstition troubles on "Back Stage Phantom." The script called for Jan Duggan to wear peacock feathers. El Brendel whistled in his dressing room. Robert Coote read the last line of the play first, and Alan Dinehart threw his hat on the bed. All these are absolutely taboo to any actor.

Charlie Rogers is learning about children from little Jacqueline Gosko, who's been signed for "The Star Maker." "All right, now, watch the birdie," said the cameraman. "Never mind the birdie, hurry up and we'll get this in the can before lunch," says Jacqueline—and she's all of 4.

Lupe Velez has a white chihuahua that weighs only a little over a pound. She took him into the commissary at R. K. O. and her shrieks were heard for blocks, when she thought she'd lost him. He was found—in her lap, under a napkin!

Oh, to have been a fly on the wall at Constance Collier's house when she dined Alex Woollcott, Noel Coward, Charlie Chaplin and George Cukor. And let them take over while she went to a movie.

Alex doesn't seem to care for his "Profile in the New Yorker. Funny how one loves to dish it out—but so few can take it. Wonder if I'll be able to if my time should ever come? So few people have seen Alex' gentler sentimental side, he likes to keep that a dark, deep secret.

Joe Pasternack told me he will positively NOT give the pictures, "Rio" and "Almost an Angel," intended for Danielle Darrieux to any other actress. The real hitch in her not returning here is that Gregor Rabinowitch holds an option on her services for four pictures and her husband wants her to stay home—and who can blame him? So Gregor has put an exorbitant price on her services, but I believe a settlement is near, because she's next to Durbin in popularity at her studio.

Evidently the diplomatic service isn't what it's cracked up to be. Vice Consul Carlos Barbe of Uruguay, augments his income, by renting his deluxe car for pictures. Sits on the set while the car works. Car's in "Some Like It Hot."

Bill Wellman closed the "Beau Geste" set to women today with the explanation that such a frightening scene was going on that women would scream. The scene featured Gary Cooper, Robert Preston—and a mouse.

I was sitting on the "Secret Enemy" stage with—of all people —Boris Karloff, when the power failed and all the lights went out!

A gal is going 'round town saying that she originated the word "oomph" at Metro when she was trying to explain to someone what Nelson Eddy had in his voice that Allan Jones didn't. Claims oomph belongs to Eddy. Go to it, girls—you've got something to fight out!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 28.—It has been a gorgeous funeral that the writing boys have been giving Lou Gehrig this spring. Ever since the Yankees nove into St. Petersburg four weeks ago, the lads who man the typewriters have been burying the baseball career of Gehrig in a long procession of prophetic pieces. The tenor of the stories out of the Yankees camp has been "Lou Gehrig—1924-1939."

POVICH

Always, however, they have been interring him with honors. The obituaries are constantly mindful of the fact that Gehrig, in many respects, has been the most remarkable player in all big league baseball. They refer, of course, to his incredible feat of playing every Yankee game for 14 years, plus 260 exhibitions. But now, they say, the iron horse is covered with rust. The bench is beckoning and there's no mistaking the sign.

They're pretty positive about it. In the Gehrig obits, there is none of the caginess that was threaded through the stories that used to deal with Babe Ruth's imminent retirement. These same baseball writers learned that Ruth couldn't be written out of the game. He had a habit of making monkeys of the fellows who scented his collapse, taking that signal to launch some of his most virulent home run campaigns. He proved such a lively corpse that the writing boys became exceedingly wary of calling the turn on him.

Mass Opinion—But Ruth Fooled 'Em

But in the case of Gehrig, the limb is fairly creaking under the weight of mass opinion that the big fellow is at the end of his tether as a big league star. And not without cause, apparently. For the laddie known as Lou has, indeed, been looking like a stumblebum in the Yankees line-up this season. Around first base he has been moving at a pace which wouldn't stir the envy of a rheumatic snail. He has been finding it an effort to break on balls hit to his territory, and of late he has been letting the pitcher cover the bag on hits down the line, a la Zeke Bonura. He hasn't been showing any faith in his own ability to reach the base.

At bat he hasn't been able to get up a gallop, either. The terrific wrist action that always made him a great hitter is now lacking. He's tried a dozen different stances at the plate in an attempt to lay his bat against the ball, without much success. And that he has begun to worry about it, is plain enough. The expression on his face as he stands knee deep in his futility is truly eloquent. Lou doesn't like the state of affairs a bit.

To pharaphrase no less than Marc Antony, we come here neither to bury Gehrig nor to praise him, but the avidity with which our colleagues in the Yankee camp have boldly forecast his baseball demise is understandable enough. All of his matured life, Lou has been a giant of a man. He has carried 220 pounds on his frame for most of the 14 years he has been with the Yankees. After all, Babe Ruth had his vacations when he was with the Yanks, whether his excuse was one of his celebrated tummyaches, or one of his suspensions or merely indisposition on his part. But Gehrig has been in there playing 2,100 games in a row. It was a strain. Something was bound to give way, probably his legs. And in this instance it appears that it is his legs. That's where it gets most of 'em.

Yanks Find Him Hard to Replace

And some of the boys are already considering themselves scooped on what they allege to be Gehrig's exit from the big leagues. They should have started forecasting his decline as early as last spring, they say now. But they mistook his inability to hit early last season for one of those routine slumps that sometimes afflict ball players. Now they think they know better. As early as last April and May Lou was beginning to register decay. For the first time in 13 years he failed last season to hit as much as .300.

One thing is fairly certain, however. Not until he is desperately hard pressed will Manager Joe McCarthy interrupt Gehrig's consecutive-game streak by decree. McCarthy himself is authority for that declaration. "I don't want to take him out of there," the Yankees manager told a New York writer the other day. "Not until Lou comes to me and tells me he can't continue will I keep him out of the line-up."

It's a pretty tight bond of friendship that exists between Gehrig and Joe McCarthy. Joe always has had a great affection for his big first baseman. There has been, of course, the valuable service that Gehrig has given McCarthy's four pennant winners. Gehrig has played splendid ball for the Yanks. But McCarthy's esteem for Lou is founded on something deeper. There were those days when Babe Ruth was still a power on the Yankees and McCarthy was a new Yankee manager. In the Ruth-McCarthy feud, Joe had a stanch friend in Gehrig, who was coming to be something of a power on the Yankees himself. Lou gave Joe a great lift in those trying days.

If the boys are correct in their estimates of Gehrig and he is, indeed, looking pretty horrible, it may be the beginning of the end of the Yankee dynasty. In recent years the Yankees have come up with fine young outfielders, a potent young catcher, brilliant young pitchers, but there isn't a figure on the Yankee horizon who can compare with Gehrig as a first baseman. Sure enough, he never was any great shucks in the field, though he wasn't bad, but where is the young first baseman who can average 40 home runs a season, always bat around .350 and nearly always lead the league in runs driven in. If the writing boys aren't missing their guesses, the Yanks will miss this Gehrig.

On the Line —With Considine

New York, March 28.—Shoot if you must, this old grey head, but of the three challengers now confronting Joe Louis we like Max Baer's chances the best. To our mind he is two punches away from a million dollars—one punch to the jaw of Lou Nova and one to the chin of the champion.

CONSIDINE

He was shamefully beaten by Louis four years ago in a fight that saw him throw only one punch—and that a short right delivered after the bell in the second round. Perhaps the same thing will happen all over again in September. But at that he seems to be the fellow best fitted to render Joseph horizontal. He can punch with either hand, and can take a terrific amount of punishment—even Louis' kind.

Galento gets the first pop at Louis's jaw this summer, but the odds will be terrifically long as to whether the punch will land. Louis has worked himself up into a kind of a mad against Tony, which won't help Antonio's cause one whit. Louis doesn't think Tony is very funny, particularly, when he calls him a bum. He doesn't think Tony is much of a fighter either, and Tony might have a time making him change his mind—either by recourse to the record book or his knuckles.

Louis "Murders" Those Slow Guys

If Nova outpoints Baer Louis won't have any real trouble with him. And we write this with full memory of the fact that Nova did more physical damage to Tommy Farr than Louis did. He had Tommy stupid and glassy-eyed and sitting on a ring rope in the fourteenth round of their match this past winter.

But nobody is going to convince me that the Farr of last winter was the same guy who dropped down off a boat in July of 1937. He was a rough mauling bully-boy, that first Farr that America saw. Louis beat his hands pulpy on the Welshman's hard head, and was distressed, when Tommy, instead of falling, would come lumbering back with a crude barroom right. Louis didn't come close to knocking Farr down.

Nova's too slow. His feet tend to cross themselves, like a buck-and-winger, at critical moments of a fight. He's green and crude, and clumsy with inexperience. Louis murders those big slow guys, just as Dempsey did. He nails them, when they are wallowing around trying to find their balance, and when they get up again he is all over them, trying to break their necks. It's the wily ones who have bothered him; Pastor for instance, and the coldly scheming Schmeling. And even old Jim Braddock, until Jim lost his breath.

Baer floored Farr with two of the hardest punches we've ever seen. One was a left hook that sent Tommy down with a heavy crash. The other was one of those old Baer rights, a quick looper like the one that knocked out Schmeling and the one that finished Carnera.

There is no doubt in my mind that Baer has it in his power to knock out Louis, and that he is the only man in the heavyweight division of whom that can be said. There's still a lot of T. N. T. in his dukes, and more strength in his body than there was during his daffier days. But nobody knows what's in his heart. Perhaps not even Baer.

Joe Respects Baer as Fighter

It is pertinent to note that Louis is prouder of beating Baer than of any victim he's ever punched into an uncouth sprawl. This includes even Schmeling. Louis once told us that he thought he reached his peak against Baer; that he jabbed better, hit cleaner, and moved around easier than ever before or since. Our own hunch is that he is still short of his top prime, but when in his own mind he decides that licking Baer was more of an achievement than beating Braddock for the title and gaining that fearsome revenge on Schmeling, it's plain to see that Louis still harbors a numb respect for the slappy warrior.

That's what makes me believe that if Baer can ever land a whale of a punch against Louis' whiskers, Louis will be internally sprayed with the doubts and steamy fears of an inferiority complex. And thus hampered, might well be knocked out—for Baer is a savage front runner. He'd be pretty terrific if he ever landed the "there he goes!" punch of Louis. Galento and Nova? If they landed a good punch we believe that the blow would only infuriate Louis and make him fight harder, for deep in the Bomber's primeval spirit he has only contempt for these two.

If anybody has a chance, and we're not too sure anybody has, it is Baer. It will all depend on what condition his heart and spirit are in after he gets in the ring. What he says before that won't matter.

Sherwood Defeats Hyattsville, 24-19; D. & H., Dapper Dans In Final Tonight

Trailing 23-18 at halftime and apparently a beaten team, Delaware & Hudson stormed back in the third and fourth quarters last night to defeat Jewish Community Center, 39-32, and enter the final round of the men's unlimited division of the Post-A. A. U. basketball tournament before 1,500 fans at Eastern.

The victory qualified the Coalmen to meet Dapper Dans at 9 o'clock for the coveted title and its appending city amateur championship.

It will be "Foggy Bottom" against the collegiates when D. & H. lines up against the Dapper Dans in the deciding game of their current series. Starring for D. & H., which is composed mostly of the same players who won the A. A. U. crown over W. W. Chambers last year, are such stars as Tommy Folliard, "Pickles" Walker, Acky Viana and Don Fones, who achieved their reputation in high school and on the "sandlots."

Dapper Dans Polished

The Dapper Dans are just what their team name might indicate—a group of former college stars, polished and well versed in the niceties of the court sport. Prominent among this group are Jack Butterworth, until his graduation last month one of the greatest centers G. W. ever produced; Ollie Tipton, erstwhile Wilson Teachers College ace; Bill Noonan, also a Colonial graduate, and Gay Edelin, who served a stretch at Georgetown.

A sidelight which may rival the game itself for interest and excitement is the impending individual duel between Butterworth and Hal Kiesel, D. & H. center, who is most often compared with Jack when outstanding G. W. centers are mentioned.

Walker Halts Karp

Getting back to D. & H.'s stirring comeback triumph over Jewish Community Center, it was accomplished chiefly because of the masterful defensive performance of "Pickles" Walker, who held Sid Karp scoreless for more than a half.

Walker was assigned the unenviable task of watching the sharpshooting Jewish ace just before the end of the first half. Then Karp had been living up to his billing as the "hottest" player in the tournament. He had dumped four field goals and a free throw through the hoop to spark his team's early attack. But at the end, Karp still had nine points, a tribute to the leech-like guarding of the lanky, gum-chewing Walker.

D & H's scoring leaders were

Rangers Rally To Score Over Bruins by 2-1

By the United Press.

New York, March 28.—A game New York Rangers hockey team fought off elimination from the Stanley Cup play-offs by coming from behind to score a 2-1 victory over the heavily favored Boston Bruins tonight in a wide-open contest featured by a free-for-all fight in the first period.

A crowd of 15,692 in Madison Square Garden saw Lynn Patrick sink the deciding goal at 10:02 of the second period.

Toronto Maple Leafs Beat Red Wings, 4-1

Toronto, March 28 (AP).—The Toronto Maple Leafs took a long step toward the Stanley Cup finals tonight by trouncing the Detroit Red Wings, 4 to 1, in the opening game of their semifinal National Hockey League playoff series.

At the top of their game after a long rest which followed their two-game conquest of the New York Americans in the preliminary round, the Leafs jumped into the lead in the sixth minute of play tonight and never were even threatened. They completed their scoring, with Nick Metz and Gordon Drillon each notching two goals, before Marty Barry sank the lone Red Wing tally.

As the semifinal round is on a two-of-three-games basis, the Maple Leaf victory made it necessary for Detroit to win both the second game on its home rink Thursday and the third here Saturday in order to reach the finals.

Brink Victor Over Canzoneri In Slow Fight

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 28.—Tony Canzoneri's ring generalship alone wasn't enough tonight and the tough little former lightweight champion dropped a ten-round decision to Irish Eddie Brink, a black-haired belter from Scranton, Pa., at the Hippodrome.

CANZONERI

A far cry from the former king, once rated as the best battler in the world for his weight and inches, Tony outsmarted the Pennsylvanian from start to finish, but Brink landed the most punches and took a close decision. Canzoneri scaled at 141¾, Brink, 139¾.

The decision, a distinct upset in this indoor fight season which has been studded by surprises, was greeted by mingled boos and cheers from the crowd of 3,569, which contributed to a gross gate of $8,725.50, most of which goes to the Federation of Jewish Charities.

Canzoneri fought in flashes during each round. Although he gave a masterful exhibition of defensive skill, at times letting Brink throw punches at him for a full minute as he bobbed and weaved out of their path, the former champion was hit freely, especially around the body in every round. He staggered the Pennsylvanian three times with right hand shots, especially in the ninth when Brink showed signs of sagging to the canvas.

Yanks Trounce Dodgers, 9-1, Behind Haley, Hildebrand

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clearwater, Fla., March 28.—The Yanks reaped sweet revenge for yesterday's loss to the Dodgers by trimming their National League rivals, 9-1, here today behind three-hit pitching by Oral Hildebrand and Rookie Jack Haley.

The Yankees hammered out 15 hits off Vito Tamulis, Tot Pressnell and Ira Hutchinson to chalk up their eleventh victory in 17 games. Only Hutchinson had any luck at all with the hard-hitting American League champions, pitching scoreless ball for the last three frames.

Chicago, March 28 (I.N.S.).—New York's Renaissance cagers won the world's professional basketball championship tonight at the Chicago Coliseum by beating the Oshkosh (Wis.) All Stars, 34 to 25, in the final of the first professional tourney before 3,000 fans.

Both the Rens and the Stars gave good exhibitions of ball handling and screening, but their shooting wasn't up to standard.

Mrs. DavyLoses To 15-Year-Old Girl in Golf

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 28—Fifteen-year-old Jeanne Cline, of Bloomington, Ill., who played her first tournament golf last June, stole the show in the women's North and South event today with a 19-hole victory over Mrs. Myron Davy, of Washington, D. C.

The sturdy, black-haired youngster won with a par four at the nineteenth in the first round of match play. She qualified yesterday for the top flight of 32 with an 83.

To get within striking distance, she rallied coming in, won the fifteenth and sixteenth with pars, and squared the match on the 457-yard seventh with a birdie four.

All the favorites won.

Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Chapel Hill, N. C., the medalist and former national champion, edged out Mrs. R. Holman, of Greenwich, Conn., 3 and 2, and Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, Ga., runner-up in the qualifying, eliminated Mrs. Leo

Dykes Ready to Ease Out as Player

Now 42, Chisox Pilot Will Be in Lineup Little as Possible

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 28.—James J. Dykes, fat and 42, is ready at least to ease himself into the "old rockin' chair—after 21 years of playing major league baseball.

For several summers the rotund little manager of the Chicago White Sox has been carrying the title "dean of active Amreican Leaguers." Now, according to the club rosters, his term of active service has made him top man in both the American and National circuits and he's ready to pass the title on to someone else.

"I'm going to play just as little as possible," Uncle Jim wrote from Pasadena, Calif., where the White Sox are in spring camp. "In fact, the games I play will be infinitesimal—how's that for a word, huh?

"Sure, I'll keep in shape to play

if an emergency arsises, but I'll go in there only as a last resort. I'll have Ollie Bejma, and, after a while Jackie Hayes (who is nursing a trick knee) to help out in the infield, so I don't expect to do much work."

To those who have been watching the White Sox drills, it's obvious that Dykes doesn't intend to play at all this summer, even though he remains on the active list. He has slowed down to a lazy jaunt—and he's jaunted only two or three times this spring—and thus far has taken almost no infield workouts.

His arm, however, remains one of baseball's greatest mysteries—and the envy of managers in both leagues. He can rifle the ball from third to first with the best of them, and did it on the first day of spring training. It apparently is just as great a "whip" as it was when Jimmy was with the Philadelphia Athletics—one of the finest third sackers in baseball.

DeShong, Appleton Allow 4 Hits to Rest Of Gas House Gang; Gelbert Gets Homer

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 28.—Johnny Mize, who has a lifetime batting average of .345 in the big leagues and looks as if he will stick with the Cardinals, stroked the remnants of the gas house gang to a very decisive 5-3 victory over the Nats today.

He did it with his little bat. He hit a single, then he hit a double, then he hit a triple, then he hit another single to bat 1.000 for the day, and figure in four of the five St. Louis runs.

He was in the hair of Jimmy DeShong and Pete Appleton all afternoon. The two veteran pitchers yielded only four hits to the remainder of the Cardinals cast, but Mize's four added up to eight hits for the Cardinals.

Home Run for Gelbert

Save for Bobby Estalella, who celebrated his first two appearances at bat with a pair of doubles, and Charley Gelbert, who knocked a home run, the Nats were not taking many liberties with the pitching of the two Cardinal left-handers—Veteran Bob Weiland and Rookie Tom Sunkel. In the seven innings he pitched, Weiland allowed the Nats the eight hits they did make.

The Nats had a scant 1-0 lead until St. Louis came to bat in the third inning. Back in the first, Buddy Lewis and Bobby Estalella shook Weiland loose from a run after Don Gutteridge had robbed George Case of some kind of an extra base hit with a fancy stop of Case's slashing drive down the third-base line. Lewis then singled to center and Estalella thumped a long double to left-center to move him home.

All of a sudden Jimmy DeShong's control deserted him in the third inning after he had held the Cardinals to two useless hits. DeShong upped and walked the first three men to face him and then he pitched a single to Ducky Medwick. Then he pitched an enormous double to Johnny Mize, whose blow cleared the head of Centerfielder Sammy West. Result: Three runs for the Cardinals.

Cards Make It 4-1

Charley Gelbert, who used to be a Cardinal himself, hacked a run away from that 3-1 lead of the Cardinals in the fourth inning. He did it all by himself with a majestic home-run sock that cleared the leftfield fence at a time when nobody was on base.

But the Cardinals got that run back in the fifth after DeShong had struck out Stu Martin as a starter. He didn't strike out Enos Slaughter, who singled to left, and he didn't strike out Mr. Mize, who banged a big three-bagger to the centerfield wall.

Pete Appleton, who inherited the Nats pitching job after the sixth, gave the Nats plenty of encouragement to tie the score by holding the Cardinals to one run for the rest of the game, but the Nats were making very little headway against Weiland.

They fizzled one fine opportunity in the seventh when Jimmy Wasdell led off with a single to right and Rookie Jacks Early whacked a solid two-bagger to right, but the Nats got only one run out of these proceedings because in rapid succession Appleton popped up, West got a walk and Bluege and Estalella grounded out.

Goldfish Gulping Derby Lead Taken By Penn, 25 to 24

Dunked in catsup and followed by a chaser of orange juice, 17 goldfish went down "Gill's" gullet before he paused. But he continued to gulp them whole.

"They're tasteless that way," he said.

Standings in the "goldfish derby": Hollandersky, Penn, 25; Irving M. Clark, Harvard, 24; Frank Pope, Franklin and Marshall, 3; Lothrop Withington, jr., Harvard, 1.

Md. House Approves Totalisators Bill After 2-Hour Debate

Legislation Step Nearer Enactment

Interests Opposing Installation of Totes Receive 'Set Back'

Annapolis, Md., March 28 (AP).—Racetrack interests opposing mandatory installation of totalisators to compute betting odds at one-mile Maryland racetracks were bested in an acrimonious two-hour debate today.

The mandatory bill requiring installation of the totes moved a step nearer enactment when the House of Delegates adopted the favorable report of the Ways and Means Committee on the measure.

Harford County delegates, where the Havre de Grace track is located, and John Conroy (Democrat), 2nd, Baltimore, led the fight to kill the bill by recommitting it to the Ways and Means group.

Carries the Battle

Delegate Leon Abramson (Democrat), 4th, Baltimore, author of the measure, carried the battle in favor of tote installation, with help from Jerome Robinson (Democrat), 4th, Baltimore, William H. Lloyd (Republican), Dorchester, and Bernard Melnicove (Democrat), 4th, Baltimore.

"Pimlico has given in to the pressure of public opinion and has installed the totes," Abramson said, "the other three tracks still maintain their public-be-damned attitude, and that's why they oppose this measure.

"There is no doubt that the public, which pays the freight at these tracks, is entitled to the protection and faster odds computation offered by a totalisator." Abramson continued, "it's high time the public got a break from the racetracks they support, and which enjoy a monopoly of big league racing in Maryland."

Abramson had his opponents tied in knots in the debate on the floor. Delegate John Clark (Democrat), Harford, declared he doubted if Abramson "could verify his statement that the racing commission favors installation of the tote."

Urges Installation

"If the gentleman from Harford county is implying I'm a liar, I refer him to the annual report of the racing commission," Abramson said. Then he read from the report, which flatly urges immediate installation of the totes, and cites unwillingness of the tracks to comply.

Abramson also hopped on a charge by Leo Moore (Democrat), Harford, that installation of the totes would result in unemployment of track clerks. The Baltimorean forced an admission from Clark that the racing commission said there would be no reduction in employment.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIR, $15.70, $5.80, $3.90; GOLDEN THOUGHT, $3.70, $3.50; JACK FLY, $9.10.

FAIR broke well, was under pressure the entire journey and was hard urged to maintain her lead to the end. GOLDEN THOUGHT, in closest pursuit of the winner from the start made a bold bid, but was not good enough. JACK FLY, well up in the early running, closed with determination in the final stages. DANCING DOLL showed good speed for half a mile then weakened.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:34. Off 2:37½. Winner, M. Gettinger's b. f. (4), by Happy Argo—Sunny Skies. Trained by A. Bellevue. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46, 1:06.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SKY ARGO, $29.80, $12.80, $6.40; IDLE SUN, $7.80, $5.00; MERRYPHAR, $3.90.

SKY ARGO broke on top, could not keep up the fast pace set by MERRYPHAR, in the early stages, but moved up fast rounding the turn for home and won going away at the finish. IDLE SUN, in close quarters in the early running, moved up stoutly on the outside coming into the stretch and disposed of the tiring MERRYPHAR, public choice, at the finish. The latter opened up a commanding lead in the first half mile, but weakened steadily thereafter. BLUE BOO showed a good effort. JUST AN IDEA lacked early foot, but closed well.

Daily Double, Fair and Sky Argo, Paid $205.00.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:02. Off 3:03½. Winner, L. M. Briggs' b. or br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHA HAE, $18.30, $10.30, $4.50; CHANCER, $20.20, $7.10; SAUNDERSTOWN, $2.70.

WHA HAE lost no time going to the lead and raced head and head with SAUNDERSTOWN most of the journey on the inside, withstood a grueling stretch duel and just did get the nod at the finish. CHANCER, outrun the early part, came through on the inside on the stretch turn to outgame SAUNDERSTOWN at the finish. The latter, hard pressed by the winner most of the journey, faltered slightly at the finish. FAUST, second public choice, away slowly, gained steadily on the inside and could not find racing room at the finish. JANE VITO, prominent for a half mile, weakened steadily thereafter. BLACK RIVER and CRUISING never could threaten.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:33. Off 3:36. Winner, A. L. Aste's b. f. (3), by Happy Argo—My Dear. Trained by J. Hogan. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23, 0:46 1-5, 1:12 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS HAPPY, $6.00, $3.60, $3.30; PRADIS, $14.60, $6.40; MISS WHIM, $3.40.

MISS HAPPY, public favorite, away well, moved up on the inside going down the far side, took command at the quarter pole and widened out on her field thereafter, winning well in hand. PRADIS gradually improved his position during the early running and closed with a rush in the stretch. MISS WHIM, in close attendance of the pacemakers, threatened mildly in the stretch, then gave way slightly at the finish. ROYAL TASTE showed speed for half a mile then retired thereafter.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:03. Off 4:03½. Winner, K. A. Veit's dk. ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUNINPLAY, $5.20, $3.30, $2.70; FRANCESCO, $4.40, $3.00; XAVIER, $3.10.

SUNINPLAY broke fast, was taken off the pace the first half mile, raced head and head with CO-SPORT while on the inside the remainder of the journey and just did outgame FRANCESCO at the wire. The latter, far out of it in the early running, came around the leaders in the stretch and made a bold bid, but just failed to get up in time. XAVIER, circling prominently most of the way, could not find racing room when making his bid in the final stages. CO-SPORT set the early pace, then gave way to the winner, was much used up thereby and weakened in the last 70 yards. BUTTERMILK showed brief speed, then retired.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:33. Off 4:35. Winner, F. J. Volmer's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOWN CAR, $25.70, $7.90, $6.90; ACTDINE, $3.50, $3.00; THE WINK, $9.20.

TOWN CAR went to the front at once, held away under hard urging the entire trip and just lasted. ACTDINE, public favorite, in closest pursuit of the winner, made a game bid, but could not get up in time. THE WINK, prominently placed, hung on well in the finish. WILLIAM V, in the contention throughout, closed stoutly in the stretch run. FAY D, second choice, was steadily outrun and could not threaten.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:02. Off 5:04½. Winner, Seven Acre Farm's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHINING SUN, $20.80, $9.60, $5.50; MARFEU, $9.70, $7.00; PANORASCOPE, $5.50.

SHINING SUN lost no time going to the front, widened out on his field on the far side and won as his rider pleased. MARFEU, in closest attendance of the leader the entire trip, hung on well at the finish. PANORASCOPE, well up throughout, was no match for the first two. FIRST ENTRY, favorite, was taken back in the early runnnig and could not make up any ground when called upon. COPPER TUBE and KIEVEX, tired out, made up some ground. SEED showed some early foot then retired steadily thereafter.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:33. Off 5:35. Winner, W. W. Adams' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OZARK, $33.20, $14.60, $8.80; MAYRO, $5.70, $4.00; ROCKY MEADOW, $5.60.

OZARK, reserved off the early pace, moved around his field on the far turn and was under steady pressure to the finish. MAYRO, unable to keep up during the early running, closed with a belated rush in the stretch drive. ROCKY MEADOW, well up in the early part of it, outgamed ICY WIND at the finish. The latter forced a fast pace with GLENBROOM and tired in the closing strides. LEGERDEMAIN closed well after a tardy beginning. GLENBROOM set an early pace and wilted when the final test came. GURKHA wheeled when the break came and unseated his rider.

Middle Atlantic Trials Are Slated For May 22; Choice Comes as Surprise

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Sectional qualifying rounds for the 1939 National Open championship of this District were awarded to the Congressional Country Club yesterday, marking the third consecutive year that the District has been the scene of the Middle Atlantic trials.

The Maryland State Golf Association was named by the U. S. G. A. to handle the event, May 22, over the 36-hold route. Association Vice Presidents Dr. Robert A. Keilty, of the host club, and Harry G. Pitt, Manor golf committee chairman, will be in charge.

The announcement was somewhat of a surprise as it was Baltimore's turn for the trials, and several Virginia clubs were believed interested. Chevy Chase was the scene of the 1937 rounds, when five qualified for the Open in Detroit, and last year at Indian Spring Robert Barnett, Lewis Worsham and Johnny Bass won places to the championship in Denver.

Scheduled June 8, 9, 10

With the championship proper scheduled at the Philadelphia Country Club (Spring Mill course), West Conshohocken, Pa., June 8, 9, and 10, possibly the largest local field in history will shoot for the coveted places in the greatest golfing show of all.

The entries should total at least 50 and maybe 75 as this is the closest to the District that the Open has been played since 1934, when Ardmore, Pa., was the scene. It should be the largest field since Columbia Country Club was host in 1921.

The course will be open for practice rounds of the District entries Thursday and Friday, May 18 and 19, and to the out-of-town participants Sunday, May 21.

Entries close May 9 with the United States Golf Association offices in New York City.

Favors Cox

The spot will be a natural one for host professional Wiffy Cox, who has been on the threshold of several national open crowns. Cox will be an odds-on favorite to cop one of the expected seven or eight berths.

The District will not have an automatic qualifier, one of the low 30 players in last year's championship, as Lewis Worsham, only competitor, qualified for the final day but was out of the money circle.

The qualifying rounds will mark the second major sectional event for Congressional in a week's time, as the Maryland State woman's championship is slated May 15 to 19, inclusive, and the semifinals and finals will run into the practice rounds for the local players.

Last year Congressional was the scene of the Maryland Open, District Amateur and National Amateur qualifying rounds. The top score of 154 that qualified for the seven amateur berths will probably be several strokes higher than the faster pace for the Open qualifications.

Mat Preliminaries Complete for Bouts Tomorrow Night

What sounds curiously like a plot to gang up on the Golden Terror, hooded villain of the wrestling ring, came to light last night with the announcement of the complete supporting card for tomorrow night's show at the Arena.

The Terror tangles with that stalwart strangler, Bibber McCoy, in the feature attraction. In bouts underneath are Red Ryan, of Philadelphia; Jack Hader, a Johnny-come-lately to Washington; Dropkick Murphy, the Boston Adonis, and George Pencheff, claimant to the Australian title. All have had dealings with the Terror at one time or another, and cordially dislike his looks as well as tactics.

Promoter Joe Turner quite naturally denied that the quartet will be rushed to McCoy's rescue if he shows signs of weakening during his bout with the Terror. He also squelched rumors that the boys were planning to gang up on the Terror in the dressing room. If there's going to be any action Turner wants it in the ring in full view of the customers.

To keep the record straight, tomorrow night's line-up is as follows: Ryan meets Hank Methany, who isn't overburdened with popularity in this precinct; Hader faces Gene Bowman; Murphy's partner will be Alonzo Woods, and Pencheff will have it out with Ernie Powers, former Texas A. and M. athlete.

Acquires Pitcher

Albany, N. Y., March 28 (AP).—President Tom McCaffrey, of the Albany club of the Eastern Baseball League, announced today acquisition on option of Paul A. Gehrman, 6-foot 195-pound pitcher, from Cincinnati, of the National League.

Baering Down

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer.

Monday's Supreme Court decision reaches the ideal form of taxation. Now the turnip is squeezing itself.

The States can tax National Government and the Federal lads can tax the States. That's like playing touch tag with blackjacks.

We've reached the stage where we are carrying water on both shoulders and our tongues are sticking out with thirst.

We will have to look up that stamp act to find out whether the accent was on the taxation or the representation.

Wilson High's Baseball Series Contenders at Work

Post Staff Photos.

The baseball team that Woodrow Wilson High hopes will go places in the Interhigh series (upper photo) takes time out from the strenuous drills it has undergone the last two weeks to listen to words of wisdom from its coach, Carl Heintel. In the lower picture, Nick Cokinos, a husky outfielder who will supply much of the President's plate punch this season, takes a practice cut. The man behind the mask is Fred Leser

Pitcher Byer Mainstay of Wilson Nine

Lack of Experience Expected to Mire Presidents in Series

By Bill Burnett.

(This is the first of a series of articles discussing 1939 prospects of each of the seven high school baseball teams which begin the annual Interhigh race the middle of next month.)

One veteran, happily a pitcher, stands out on the diamond crew Coach Carl Heintel, of Woodrow Wilson, will throw against opposition in the western division of the Interhigh League this year. He is Herman Byer, a senior, and a strapping youngster possessed of one of the finest curves the high schools have unearthed.

The rest of his nine Coach Heintel will be forced to build out of men playing their first year of organized ball or out of substitutes from last year. The rigid scholastic rulings at Wilson make this necessary, otherwise at least two other veterans might perform.

Like "Moke" MacDonald, the star basketball guard who never got into the Presidents' line-up because of grades, Bart Fugler, a heavy-hitting outfielder, may be forced to warm the bench. And Bill Bush, who threw enough fast balls for Wilson last year to earn his green "W," may also be a scholastic casualty when the season gets under way.

Rookies Need Experience

Besides Byer on the mound there will be two youthful twirlers with more promise than experience. They are Joe Wills and Bill Poore, reserves from last year. The catching will be ably handled by Charley Garner and Ralph Calisto, converted gridders, and Fred Leser.

Heintel has two likely novices warring for each of the base jobs, but Frank Bond, the pigskin-hurling star of Wilson, is his only dependable shortstop. On first it will be either Al Pyles or Jim Morgan; on second, either Ed Rabbitt or Julie Columbus, and on third, either Eddie Pathomos, Ray Banello or Bill Kowaleski.

The outfield should be no serious problem, numerous men with strong bat and fielding talent having turned out. Nick Cockinos, who joined Wilson forces in the middle of last grid season and managed for a plunging fullback position, can whale a ball right vigorously and fields with the best of them. Other candidates are Roland Cornwall, Bill Cowan, Bill Leaphart, Dominic Valenza, Walter Hess and Frank Hettenkemer.

Likely to Finish Third

Wilson's start in the series this year is its third. In its first, in 1937, it finished fourth, ahead of Roosevelt and Central, and last year it was fifth, once more beating out Central.

Where will it finish this year? The lack of veteran material indicates another year back in the also rans. It might work itself up to third place, but hardly higher. One thing that counts in the Presidents' favor, however, is the success their coach has teaching baseball. His instruction was almost solely responsible for the showing Wilson made in its first two years of competition.

Softball Body Denies Motion To Divide Loop

About 30 representatives of leagues in the District of Columbia Softball Association, meeting for the purpose of electing officers for the coming season, unanimously squelched a move to divide the association into Class A and B leagues last night.

The association will continue as it stands at present. The so-called weaker leagues will be forced to compete with the strongest. The season will officially open April 15, with the deadline for transfers of players set for July 15.

Another prospective new ruling of the body suffered a quick death when representatives unanimously voted against allowing players to belong to two teams in different leagues.

The new board of governors includes Temple Jarrell, Prince Georges County League; Harold Vincent, Government League; Vic Barrate, Sunday Morning League; Joe Mitchell, Sherwood League, and Joe Bertolini, of the Agriculture League. Vincent was elected secretary of the body.

Va. Swim Meet

Richmond, March 28 (AP).—Tentative plans were announced today for a State-wide swimming meet, topped by a clash for senior men's team honors, at Shields Lake here, July 15. Plans for the State event were the outgrowth of last year's city swimming meet.

Terp Golfers To Meet G. W., Catholic U.

A 14-match golf schedule, the most pretentious ever undertaken by linksmen of Maryland University, was released last night by Jim Brownell, captain of the Terp team.

Included on the list were the golf squads of Catholic University and George Washington, though Georgetown, which long has turned out the best teams in the District area, was not included. The Terps meet C. U. on April 29, and will undergo a home-and-home arrangement with the Colonials. All of Maryland's home matches will be over the Indian Spring course.

Four other home - and - home matches will be played, these including Baltimore University, Loyola, Richmond University and Western Maryland. The blossoming Terrapin Linksmen will participate in Western Maryland's tournament on May 6, and the Southern Conference tournament May 12 and 13.

Brownell, brother of the Bobby Brownell who recently caused a flurry in amateur golf circles hereabouts, will head the team and his teammates will probably be Bill Rea, former Tech star; Julian Murphy and Bob Harmon, formerly of Central; George DeWitt, of Western, and several golfers from the Baltimore branch of the school.

April 4, at Baltimore U.: 7, Loyola; 14, George Washington; 15, Richmond; 18, Franklin-Marshall; 22, at Western Maryland; 25, at Loyola; 28, Haverford; 29, Catholic U.; May 4, at Richmond; 5, Baltimore U.; 6, at Western Maryland extramural tournament; 8, at Johns Hopkins; 9, Western Maryland; 11, at George Washington; 12-13, at Southern Conference tourney, Charlottesville, Va.

Asheville, N.C., Bowlers Star In Congress

Cuff and Santini Drop to Fourth As Members Fall Off

V. Johns, Asheville Bowling Center (N. C.) star, took high honors in the afternoon rolling of singles yesterday in the National Duckpin Congress at Lucky Strike, his games being 135-129-132 for a total of 396. His teammates, E. Hamilton and E. Steelman, each rolled a set of 381 to place second and third, respectively.

Irving Simon, a Washington roller, registered high game of the tourney, 180, as he paired with Mike Vitale in the doubles to tally 779 for fifth place in the event. Simon's individual set, assisted by the sensational single game, was 434.

Cuff and Santini team, of Washington, finished fourth in the team event, though until the final game it had a fine chance of finishing first. A last game 590 spoiled its chances, however. Ed Blakeney, with an individual 1197 in the all-events, was high for last night's competition with a 403 total.

Second high of the Cuff and Santini contingent last night was T. Santini, whose 399 helped out the team's total considerably. Blakeney, H. Smith and P. Jarmon were responsible for the fall-off in the final game, each dropping down at least 20 pins from their previous game totals.

Columbia League

Eddie Keith, member of the Arcadia Pontiac team in the Columbia Heights League, rolled a high game of 153 last night at Arcadia, his teammates joining together for high team game and set of 664 and 1,858, respectively. Sam Simon rolled individual high set of 402.

Lutheran Men's League

Ackerman, of the Keller, No. 2 quint, registered a game of 146, while Hoover, of St. Paul No. 1, assisted his team to high team set of 1,716 and game of 588 with a 379.

Lutheran Ladies League

The Grace team stole most of the honors, Margaret Haslit rolling a high set of 324 while the team took game and set honors of 501 and 1,436. Gladys Brocker, of Zion, rolled high game, 138.

PWA League

Hostilities came to a close in the PWA League at the Ice Palace as Joe Mulroe rolled high game of 146, Walters had a set of 387, Personal took team game honors with 582, and Accounts was credited with team set, 1,698.

Final standings showed Personnel in first place, having won 61 matches during the season and dropped 20. Accounts was second with 47 victories against 34 losses. Mulroe's 205 game and 430 set stood as individual records for the year, while Accounts held the team records, 664 and 1,782. Bassford had high game average of 115.

Standards Five Meets Library

The long-awaited Bureau of Standards - Library of Congress game is scheduled for Government-Y. M. C. A. Basketball League followers tonight when the two teams meet for the second time this season on the Central "Y" court at 8:20 o'clock. The fives are deadlocked for the loop lead with six wins and one loss.

Patent Office and Social Security Board, which is tied with G. A. O. for second place, will furnish the added attraction at 9:30. State Department meets Farm Credit Administration at 9:30; National Archives faces G. A. O. at 8:20, while the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce-Public Health game opens the card at 7:10.

Hal Sharkey, 44, Golf Writer, Dies

Sharkwey was a close friend of Wiffy Cox, Congressional pro, and Mrs. Cox. He was the originator of the winter tours, that are now the most profitable part of the pro game.

The Brighter Side . . .

By Damon Runyon

Phil Lee, a Brooklyn fellow, read our column about the talent scout for the slick paper magazine recently and took his typewriter in hand and wrote us quite an interesting piece about the way those slicks are run, especially with reference to their fiction.

RUNYON

"We would like to meet up with a couple of those talent scouts," he says, "because we often find ourselves wondering whether under their hair they don't have 3 feet of country sausage for brains."

He thinks the editors of those slicks are too hidebound with technicality, still talking about their fiction, and he says: "We wonder if, in this day of ideologies, technocracy, and horrifying exactitude, if this business of writing hasn't sacrificed some of its old-fashioned art of word-slinging to technique.

"Look at some of the writers' magazines," Phil Lee says. "We don't doubt that by following the prescribed formulas to the letter, a manuscript would win acceptance from the particular magazine at which it was slanted. We don't doubt it, but we never saw it happen.

"Neither did we ever see a cake made out of a cook book," he continues. 'Why do you keep a cook book?' we once asked our mother; we never see you use it.' To which she replied, we think rather sagely, 'A good cook always keeps a cook book—in the drawer.'"

Maybe He's Right

The gist of Phil Lee's argument is that the fiction editors ought to take more chances on youthful originality, and we are inclined to think he may be right. Still, we suppose the editors are like everybody else that has to decide questions of a similar nature. They prefer playing it safe to gambling. That is only human.

We have always tried to be a sort of prophet of the unknown and the unsung, not only in writing, but in a lot of other fields, but we probably have a worse time trying to get people to lend an ear to our judgment of talent than anybody in the world. Sometimes we wonder if it is because we have established ourself as a poor judge.

Still, that cannot be altogether true, because some of the talent we tried to peddle in embryo, as you might say, was later discovered by somebody else and proved everything that we thought of it in the first instance. Maybe we are just unlucky for talent.

Remember This One?

William Dunn, a pal of Jimmy Durante, tells us a number of horse player anecdotes and in one of them we easily recognize our own horse-playing mishaps.

After a persistent losing streak a fellow got desperate for a winner and one day bet on all the horses in a five-horse race. He just wanted to be able to say he finally nailed one, we suppose. He gave the bets to a handbook early in the morning of the day of the races.

When he got the racing edition that evening and looked to see which of the horses he had wagered on had bowed down there, he discovered that the race had been won by an added starter.

Well, all horse players must die broke.

For Bridge Fans

Elsie Gray sends us an autographed copy of her little booklet entitled "The Human Side of Bridge," and we call on our readers to observe our self-restraint in not remarking that we did not know there is a human side to bridge.

Jack Kearns, the prize-fight manager, once tried to teach us bridge, but he made up all his own rules as he went along and that way we never could win, so we decided it was a poor game for us. However, we like Elsie Gray's remarks on the game, especially the one of her 20 "don'ts" that says "don't bring your dog to a bridge club; it's no place for him."

We have occasionally wondered vaguely whatever became of John Jay McDevitt, Pennsylvania's once celebrated millionaire-for-a-day, and here is a letter from Wyndham Wallace saying he has written an autobiography of the redoubtable Mac. That ought to be something for those magazine talent scouts to think about.

The Poor Richard Club, of Philadelphia, once gave McDevitt an award for the greatest person exploitation in 25 years and he earned it. He was a hobo, medicine man, prize-fighter, reporter, politician, actor and candidate for President of these United States.

C. U., Hoyas Clash on Ice For 1st Time

Cards' First Line Appears to Hold Edge Over G. U. Tonight

Local intercollegiate ice play gets started tonight as the hockey teams of Catholic University and Georgetown U. clash at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace, starting at 8:30 p. m. This game will mark the beginning of hostilities between the two schools.

The first line of the Cardinal's sextette appears to have the edge on the Hoya's first line. Jerry Strang at center, and Jim Davis with Herman Timmins at the wing positions give the C. U. team a faster, more experienced line. Strang formerly played for St. Patricks School in Ottowa, Canada, and now captains the C. U. team. Davis played for Boys Latin, in Boston, and performed for an amateur team there last year.

Defensively, Georgetown has the edge. Big John Smith, Hilltopper right defense, gives the G. U. team its advantage. Smith, a speedy skater, despite his bulk and height, ranks second to his teammate, Jim Graham, in team scoring. Graham, who has scored in every tilt this season, also comes from Boston, where he played prep school and amateur hockey. Vic Powers will hold forth at left defense for the G. U. sextette. Powers has played in every game with the Hoyas and is a steady, dependable defenseman.

Madeira School Sword Award Won By Betty Strong

Betty Strong of Rochester, N. Y., won the tournament which annually climaxes the Madeira School's fencing season yesterday, beating out Mary Linder, of Montclair, N. J.

Miss Strong also captained the "Whites," who defeated the "Reds" for the school team title. The losers were captained by Helen Chenery, of Pelham Manor, N. Y.

For her victory in the singles Miss Strong was awarded the first prize of a sword by Maj. E. L. Dyer, master of the sword at Madeira. He presented Mary Linder with a second prize.

Among the spectators was Ambassador Polon Eloy Alfaro, president of the Washington Fencing Club. Count Gabriel De Gramont, of the French Embassy, assisted in the judging.

Tech Court Star Shifts to Eastern

At the suggestion of Coach Bruce Kessler, his basketball instructor at McKinley High for the past two years, Sydney "Moe" Sehulman, Post All-High center at the T street institute, will lend his cage talents to Eastern High next season.

Kessler was unable to reconcile himself and the type of basketball he teaches his Tech Midgets to Schulman's individuality, and told his star cager at the end of the season that Eastern was the logical place for him.

Hershey Beats Ramblers, Evens Title Series

Hershey, Pa., March 28 (I.N.S.). In one of the wildest games ever played in the Hershey arena, the Hershey Bears tonight defeated the Philadelphia Ramblers, 4-3, to even up the first-place playoffs in the International American Hockey League.

The Bears' first marker was an automatic goal after Alex Levinsky, Rambler defenseman, threw his stick and hit Wally Kilrea, who had broken through the Philly defense and hit the nets, in the initial period. Terry Reardon, Hershey's sparkling center, led the drive.

Pitcher Ed Brandt Signs With Coast Club

Hollywood, March 28 (AP).—Pitcher Ed Brandt, released last week by the Pittsburgh Pirates for what Manager Pie Traynor called "keeping late hours," came to terms today with Hollywood of the Pacific Coast League.

Brandt, a left-hander, saw service with Boston and Brooklyn in the National League before joining the Pirates in 1936. He is 34.

The Stars also announced the signing of Ernie Orsatti, former St. Louis Cardinals' outfielder.

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 28. It used to be, not so many years ago, that major league scouts looked no farther than the Class A clubs of the minors for prospective talent, but in recent years they have branched out broadly, for time has proved that a ball player may appear in the most unexpected places.

VIDMER

Some come out of the college, of course, and others work their way up from the sandlots, through the bushes and into the higher brackets of the minor loops by a natural process before they are discovered. But during the last week, as seven major league squads have passed through this port of call, I have found three players who are receiving their major league tryouts this spring more or less by accident.

Theres a pitcher with the Detroit Tigers, for instance, named Jephet Lynn. He hails from Texas and during the course of his young life he has done a great many things of varying nature. He has been a cowhand on a ranch, a rodeo rider, a professional boxer, a burlesque wrestler and a ball player. He is ambidextrous and carries a pocketful of strange charms with him wherever he goes, believing that luck plays a large part in any one's existence and believing also that these assorted charms bring him luck.

Perhaps it is due to the luck of them, at that, that he is getting a big league trial this spring. It seems the Detroit Tigers came to the conclusion that they needed left-handed pitchers in order to round out their staff and, looking over the records of last season, they saw that one Jephet Lynn, of the American Association, had made quite a mark. So they bought him.

But when he reported for duty he started throwing right-handed, not left.

"I thought you were a left-handed pitcher," one of the club officials, more embarrassed than shocked, said.

"Well, I do a lot of things left-handed," Jephet explained, "but I also do a lot of things right-handed. Pitchin's one of 'em."

So Jephet Lynn is getting his chance through a mistake. On the other hand, there's chino Hernandez, a young Cuban who was scouted, recommended and brought into the Cardinals' camp by a yachtsman.

Harrison J. Weaver, it might be explained, wasn't always a yachtsman. And as a matter of fact, he is only a part-time yachtsman even now. For some years he has been the trainer of the St. Louis club and he still spends his summers rubbing liniment on ailing arms and kneading the kinks out of leg muscles.

Yachtsman Finds Busboy

However, during the off-season, he dons white flannels and a yachting cap and cruises about the Southern waters as his fancy desires. Last winter he was cruising in the waters off Key West, and, wherever he put into port, his association with the St. Louis

Washington Gas Light Net Tops Year Ago

$251,566 Profit in February Against $202,596 in 1937

The February report of the Washington Gas Light Co., filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission, shows net operating revenues of $906,688 compared with $826,568 for February a year ago, an increase of $80,120, as a result of the larger gas sales, in spite of the warmer weather in February this year. Operating expenses amounted to $588,929, an increase of $30,923 principally as a result of the cost of producing and handling the greater volume of gas.

These figures result in net operating revenues of $317,759 compared with $268,562 in February, 1938. Non-operating revenues decreased $9,986. Interest and amortization amounted to $71,541 this February compared with $81,303, a decrease effected by the bond refinancing last November.

The result of the month's opertaion was a net income of $251,566 compared with $202,596, or $48,970 better than in the same month a year ago. February earnings bring the net income for the first three months to $485,281 compared with $370,797 for the same period last year.

Gas sales for the month of February were 1,354,336 Mcf or 141,844 Mcf more than in February a year ago. Compared with the same date last year, the 154,673 meters in service on February 28, 1939, represented a gain of 4,815.

A. I. B. Bowlers

The annual bowling tournament of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, was held last Saturday afternoon at the Arcade Bowling Alleys. Kenneth Birgfeld, of the American Security & Trust Co., won the top honors in the singles; William J. Arthur, American Security & Trust Co., won second place; Samuel Redman, Lincoln National Bank, was third.

The doubles event was won by William Yeatman and Joseph Berry, both of the Washington Loan & Trust Co. James Bridges, Riggs National Bank, and James Bruen, W. B. Hibbs & Co., were second, and William Grimes and Bruce Frantz, of American Security & Trust Co., third.

The women's event in the bowling tournament was won by Helen Ray Orme, Washington Loan & Trust Co., with Emma Baltrush, American Security & Trust Co., second. Arrangements for the tournament were handled by Stephen O. Porter, Riggs National Bank, chairman of the athletic committee.

Building Ass'n. Convention

Robert E. Buckley, president of the National Permanent Building Association and F. Willson Camp, secretary of the District Building Association, were elected delegates to the forthcoming convention of the Southeastern group, United States Building and Loan League to be held in Charleston, S. C., April 28-29. The appointments were made yesterday at the monthly meeting of the D. C. Building and Loan League, held at the Raleigh Hotel. Arthur G. Bishop, president of Perpetual Building, and William N. Payne, jr., president of the Eastern Building Association were named as alternates.

Daily Oil Output Off 5,819 Barrels

Tulsa, March 28 (AP).—A decrease of 5,819 barrels daily in the production of oil in the United States brought the output down to 3,384,049 barrels daily average during the week ended March 25, the Oil and Gas Journal said today.

Oklahoma increased 4,975 barrels daily to average 451,450. East Texas was unchanged to 372,850 and the State of Texas increased 5,196 to 1,324,890. Louisiana's production declined to 1,127 barrels daily to 261,899. California was down 16,250 to 624,500 and Kansas increased 5,575 to 166,750.

Eastern states including Illinois and Michigan declined 5,223 barrels daily to 319,050 while the Rocky Mountain section increased 1,150 to 67,790 barrels.

Railroads Net 1.26% in February

The Association of American Railroads reported that Class 1 railroads had a net railway operating income of $18,590,734 in February compared with a deficit of $1,909,133 in February, 1938, and a net of $58,367,529 in February, 1930.

The association said the February, 1939, return was at an annual rate of return of 1.26 per cent on property investment. For the first two months of 1939 Class 1 railroads had a net operating income of $51,491,453, which was at an annual rate return of 1.81 per cent.

Edward J. Engel Is New President Of Santa Fe Road

New York, March 28 (AP).—Edward J. Engel, 64-year-old executive vice president, was elected president of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe System today, succeeding the late Samuel T. Bledsoe.

In his new position, Engel—who also was named chairman of the executive committee—will direct the operations of the longest railroad in the United States. It operates 13,500 miles of road.

Engel has been associated with the Santa Fe for nearly 39 years, entering the service of the company as a stenographer in the president's office in 1900.

His advancement started three years later with an appointment as chief clerk in the president's office. After seven years' service in that capacity, he became assistant to the late President E. P. Ripley. He was made a vice president during the World War (July, 1918), and in April, 1935, he became executive vice president under Bledsoe.

B. & O. Carloadings Highest Since Nov. 1938

Baltimore, March 28.—Baltimore & Ohio carloadings for the week ended March 25, totaled 42,601, the highest number of loadings since the week ended November 5, 1938, when the total was 43,023.

Last week's total was an increase of 5,836 carloads over the corresponding week of last year and it also exceeded by 1,103 cars the total for the previous week of this year.

As may be noted on the table, only three major industries bettered their incomes in 1938. In the case of the aircraft industry, 1938 net was $18,510,000, against $9,874,000 in 1937, an increase of 87 per cent.

Food products except meat also improved their earnings in 1938, although the gain was far less than that of the airplane companies. Net in 1938 was $122,984,000, against $108,224,000 in 1937, an increase of 13 per cent.

Shipping and shipbuilding corporations also turned in a better record last year, although composite earnings in both years were trifling in relation to the size of the industry. Earnings in 1938 totaled $471,000 against $341,000 the preceding year, a gain of 38 per cent.

U. S. Treasury Receipts

The position of the Treasury March 25: Receipts, $10,862,021.70; expenditures, $21,206,902.34; net balance, $3,431,929,438.77, including $2,776,526,291.70 working balance; customs receipts for the month, $24,398,080.42.

Turmoil in Europe Dominates Market Rally in Closing Hour Checks Decline Six Treasury Bonds Reach New Highs

New York, March 28.—Europe again was preeminent in today's news and from Wall Street's point of view this meant it was an unsatisfactory day. In fields of political science the isolationists and internationalists can continue their scholastic arguments but certainly in the field of finance there is no such thing as being isolated.

For when Madrid falls to Franco and there are reports that border patrols of the Slovaks and Hungarians are fighting and the boundary line negotiations between the two groups have been broken off, and the German foreign office issues a warning to Poland not to depart from her policy of independence there is an immediate reflection in every financial capital of the world. To the investor who is trying to maintain his savings, such matters have come to be of more moment than the business conditions within his own country and the prospects of the company in which he has purchased securities.

Consequently prices were lower today. The stock list opened off and the bulk of the day's trading was crowded into the first hour. At the close of this hour the leaders were down 1 to 3 points. There were two attempts to bring about a rally but neither could gain a determined public following. Prices were hovering near their best when the gong rang but the composite average showed a net decline of 0.59 point.

The manufacturing stocks contained in the above average went to a new low for the year, dropping below the previous bottom established on January 26. A new low also was established by the average of the equipments and the average for the entire market is only slightly more than a point away from the low of January 26. Trading continued to be dull, only 676,710 shares changing hands.

Wall Street Blue

The Street is discouraged both by the slack business and the steady, although moderate, heaviness of prices. The list has been holding in a comparatively narrow range and while low, it has not yet broken through the last resistance point made on March 22, nor has it gone to a new low for 1939. There is the normal wide difference of opinion in investment circles—bearish forces seeing nothing in the foreign situation to restore confidence, being skeptical of any talk of business appeasement issuing from Washington, and being discouraged by the high taxes placed on business and the lack of convincing effort to bring the Nation's finances into order.

The more optimistic forces feel there is no danger of a serious bear market because there is little liquidation to be accommodated, there is extreme care in credit, inventories are low, the current rate of consumption should hold production near present levels and business has everything it needs with the exception of confidence to go ahead.

There were a number of declines of a point among the leaders today but the majority were of fractional dimensions. Chrysler was the most active stock and closed off 1½, while steel was down a point and Bethlehem was off 1⅜. Fractional declines were scored by rubber, motor, Central and Anaconda. Off a point or more were smelting, Atchison, duPont, Harvester, Sears and Union Pacific.

Prime Bonds Firm

Best grade investment bonds remained firm today, but the speculative sections of the listed market showed the same uneasiness that afflicted the equities market. United States Treasury obligations continued their impressive advance, with six issues at fresh highs. The tone of the speculative division was weak, with some bonds sharply lower. Italian issues led the foreign department downward, on the apparent basis of the French reluctance to make any concessions of territory to Premier Mussolini. Turnover in all issues was $5,920,000.

Scattered buying of intermediate and long dated Treasury bonds was in evidence. Institutions plainly were buying for yield, and gains ranging to 11/32 point resulted in the issues in demand. Short-dated bonds were easy, largely as a matter of the approach of maturities. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were dull. One of the telephone 3¼ per cent debenture issues attained a new high, while most utility, rail and industrial bonds of best classifications remained at previous highs.

Railroad bonds that have a speculative aspect turned soft, with many losses of 1 to 2 points registered. The better grade bonds, such as New York Central and Southern Pacific issues, were easiest. Borderline and default rails were marked a little lower. Holding company and convertible issues fell with their related equities. Local tractions were down, and even international telephone bonds fell, despite the virtual ending of the Spanish civil war.

Wheat Edges Higher After Nervous Day

Foreign Markets Rise Mills Are Buyers Corn Prices Dip

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 28.—After fluctuating nervously most of the session, wheat prices finally took a definite upward course today and closed with small fractional gains.

Strength in foreign markets, reports of heavy cash wheat buying at Kansas City yesterday, lifting of hedges in connection with commercial trade, including subsidized exports, and the unsettled European political situation were mild bullish factors.

Widespread moisture in the winter wheat belt and forecast of more had a price depressing effect but this was offset by moderate buying, presumably from mill and elevator sources. Prices never fell more than ¼ cent below the previous close and most of the day were unchanged. Prospect of cold weather in the Southwest, with a hard freeze predicted for Oklahoma, aroused some concern but crop experts said it was doubtful that serious damage, if any, would be inflicted to growing wheat as the jointing stage has not been reached.

Wheat closed ⅛-⅜ higher than yesterday, May and July, 67⅞@67¾; corn unchanged to ¼ lower, May, 47¾@47⅝; July, 49⅜; oats unchanged to ⅛ off; rye unchanged to ¼ higher; lard 5 to 7 higher.

Philadelphia, March 28 (AP).—The Norfolk & Western Railway Co. today declared a quarterly dividend of $1.00 a share on the adjustment preferred stock, payable May 19 to stockholders of record April 29.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, March 28 (AP) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Trading was very slow on the Boston wool market today. A few sales reported were of small volume for piecing out purposes. Prices on these sales were about steady compared with prices realized for similar wools last week to cover immediate requirements.

Cotton Steady Against Selling

New York, March 28 (AP).—The cotton futures market gave a good account of itself today when the price structure weathered the heaviest liquidation in days. Opening losses of 3 to 6 points were converted into small gains as the market ended at the top levels for the day, unchanged to 3 points lower.

Bombay brokers were heavy sellers in May, June and October, while brokers who usually operate for Southern mill account were active sellers of October and December.

Cottonseed oil futures came out of a morning's sinking spell today to close 2 to 4 points higher on sales of 298 lots. Liquidation appeared to have run its course around the 6.60 level for May, when trade buying, inquiry for foreign account and demand from packer interests appeared. May closed 6.68@; July, 6.48@; September, 6.96; October, 6.97.

The Southeast and Valley quoted crude oil at 5½ cents bid and Texas, 5½ to 5⅝ bid. Trade reports indicated a few tank cars of loose lard were purchased by soapers yesterday in the East.

32 Amateurs Seek Ring Titles

Individual, Team Titles Are on Line

Program at Turner's Tonight Promises Plenty of Action; Morris in Feature Championship hopes of 32 muscular, well conditioned youngsters will be fulfilled or frustrated tonight at Turner's Arena, where the month-long fistic fiesta fostered by the District A. A. U. comes to an end. At stake are 16 individual championships and two team titles, and the forecast indicates squalls in all directions.

It is a well-balanced, colorful card that will be set before the public. The gladiators are of all shapes, weights and temperament. There are boxers, sluggers and boys with a pleasing mixture of both. And there will be sufficient styles to go around this spring and next, too.

Mancinis in Grudge Bout

Headlining the program is a grudge bout between the Mancini brothers, Johnny and Nick, who aspire to the novice 147-pound title, and represent Brother Pete's Athletic Club. What possibly would have been an anemic sparring exhibition apparently has been whipped up into a scorching duel for the crown for both vow they'll win by a knockout. Brother Pete, who seconds the fighters sporting his colors, will be strictly neutral, and has obtained outside men to work in the corners.

Pete's has a good chance of taking the laurels in the novice class, but must win all three of its bouts to overcome the favored Merrick Club forces. And the Southwest boys have their tasks cut out for them. Bobby Bradigan, 126-pounder, faces one of the smartest, toughest hombres in the tournament in Bernie Morris, of the Georgetown Boys Club; and Clarence Irwin, heavyweight, meets a fine prospect in Norman Pemberton, of the rival Merrick organization.

Battle for Senior Title

Fort Myer and the National Guard are battling it out for the senior title, with the edge toward the Cavalrymen. Every bout in the upper bracket is a feature attraction, with the heavyweight joust between Leon Miller, of Fort Myer, and Chester Morris, unattached, topping the lists. This promises to be the amateur counterpart of the Dempsey-Firpo brawl, and probably will not last much longer than that epic bit of prize-ring work, for both boys swing from the heels.

Other outs that capture the patrons' fancy are Willie Tapp vs. George, at 118 pounds; Bob Williams vs. Billy Kekeris, 147 pounds; Bill Fexchak vs. Whitey France, 145 naunds, and Essex Madron vs. Grover Davis, 112 pounds. If there are any dull moments in these engagements it will be between rounds.

Player Injured as Little Hoyas Lose

Georgetown Prep baseball team lost its second straight game of the season yesterday on the Garrett Park diamond, 9-4, to the forces of Bethesda-Chevy Chase, but the main loss to the Little Hoyas was that of Tom Ferry, regular outfielder. Ferry was carried from the field in the first inning, a slide into second base having resulted in a broken ankle. He probably won't get back in the line-up the rest of the season.

York helped the Detroit Tigers to a handy 6-to-2 Grapefruit victory today over the Cincinnati Reds.

Browns Defeat Phils for 8th Time

New Braunfels, Tex., March 28 (AP). The Browns beat the Phillies for the eighth straight time today, scoring three runs in the sixth, to win, 6 to 5.

A single by Van Atta, Almada's homer, Hughes' single and Grace's two-bagger accounted for the trio of tallies.

The Phils led, 4 to 3, going into the sixth by bunching four hits, including a four-bagger by Mueller, for three runs in the third.

John Marshall Wins Diving Title Here

John Marshall, a member of the Metropolitan Police Force, belied his inherited nickname of "Flatfoot" last night as he won the A. A. U. low-board diving title over the defending champion, Bill Tarbett, before a large crowd at the Shoreham Venetian Pool.

Marshall compiled a total 8 points better than that of the runner-up, Tarbett, as he defeated a field including six of the city's outstanding performers.

With only two other entries competing, diminutive Ann Armson easily retained her women's crown, defeating Kathleen Murphy and Gretchen McGowan.

A new star was uncovered in 16-year-old Eleanor Henderson, of Marjorie Webster School, who annexed the novice 50-yard free style race in 30 4/10 seconds. Second was Betty Ott, and third, Lucille Kirsch.

Gloria Eisele, aged 12, of Ambassador, won the 50-yard free style event for girls under 13. Shoreham's Aldona Funk was second, and her little sister, Virginia, trailed her.

Army Reports Results in Typhoid Fight

Dr. Siler Receives Kober Honorarium For Vaccine Research

Encouraging results in the development of vaccine against typhoid fever at the Army Medical Center were reported last night by Col. Joseph F. Siler, director of the Army Medical School, when he delivered the Kober lecture at Georgetown University.

"I am confident," he said, "that within the next three years they (his research associates) will be able to state that the most practical and most effective procedure to follow in immunizing against typhoid fever will be to immunize initially with three doses of vaccine and follow this up every two to three years with a single, small dose administered intracutaneously, for not to exceed three reimmunizations."

Achievements Summarized

Summarizing the anti-typhoid achievements of the Army since it launched a series of experiments relating to different strains of the disense organism four and one-half years ago, Col. Siler pointed out:

1. Vaccines prepared with avirulent, or practically harmless, strains of the typhoid organism confer far less immunity than "shots" made from the potent strain.

2. The typhoid rate has dropped sharply among enrollees in the Civilian Conservation Corps, who are vaccinated routinely.

3. By the mouse-protection test, it has been determined that antibodies produced in the blood following vaccination gradually decline but even two years after inoculation two individuals out of three are still well protected.

4. Evidence indicates that if immunization is repeated two or three times most individuals build up high concentrations of protective substances in their blood and this high level is maintained for indefinite periods of time.

Mechanism Stimulated

5. There are indications that, in practicing reimmunization, the body's defense mechanism may be stimulated by administration of a single small dose of vaccine (1 cubic centimeter). If it is found that the reaction is permanent, instead of transitory, it will be possible to abandon the present practice of administering three large doses.

The studies are being continued, said Col. Siler, by Lieut. Col. G. C. Dunham, Maj. Don Longfellow, Technical Sergt. George F. Luippold and other members of the Army Medical School technical staff.

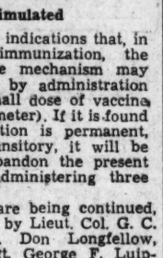
Siler Receives Honorarium

An honorarium of $500 goes with the lectureship, under terms of the Kober Foundation, and a check for that amount was presented last night to Col. Siler by the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University. The latter paid a tribute to the memory of Dr. George M. Kober, who served as dean of the medical school 40 years.

Col. Eugene R. Whitmore, professor of pathology at Georgetown, presided over the commemorative exercises.

George Nowell, River Captain, Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Capt. George H. Nowell, 63, captain of the steamboat Northland of the Norfolk and Washington Steamboat Co., will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow in the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, Silver Spring, with burial in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.



NOWELL

Capt. Nowell died Monday night in Providence Hospital. A lifelong resident of this city, he was a son of the late Capt. William D. Nowell, who also served as captain for the steamboat company.

In his 37 years with the company, Capt. Nowell traveled more than 2,000,000 miles on the Potomac, according to a company official. He had been a captain about 24 years.

He was a member of the B. P. O. E. and lived at 829 Crittenden street northwest. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eva S. Nowell; three sons, George H. Nowell, jr., Woodside, Md.; William F. and Henry S. Nowell, and a sister, Mrs. W. W. Riley, of this city.

Nephew Slain, Wife Wounded; Virginian Jailed

Martinsville, Va., March 28 (AP).—Sheriff J. M. Davis of Henry County said Luther Hairfield, 40, a farmer and carpenter, was charged with wounding his estranged wife and with killing her nephew, Lewis Hopkins, 21, last night. Hairfield was held in the county jail and denied bond.

The sheriff declared that Hopkins and Mrs. Hairfield were shot at Hairfield's service station as they sat in a car. Mrs. Hairfield, who was slightly wounded in the face, jumped from the automobile and ran to a nearby house, but Hopkins managed to drive four miles to a Martinsville physician. He died at 5 a. m. today.

Sheriff Davis said the Hairfields had been estranged for the past four months.

Slayer Confesses After 20 Years

Philadelphia, March 28 (AP).—After a 20-year hunt, the law caught up with Vincent Abruzzo, 52, today, and he pleaded guilty to slaying his wife, Antonia, and his brother, Antonio.

Abruzzo fled to Italy in 1919 after killing the woman, and returned ten years later, shooting the brother then. Again Abruzzo fled.

Va. Milk Hearing Set in Staunton

Richmond, Va., March 28 (AP).—The State Milk Commission said today the corporation courtroom in the Staunton Courthouse had been selected as the place for a hearing to be conducted April 3 on the question of including the Grottoes area in the Staunton-Waynesboro supervised milk market.

The commission said a previous announcement that the hearing was called at the request of the Staunton-Waynesboro Milk Board was in error and that the State commission called the hearing of its own volition.

Anderson Row To Reach Congress Today

Resolution to Demand Probe of School Board's Ban of Colored Singer

The House of Representatives today will receive a resolution demanding complete investigation of the District school board's denial of Central High auditorium for a concert by Marian Anderson, it was announced last night.

Drafted by Representative McGranery (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, the resolution orders the board to lay before Congress all its records in the Anderson case and a full account of previous "community use" of District schools after study hours.

"Congress doesn't have anything to say about the D. A. R., of course," McGranery said last night, "but I'm going to say for myself that the ancestors of the D. A. R. earned a niche in history for themselves, and it's about time the daughters accomplished something for democracy."

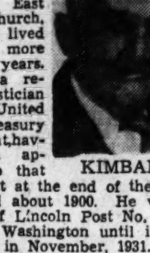
Meanwhile it was indicated at Central High School that "no martyrs will be made" as a result of leakage of a student-written editorial welcoming Miss Anderson to the school auditorium, deleted by faculty members from the March 2 issue of the Central Bulletin.

Written by Leon Smith, 17-year-old senior, the article came into the hands of Charles H. Houston, chairman of the Marian Anderson Citizens Committee, who read it Sunday before a mass meeting protesting the board's decision.

The censored editorial was obviously released "with intent to make trouble," school officials said, although expressing doubt that any stronger disciplinary action than a "reprimand" would follow.

Karl L. Kimball Dies; Veteran Of Civil War

Karl L. Kimball, 94, Union veteran of the Civil War, died yesterday at the home of his niece, Mrs. Laura T. Boldin, 6529 North Fairfax drive, Arlington, Va.



KIMBALL

He was one of the oldest residents of East Falls Church, having lived there for more than 80 years. He was a retired statistician of the United States Treasury Department, having been appointed to that department at the end of the war. He retired about 1900. He was a member of Lincoln Post No. 3, G. A. R., in Washington until it was disbanded in November, 1931. For many years he has been an active member of the Falls Church Presbyterian Church.

A son, E. A. Kimball, of East Falls Church, and a niece, Mrs. Boldin, survive.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. at Pearson's funeral home in Falls Church, conducted by the Rev. Alton B. Altfather, pastor of the Falls Church Presbyterian Church. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Besides his wife, Hattie Ball Burger, he leaves eight children, Mrs. Mary Wilcox, Mrs. Margaret Fox, of Washington; Herbert B. Burger, jr., of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Spencer Stewart, John Mottrom and Martha Ellen, 10, of Takoma Park.

Services will be held at 11 a. m., Friday, in the home, with the Rev. Reno S. Hart, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, officiating. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Auto Union Told To Purge Radicals

Cleveland, March 28 (AP).—The C. I. O. warned its affiliated United Automobile Workers Uunion today to purge its rank of "radicalism" or face disintegration.

Addressing a closed session of the C. I. O.-U. A. W. convention here, C. I. O. Vice Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman joined also in appealing for an end to factionalism within the auto union.

Both told 500 assembled delegates "subversive groups" were at work within the union, seeking its control.

George Yeomans Dies in New York

George D. Yeomans, son of the late Interstate Commerce Commissioner James D. Yeomans and brother of James H. Yeomans of Washington, died yesterday at his home in New York City. Services will be held there Thursday at 12:30 p. m. and burial will follow at Plymouth, Mass. Besides the brother, he leaves his wife, May, and three daughters.

500 Fertilizer Workers Strike

Portsmouth, Va., March 28 (AP). More than 500 colored workers at three fertilizer plants in the Portlock section of Norfolk County were called out on strike at noon today in protest to a reduction of 10 cents in their hourly wage.

The workers were called out by Fred W. Trotman, jr., colored, representative of the International Longshoremen's Association, Local No. 1517.

"FIRST IN FRIENDLINESS"

STOP Worrying
STOP Frowning
START Singing

Somebody is going to read this and say, "Hmp, the darn fool. Who wouldn't worry if they had all the bills and money trouble I have? How can I be cheerful?" But, mister, that's just the point. We want to help you with your troubles. We want to lend you some money so you, too, can sing and enjoy life. That's our business and, if we do say it ourselves, we handle it pretty well. We have helped any number of people in years gone by, and if you want assistance we're Johnny-on-the-spot.

YOU CAN BORROW ANY AMOUNT TO $300

Your car, signature or furniture is adequate security. All we ask is that you stop at our office and make application.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The business of waiting in ambush with a hand heavily loaded with aces and kings, vulgarly called "trap-passing," is a dangerous game which is costly even to experts.

While the spoils of penalty doubles are ever the aim of good players, avarice in this respect is often punished by leaving the would-be "sandbagger" quite comically holding his aces and kings in a passed-out hand.

The lying-in-wait game should be played only when no other course seems as profitable—when to bid must risk a bad penalty. If a player has a bid in his hand it is generally sound practice for him to make it immediately, for the bidding may jump so high that later he will find himself unable to do so.

A hand submitted by H. E. B. brings up the point. He questions whether the South player should overcall at once or not. He writes:

"At a recent duplicate against a fair field this hand was dealt to me, South with East, the dealer, bidding one spade. We were vulnerable and the opponents were not:

♠ K 10 3
♡ K Q J 10 9
◇ Q 4
♣ K 5 3

"I would like your opinion as to whether you consider a two-heart overcall a reasonably correct bid. A good player claims that no expert will take action with this hand, but will make a trap pass. It is my belief that if the hand is passed, you may be faced with taking action over a two-spade bid and in duplicate partials are important."

Most assuredly, H E B.'s contention is correct. This is no time for a "trap pass." South should take action at once, as later it may be costly. A two-heart overcall is the best bid on the hand.

Another bidding problem is presented by H. M. Z., who wishes to know if a double raise in a suit bid is forcing. This is the situation:

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	1 ◇	3 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass	Pass

"The question is whether an overcall of three clubs by West is forcing on East, and if East must bid again to give West a chance to show what he has in the second round."

While a double raise, strictly speaking, is not forcing, it is rarely if ever passed by the opening bidder unless he has made an extremely weak bid. Under normal circumstances he should make some reply.

Today's deal, contributed by D. L., shows how a home rubber bridge declarer saved his contract by refusing to cover the opening lead, which kept the opposite hand from winning and making a fatal return.

In describing the play D. L. says: "West opens the club ten; South refuses to cover in dummy playing small. East permits the ten to hold, and from that point no defense can stop five-odd. If East covers returns a heart the contract is set two tricks. South will lose two clubs, two hearts and a heart ruff."

East might be criticized for not overtaking his partner's trick, but his was not an easy decision, as he could not tell which hand had the singleton club, and if it were declarer, he feared his overtaking might be the one means of making the contract.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

NOTES from the hearing room where Senator Ellender is investigating the Civil Service: A gentleman stood on the sidelines, saying the most interesting personnel investigation would be one of the personnel in the WPA. "They have a personnel system all their own, and it's the Number 1 closed corporation," he said. "They are laying off the needy, on the grounds that Congress is slashing appropriations, but still can find funds to give administrative raises. They are laying off the very neediest cases on the lists and are making show-windows of these unfortunates in the effort to get more funds. But there's no use of trying to find out anything they're doing. It's a tight-mouthed business." . . . This investigation, taken lightly by some, is regarded with a fanatical seriousness by others. Ellender didn't have much crowd until a group of students—apparently out to witness the sights and hear the sounds of the Capitol—came in and filled up the room. But those who were there came with a motive—to get justice for themselves through the works of Senator Ellender. Once he said that his committee was there to stay until the Civil Service was repaired, and it was the cue for a loud machine gunning of applause from the parts of the audience who view the investigation fanatically. And Ellender actually is serious and conscientious in what he's doing. He didn't go about it in the manner of a man sponsoring a show, but rather as one who considers himself a member of Congress, where something really can be done for the employes. He constantly asked one or another of the Civil Service Commissioners what the Congress could do to help them reshape the personnel programs. He seemed deeply convinced that wrongs occu in the handling of the personnel, but his mind was open. Never did he intimate that the Federal service, generally, is a nest of chicanery. Of coure, it would have been to better ends if Ellender had grounded himself a little in the schemes of personnel management. But the schemes of personnel management are involved terribly. Ellender has been interested in the subject only a year, and that is not enough time for anyone to catch on. The upshot is that something can result from his hearing if the proper people in the service cooperate with Ellender. If these responsible individuals would show him exactly where Congress can act to the advantage of employes (and to the advantage of the Government, too) it is certain that Ellender will raise a big howl for these boons on the floor of the Senate. And any voice raised in the right direction is a desirable voice. What he needs in his investigation is some expert advice and direction. Given a proper "steer" he will rush things along with his terrific energy. The Civil Service Commission has a good machine in Ellender, if it will use him properly. The danger is that the committee, left to its own devices, will be side-tracked into a vaudeville show for the use of persons with only personal spleen for the airing. And this is bad, because a fine record could come from the hearing room, one to which the Congress might pay some attention.

EIGHTEEN-YEAR-OLDS, casting about for something, have a chance now at the scientific field, in the United States Weather Bureau. The C. S. C. is asking for junior observers in meteorology, at a starter of $1,440 a year. The top age limit is 35. Applicants must have completed a four-year high school course or have 14 units of high school study. Those not meeting this requirement, but seem otherwise to be qualified, will be given a mental test.

THE Federal Camp Council, which will operate the Federal employes' camp (what's the name?) in the Catoctins this summer—and in future summers if business is good—has about settled on a director, a New Yorker who has had 20 years' experience. They say he is a good man, and they think they have him in the bag. Incidentally, the council tried some time ago to get a name for the camp, but no one would submit one. Incidentally, if any public money has gone into the construction of the camp, they'd better get a good Democrat to name it. Not a Republican. No!

Bob Burns Says—

One day on the set over at the motion picture studio where I was workin' in "I'm From Missouri," I saw our director tell a girl she wouldn't do for a part in the picture unless she took off a few pounds. Now I know that girl had been workin' hard to get that part and it meant a lot to her, but the director was right, she was gettin' just a little too plump.

'Course back home the men in my family never objected to a little plumpness in a woman. But when my Uncle Fud married my Aunt Pudgy we really were a little bit surprised 'cause there certainly was a whole lot of Aunt Pudgy.

I got Uncle Fred aside just after the ceremony and I said, "Fud, why in the world did ja ever marry such a fat woman?"

And Uncle Fud says, "Robin, I did it because I was jealous and I wanted her all to myself. You know she's so big I just couldn't hug all of her from one side, and one night when I was courtin' her I went around to the other side and there was another fella huggin' her on that side."

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

An Unexpected Meeting

One never knows from day to day
What good or ill will come his way
—Peter Rabbit.

From the dear Old Briar-patch looking out on the Green Meadows, Peter Rabbit could see the nest of Harrier the Marsh Hawk. Probably he wouldn't have seen it had he not known just where it was located. He knew because he had watched the building of it. Now at a distance it appeared to be nothing more than a low mound of sticks and dry brown grass.

Peter kept away from the neighborhood of that nest in the daytime. While Harrier ar Mrs. Harrier were not in the habit of hunting full-grown rabbits it was just as well not to seem curious about their affairs. But he was curious. You know Peter's curiosity is very great and has been the cause of many of his difficulties in the past and beyond a doubt will get him into trouble in the future. I suppose people would say that he can't help it; that he is made that way.

So by day Peter gave that home of the Harriers a wide berth. But at night the situation was different. Mr. and Mrs. Harrier do not see in the dark like Hooty the Owl. They are birds of the day, not of the night. So after the Black Shadows had come out from the Purple Hills and crept all over the Green Meadows, so that one moving about was not likely to be seen save possibly by night-seeing eyes, Peter began to prowl about in the neighborhood of that nest.

He was very careful about it, ready to take to his long heels at the slightest suggestion of danger. First he circled that nest at a distance, every few hops sitting up to stare at it. Every night found him over there despite all that Mrs. Peter could say. He just had to go. Curiosity would give him no peace if he didn't. Curiosity is like that. Each time Peter went there he went a little nearer. He had many scares, but nothing came of them and his curiosity grew.

At last Peter was so close to that nest that he imagined that in the dark he could see Mrs. Harrier on it. He sat up and stared and stared.

Peter jumped. He jumped and turned. The grass moved, and out of a small path branching out from another small path appeared a small person with a very short tail. Peter's eyes opened wider, if that were possible.

"You are not Danny Meadow Mouse," declared Peter.

"I don't know, but you can't be Danny," persisted Peter.

"Why can't I?" squeaked the other.

"Because Danny was caught by one of those Hawks." Peter nodded toward the nest.

"Did you see him caught?" was the next question.

"No," confessed Peter, "but he must have been caught, or else he moved a long way off, and I don't believe that he did that. You see he and Nanny were living in almost the very place where that nest is. Of course they couldn't possibly live long with such Mouse hunters for close neighbors. It just couldn't be done."

This was greeted with a funny squeak of a laugh. "Just the same, Peter Rabbit, I'm Danny Meadow Mouse, and what is more Nanny Meadow Mouse is not far off. We haven't been caught and we didn't move away. We are living just where we were when those Marsh Hawks arrived and built their nest, and we intend to stay right there." Danny Meadow Mouse, for of course it was Danny, reached out and bit off a blade of tender new grass and began to chew it.

Peter still stared as if he were looking at something he knew couldn't be.

Rhodes Says He Put $100,000 Into Fidelity

Counsel Declares No Money Was Stolen by Anyone in Collapse

Fred B. Rhodes, former president of the closed Fidelity Building & Loan Association, was confronted in District court yesterday with a mass of ledgers and files upon which the Government bases its charge that he swore falsely to reports of the institution's financial condition.

Rhodes is accused of swearing to a report to the Comptroller of the Currency which stated the Fidelity's deposit liability to be $77,000 less than it actually was on June 30, 1935.

Assistant District Attorney Wilson told the jury sworn in before Justice Adkins that the records of certain accounts were juggled. Harry J. Miller, vice president and director of the association, testified that records of these accounts were found in Rhodes' desk in his law office months after his connection with the institution was severed.

The Fidelity closed with a loss of $700,000 to depositors. Rhodes has been tried twice for forgery. Both juries disagreed.

William E. Leahy and William E. Richardson are Rhodes' counsel. Leahy told the jury no money was stolen by anybody from the Fidelity and that Rhodes "dumped $100,000 of his own money" into the accounts in an effort to avert collapse. Leahy accused the comptroller's office of being prejudiced against the Fidelity and harassing its officials about technicalities.

Among witnesses for the Government yesterday was Cooper B. Rhodes, son of the defendant, who identified the alleged false report on which, as a notary, he had certified his father's signature.

Police Put Away Overcoats

The Metropolitan police are faithful subjects of Queen Spring. Precinct commanders were instructed yesterday to requisition all awnings necessary for their station houses during warm weather. Fall blouses, which are medium-weight serge coats, were designated as the regulation uniform instead of overcoats "until further notice."
